

Convention Win or Loss Changes with Viewpoint

Depending on what news reports were read or heard and depending on whom one talks to, the State Democratic convention was either a victory or defeat for the dominant Democratic Organization.

Comments range from "...the outcome...demonstrated that the Organization can still come through in a pinch, at least when ideological or personality factors divide the non-organization camp," (from the Washington Post) to "the impact...is that dramatic change in the posture of the Virginia party is coming," (from the Norfolk Virginia-Pilot).

Others were not so sure. "When the turmoil of battle had subsided, neither side had been routed..." (from the Newport News Daily Press).

While victory was claimed by Norfolk liberals despite the defeat of Joseph Fitzpatrick for the post of party chairman by a slim margin, others claimed that the Organization had beaten back the assault of all the forces that State Senator Henry Howell, Congressional nominee Fredrick Stant, U. S. Sen. William B. Spong, Jr. and gubernatorial hopeful William Battle could muster.

Rep. Watkins Abbott, long considered an Organization stalwart, will still continue to head the State Central committee, although inroads into the committee itself were made by the coalition of moderate and liberal forces.

The Organization's candidate for Democratic National Committee member Waldo Miles of Bristol withdrew from the race and State Sen. William Hopkins of Roanoke was elected by acclamation.

It was noted, however, that present committee member Sidney Kellam could have been elected had he chosen to reconsider his non-candidacy. He was reportedly urged to do so Saturday, but chose not to run. The Richmond delegation reportedly strongly favored Kellam.

The Organization backed Mrs. A. Stewart Bolling, Jr. of Portsmouth, who won handsily over her non-Organization opponent. The defeat of the unit rule was considered an Organization defeat, but the convention also bound the delegates to Gov. Mills Godwin as a "favorite son". The unit rule can also be enforced by the delegates if they choose to do so in caucus.

The Virginia Beach delegation to the state convention, while disputes of one kind or another were going on, was the picture of harmony and accord. All votes within the delegation were unanimous. The delegation supported Mrs. Bolling and rick, but a spokesman said no delegate ever mentioned this in the caucus although anyone had ample opportunity to do so.

Kellam, who remains Democratic National Committeeman through this fall's election also noted the harmony in the First District caucus. Kellam received a long standing ovation in that caucus when a resolution was passed commending him for his continuing work over the years for the Democratic party of Virginia the First District and Virginia Beach.

Kellam, in his role as committeeman will go to the national convention in Chicago as a delegate with a full vote.

Other Virginia Beach residents who will attend the convention as delegates or alternates from the First District or the state at-large include J. Hugo Madison, Mrs. Mary Moores, Robert Barco, and Mrs. Shirley Supak.

At the state convention other Virginia Beach residents served in various positions. Del. Kenneth Whitehurst, Jr. served on the resolutions committee; Frank W. Cox served on the permanent organization committee, and James R. Darden served as assistant Sgt. at Arms.

While many considered the state convention to be storm signals for the Organization, a large number of others believe the storm signals were for the forces lined up behind Battle and Spong and the forces lined up behind Howell, Fitzpatrick and Stant. The combined forces of both camps were only partially successful in Salem, but their expected split in the gubernatorial primary next year is expected to favor the Organization.

It was reported that several members of the Virginia Beach delegation had favored Fitzpat-

Report Recommends Center

City Planning Director Patrick Stanning presented copies of the cultural-convention center feasibility study to City Council Monday at its informal meeting. The report, prepared in booklet form, will be presented formally on Aug. 12.

After the report was discussed, Councilmen indicated they would like to study it completely before making any recommendations.

City Manager Roger Scott

pointed out to Council that "the burden is now on them" and that the report will generate a great deal of interest in construction of the proposed center as soon as possible.

Standing and his department made the study after Council requested it. Last winter a Council committee headed by Lawrence Marshall visited several southern cities and examined centers and stadiums of similar scope to those felt necessary for Virginia Beach. When the committee turned in its report it asked that the Planning Department study be made and then if a professional survey was considered necessary, it too should be made. The matter of the professional survey was not mentioned at the Monday meeting.

In the report Stanning pointed out the need for such a center, saying that much convention business is being missed in Virginia Beach because of the lack of such a facility.

Recommended in the report is a new building that would accommodate about 50,000 conventioners a year and bring in an estimated $130,000 in tax revenue to the city. The report calls for an arena to seat 12,000 to 14,000 persons, an exhibition hall with about 140,000 square feet of space and a small theatre-music hall, as well as about 3,500 parking spaces. Standing said about 50 acres would be needed.

The report also suggested that the present Dome, after careful study, was not feasible for expansion and that it possibly could be used for the Chamber of Commerce office, airlines counters an information center and travel center, among other uses.

Another area studied is at the old land fill sewage disposal area at Holly Road and Laskin Road but this area was found to be too small and would cost too much to fill and sink pilings. Standing suggested it be used as a children's zoo, aquarium and for a number of tennis courts.

A site on Shore Drive near Seashore State Park was found to be too far away from the resort area and too small. The land has been offered to the city by Norfolk developer David Levine.

The fourth site, and the one recommended by the report lies at the end of the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway and would be bounded by 24th Street and Parks Avenue. The city owns part of the land at present in the undeveloped area, which lies at the end of the 21st and 22nd Streets toll road corridor, soon to be rezoned and improved, and about several blocks from the oceanfront. Access by a number of roads is considered excellent.

Scott has asked that the recommended site be kept out of the press until the formal meeting because of land speculation but through a reporter's error, the item appeared in a Norfolk daily newspaper that evening.

Cost of the project was not discussed in the report, and Norfolk newspaper published that it would be $12 million and $15 million, "extremely high" by City officials.

Sam Scott, director of the present civic center, said that a similar facility was built in Monroe, La., for about $6 million. Scott visited the facility with the committee, and he said the committee was impressed with it.

Norfolk's new center, "Scope," is expected to cost about $30 million and will seat only about 1,000 people more in its arena. It does not have an exhibition hall nearly as large.

Cost of land, how to finance and whether to go ahead are now the prime questions facing Council. So far the cost to the city has been $400, for the report.

Meanwhile the city is reportedly ready to go ahead with a study of a proposed stadium, however now that Norfolk has deferred action on its stadium study, there is some hope that the two can be combined. Norfolk, in the past however, has been interested only in unilateral action. In addition there is some hope of combining all the studies through the efforts of the newly created Authority, although again Norfolk has shown no interest in doing so.

All's Quiet On Conflict For Now

It has been generally quiet on the conflict of interest front in Virginia Beach for the past week, since the last eruption.

Nothing much has occurred since Commonwealth Attorney Andre Evans wrote to Sidney S. Kellam asking the forfeiture of approximately $775,000 that he said was due the City because of conflict of interest. Evans noted in his letter that he was released to the Norfolk press the day before Kellam received it that he "was informed" that Kellam was a member of two Virginia Beach firms that had done business with the City while he was a member of City boards. Kellam resigned in June from the Civic Center and Ad Boards when the conflict question was raised but not clarified.

Evans noted in his letter that "approximate" amounts of money were due the City, but was not specific. He asked for a reply from Kellam within (See "Conflict," p. 2)

Could these be the shapes of things to come in Virginia Beach? The diagram is only meant to show functional relationship of the facilities recommended by the City Planning Commission to be within the proposed cultural-convention center. The other two drawings are only illustrations for the report but show the approximate scope of the building. The music hall-theatre could also be built separately.

Busy Council Adds Another Mon. Meet

City Council's first off-Monday informal meeting open to the press lasted three hours and was adjourned with a list of items still to come before the members. Another informal meeting has been set for next Monday since there is no regular Council meeting until Aug. 12.

Besides the surprise resignation of Councilman G. Dewey Simmons, Jr. and the presentation of the cultural-convention feasibility study, (See separate stories) a number of items were discussed by Council. No action can be taken in the informal meeting, but the matters were taken under advisement and will be presented at the next regular meeting.

The press was excluded from two matters, School Supt. E.E. Brickell and his financial assistant appeared before Council to discuss revisions in the present school operating budget. It was pointed out that the budget was drawn up by Brickell's predecessor, F.W. Cox, who retired March 1.

Brickell would not say whether additional funds were being asked, but only that revisions were called for. He added that the only reason he did not wish the matter made public was because he had not discussed it with the School Board and wished Council to be advised when he did so in August. At that time the recommendations and any Council action will become public, according to City Manager Roger Scott and Brickell. The other matter from which the press was excluded was discussion of appointments to the proposed City Personnel Board, expected to be created by ordinance at the next regular meeting. It is expected that additional names for consideration will again be discussed in private Monday.

The first item on the agenda concerned requests by Juvenile Court Judges Mary Speight and Philip Russo for higher salaries for probation officers and a request for more probation officers.

The department had requested additional personnel earlier this year and three new men were added to the present budget. The judges explained that the additional personnel would be used generally for an intake department, to screen all incoming cases. They added that about 75 per cent of all cases heard in court could be handled by that department.

It was pointed out that Virginia Beach salaries are in line with other cities in the area, but that they are also experiencing a great turnover. The starting salary is now $5,880. (See "Council," p. 2)

Body Found In Creek

A body, identified as that of Matthew W. Coffigan, Jr., was discovered Tuesday evening by a police boat searching the waters of Long Creek. Coffigan, 33, had been the subject of a search since Sunday night when he reportedly "went for a swim to cool off" after returning from a fishing trip with Jerry Drake and Clifton Haynes, both of First Colonial Road.

Police investigators quoted Haynes with saying Coffigan dove into the water, resurfaced, then vanished beneath the surface. According to Haynes, Coffigan went for the swim, as he and Drake were beaching the 10-foot boat the triused during the day.

The search for Coffigan, of Hawaiian Drive, began Sunday night and continued throughout Tuesday involving Virginia Beach police, members of the Ocean Park Volunteer Fire and Rescue Department, the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad, divers from Seal Team 2 from the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base, and divers from the Virginia Beach police department.

Strong currents in the Long Creek channel near Great Neck Road hampered divers in their underwater search, and heavy accumulation of underwater logs hindered efforts to drag the region. Coffigan's body was discovered floating in Long Creek when it came to the surface Tuesday evening.

Zoning to Occupy City Council

City Council faces another long zoning docket at its next regular meeting on Aug. 12 at City Hall besides all its other considerations.

There are 29 items on the docket, already acted on by the City Planning Commission. Originally there were 35 items on the commission's docket, but six were deferred.

As usual, rezoning and use permits for the building of apartments and townhouses lead the list of matters to be discussed. Up for approval are 374 apartment units and 924 townhouses for a total of an additional 1,098 living units for Virginia Beach. The Planning Commission is recommending approval of an application of Lynnhaven Building Supply Corp. for rezoning land south of Wolfensare Road near Regency Drive for 164 townhouses. Opposition by nearby residents was generally overcome when provisions were made allowing no apartments or recreation on or facing Wolfensare Road. The Parks and Recreation Commission had indicated its support of a playground on Wolfensare Road.

Also recommended for approval is an application of Herbert L. Kramer for rezoning and use permits to build 460 townhouses at Newtown and Baker Roads, as well as an application by Kramer and others to excavate a 16-acre lake in the same area for the proposed subdivision of Lake Richard. Another application of the Lynnhaven Corp. for 300 townhouses on South Newtown Road near Pontiac Road will also come before the Council with the recommendation of approval by the commission.

An application of Bernard and Albert Kroil and Ruth Cohen for rezoning and use permits for 1,000 apartments at Holland and Lynnhaven Road was whittled down by the commission, which is recommending to Council that only 350 units be approved at present on the western portion of the property.

The application of C.M. Morgan for a use permit on Americus Avenue in Seateak, with the recommendation of approval from the commission, will also come before Council for 24 additional apartments.

In addition to living units, Council will hear a number of other applications that already carry the recommendation of approval of the commission members. They include an application by Sun Oil Co. for a new service station at Stratford Road and Shore Drive; an application of the SPCA for re-zoning and permission to build a new shelter on Oceana Blvd. (which is already under construction); an application of Jetta Smith for a use permit to operate a lodge on Providence Road near Marlton Drive; an application of Loyce Anne Partridge for a use permit for a dancing school on Great Neck Road in the proposed London Bridge Shopping Center; an application of Tidewater Used Auto Parts, Inc. to construct a billboard at Oceana and Southern Bvds.; and an application of Judy Lowe Miller to operate a parking lot on 23rd Street near Pacific Avenue in conjunction with a restaurant under construction nearby on which a deferred application will be heard.

Council is also expected to hear arguments for zoning matters in which the planners have recommended denial. They include an application of G.E. Wetherington & Sons for rezoning for an auto servicing garage on Virginia Beach Blvd. near Toy Avenue; an application of Time Giant for a new service store rezoning at Witchwood and Bonney Roads; seven separate applications of the Doorman Corp. for rezoning to Residence Duplex on

Five Mentioned To Fill Vacancy

The City Council seat vacated Monday by Lynnhaven Borough representative G. Dewey Simmons, Jr. was barely being before at least five names were being mentioned prominently to fill it.

The Simmons resignation due to health and financial reasons came as a complete surprise when he arose in the middle of the informal meeting of Council and announced his decision.

"There comes a time in a man's life when he must put things in perspective," said Simmons, who also noted that he had missed a number of meetings recently because of health problems.

He said that he had a severe arthritic condition that was aggravated by tension, and that his service on Council during the past two years had imposed a financial burden on him.

Several Councilmen said they knew he was considering resigning but were not aware that he actually would Monday. Simmons said he made up his mind while on his way to the meeting.

Council could only accept the resignation informally and present it at the next regular meeting, where a resolution commending Simmons for his work on Council will also be read.

Filling the vacancy is now up to Council, and that could prove to be a difficult decision.

Within hours after Simmons resigned, insurance man J. Hugh Barnes, Jr. began seeking support for the post. Barnes, now considered an Organization supporter, ran as independent candidate for Sheriff in 1955 and was defeated. He also noted that he has worked for both sides of the Democratic party in Virginia Beach in the past.

The name of attorney Owen Pickett, chairman of the city Democratic committee and unsuccessful candidate for Commonwealth attorney last year, was also mentioned immediately.

Pickett removed himself from the race Tuesday. He said, "There is no need beating around the bush, I am not a candidate."

Another name mentioned almost immediately was attorney Richard Guy, also considered an Organization supporter. Although Guy would not make his intentions known, he expressed an interest in the job. Recently, however, Guy made a speech recommending that Councilmen be elected entirely at-large in the future. Although a revision in the City Charter is needed to make this change along with approval of the Virginia General Assembly, Guy's remarks may have hurt his chances of the appointment, especially where the present Councilmen from the rural boroughs are concerned.

Simmons

In addition, the name of Reid Ervin has also been mentioned. Ervin was unsuccessful in the 1966 councilmatic Democratic primary against Simmons for the same seat. Ervin, outspoken Organization opponent and officer of the anti Good Government Association, declined comment on the possible appointment, and said he would not campaign for it. Petitions, however, were reportedly circulating in Ervin's favor.

Tuesday afternoon, a group of businessmen, who asked to remain anonymous, suggested the name of Richard Welton of Smith & Welton. Welton lives in Lynnhaven Borough, but the bulk of his business is in Norfolk.

Several Councilmen, contacted separately, indicated they want to look at all the names suggested and a few more besides before making any decision. They indicated they wish to find a man acceptable to the entire Council.

No appointment is expected to be forthcoming at least until after the regular Council meeting on Aug. 12.

Duckworth Advises City to 'Think Big'

Tidewater Virginia Development Council head W. Fred Duckworth called for the Virginia Beach Industrial Authority to issue $1 million in bonds for the establishment of an industrial park in the area.

The establishment of such an area of no less than 50 acres, is comparatively simple under Public Law 90-364 recently passed by Congress and signed by President Johnson.

"It enables us to finance a plant up to $1-million by the issuance of revenue bonds by our port and industrial authorities," Duckworth told a meeting of the Virginia Beach Rotary Club and a number of guests that included City Manager Roger Scott and VBI chairman Frank Kellam.

He continued, "these bonds may also be issued by the various port and industrial commissions and authorities for the purpose of purchasing and development of industrial parks. We would certainly hope that the good people of Virginia Beach and their commission would seriously consider at once the issuance of $1 million worth of these bonds for the establishment of a first class industrial park."

Duckworth mentioned the availability of the 195-acre area that the Penn-Central Railroad owns at Little Creek. He also mentioned that water and sewerage could be gotten from nearby Norfolk connections.

Art Show Set in Nov.

The fifth annual Ft. Eustis Art Show, now one of the major art presentations of the Tidewater area, will be held Nov. 1-11 at the installation service club.

Brochures were mailed this week to Tidewater artists and former participants in the exhibition. Any artists wishing to enter work in this year's show who have not received a brochure are asked to contact Miss Billie Sly.

Prize money of $1300 in purchase awards is being offered to winners in oil, watercolor, mixed media and drawings in both general subjects and military categories.

Leroy "Mac" McFarland in "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" at Wedgewood Theatre, Williamsburg. The comedy will continue every Tuesday through Saturday until August 24 with buffet dinner at 7 p.m., curtain at 8:30. Matinees August 4, 10 and 18.

Company Tries Hard In Outdated Comedy

Each summer Wedgewood Theatre in Toano presents one large cast production designed as a showcase for its apprentices. In the past there have been musicals to fill the bill or a family type comedy. This year's play is the old and tried, tried and true, not very believable family comedy "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay."

The Wedgewood company moves well through the little action, shouting, screaming and emoting as much as they dare in valiant attempts to present a sparkling and scintillating comedy. Although their efforts the play itself just isn't that good anymore. What was funny in this period piece about 1923 comes off rather unfunny today, and the wordy scenes which try to cram too much into one play only serve to make the play about 20 to 30 minutes too long.

The Jean Kerr "comedy escape" (so the program tells us) is based on a book by Cornelia Otis Skinner and Emily Kimbrough, which is based on a supposedly true story of a European crossing and tour by the two girls when they were rising sophomores at Bryn Mawr.

They do everything wrong. They drive a steward almost wacky with their trunks. They attempt to act so mature that they present a bigger-than-life picture of two 19-year olds trying to act grown-up. One is obsessed with the fact that the boat is going to sink. The other gets a peculiar case of measles and almost causes a French quarantine. They meet two Harvard medical students during their Atlantic crossing and make the most of it in their own teenaged way. Cornelia wants to act and does so constantly. Emily wants to dance and practices often. Their parents are understandably worried about two girls making the trip alone and so take necessary precautions which provide the only truly funny moments in the show.

The cast is a large one, and each does a fine job individually. We would quarrel with some of the large characterizations obviously given by director Paul Iddings, because the production often left the realm of comedy and nosedived deeply into unbecoming slapstick. Sherri Reid, as Cornelia, does a workmanlike job and proves once and for all she has acting ability heretofore unseen. She plays the many-faceted Cornelia believably, for the most part, with each facet totally different and totally entertaining.

Frances Bailey, as Emily, plays the companion too young. Her flopping around and shrieking are really more like a 14-year old, even a 1920 13-year old. But she holds up her end of the twosome well enough to keep the stage from being lopsided.

Ruby Brown does his usual fine job in the small role of Otis Skinner and makes the most of the comedy lines and action in the play. Mrs. Skinner, portrayed by J. Mackie, was too young for the role, and while she handled the befuddled, emotional mother role all right was a bit much with all her Tiny Timptoeing, although probably directed that way.

As the two Harvard boys, Bruce Walker and Larry Glaston prove to be welcomed relief from the intensity of the girls. But the half-biting, slow-witted character portrayed by Glaston must have had difficulty getting into Harvard medical school. And his accent needs to be settled...south Alabama or south Massachusetts.

Fine cameo performances are turned in by Bob Hutchinson as the put upon steward, Jane Matthews and Billie Gagne as the shipboard companions (but Miss Gagne need not bend that far all the time to slapstick her role), Debbie Legum as the French maid, Susan Firkser as her mother, Ron Telford as the French halm acting teacher (but sometimes hard to understand in falsetto), and Buzz Waple as the window cleaner. He also played another small role.

Others in the cast include Cornelia Jones, Claudine Iddings in very minor roles, and special mention must go to the "Admiral", Leroy McFarland, for his very funny, lecherous characterization.

This play is done often in high schools and is a good high school play. It is perhaps even a good comedy for those who have never seen it. The opening night audience seemed to enjoy it and laughed a lot. But it is not the best family type comedy around and we wish Wedgewood had picked another.

Radio Club Ends Class Tuesday, July 30, 1968 at the club station located at 217 S. London Bridge Road. Classes start at 7:30 p.m. and all interested persons are invited to attend.

During the weekend of June 22-23, 1968 the club participated in the American Radio Relay League's annual Field Trips. The activity occurred in accordance with Civil Defense and Amateur Radio Public Service Corps procedure and demonstrated our organization's ability to coordinate emergency communications on portable power independent of existing utilities.

Cavalier Golf Holes Picked with Care

How many of the hundreds of golfers in Virginia Beach have ever had the chance to play one of the famous golf courses in the United States? Those golfers who have ever played a round of 18 holes at the Cavalier Golf Course, although they may not realize it, have played a portion of 17 of the country's top courses.

When the course was designed in 1928 each of the first 17 holes, was fashioned as close as possible to a carbon copy of the most challenging hole from the most famous courses across America.

Golfers now may ask what claim to fame the Cavalier's 18th hole has? While the 18th hole has no connection with other courses, it has been termed the finest and most challenging finishing par 3 hole in the country to such golfing greats as Walter Hagen, Sam Snead and Gene Sarazen.

The Cavalier golf course, over the past 40 years, has played a key role in raising the game of golf to its present day importance. The drivers of "top pros" who have driven a ball down the fairways, to a short chip and putt, include Babe Dildrickson, Lew Worsham, Golfing greats have called the Cavalier's 18th hole one of the finest and toughest par 3 finishing holes.

Artificial Reefs Proposed

A proposal to sink old automobile tires offshore to form an artificial reef to become a fish breeding grounds was brought before the Parks and Recreation Commission Tuesday by Eric O. Anderson, who works in the public works department at Oceana.

Anderson pointed out that fishing in Virginia Beach contributes to the tourist income of the city. "Underwater structures increase the growth of small fish," he said, which, in turn, increases the number of larger fish.

He said that similar offshore reefs at Cape May and Atlantic City, N.J., had been very successful. He said the tires were also useful as erosion control.

Disposal of tires is a problem for the sanitation department. Burning causes too much smoke. They cannot be used as fill. Anderson said the only uses he knew was in construction work and along the waterfront as bumpers.

Chairman Murrey Riganto appointed a committee of R. E. Dorer, who heads the City's sanitary land fill project; Clark Rogis of the Salt Water Fishing Assn.; Ralph Garrett of the City Clerk's office and Anderson to check into the feasibility of such a project.

Lake Edwards, a 12-acre man made lake, has been offered free to the Parks and Recreation Department by Herbert L. Kramer. His offer includes grading and seeding the area and building a dam to control the height of water before turning it over to the City for maintenance. His only restriction is that the view of the lake not be blocked. It is located just off Baker Road close to Virginia Wesleyan College.

Revenue for the summer from the Boardwalk trains and from Little Island parking totals $24,200.68.

Capes Defeats P.A. in Swim

The local teeny-boppers bopped over to the Capes Beach and Cabana Club for another swim meet last Tuesday.

They came from the host club, the Princess Anne Country Club. Their mommies came, too, along with swim coaches C. M. Johnson from the PACC and Nelson Workman and Paul Haisheber from the Capes.

The Capes team shut out the PACC in both swimming and diving meets with a combination scores of 237-177.

Meet, Jr. Olympics Scheduled

The First Annual Virginia Beach Track and Field Open will be held on Monday, Aug. 12 at the Princess Anne High School Stadium.

All events begin at 4 p.m. The Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the meet. Gus Riganlo is the chairman.

The meet will also include the Junior Olympics for the state of Virginia, which is sponsored by the Quaker Oats Company throughout the United States. Divisions of the games will be between the ages of 14 and 15, and 16 and 17.

The other events are open to the public. All entrants must hold an AAU (Amateur Athletic Union) card. Entry blanks may be obtained by writing R. E. Whitley, c/o The Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, P. O. Box 190, Virginia Beach, Va.

The 14 regular track and field events will take place on Princess Anne's cinder track that was rebuilt especially for the meet.

Two Master events will also be held for men over 40. They will be the 100 yard dash and the one-mile jog. A trophy will be given to the winner for his achievement in speed and style.

Approximately 100 Junior Olympic applications have been taken so far and about 70 in the open events.

Edwin Roberts, winner of two bronze medals in the 1964 Olympics, will be the headliner of the men's open. Roberts will represent Trinidad in the 1968 games. A graduate of North Carolina College, Roberts was clocked at 9.2 in the 100 yard dash, behind only Bob Hayes.

High speed runner Edwin Roberts will be a participant in the First Annual Virginia Beach Track and Field Open.

Other headliners for the event are: Frank Costello, a 7' high-jumper, shot-putter Ernie Heaton and Frank Thrasher, the East Coast's leading discus thrower.

Admission for the event is .50 per person, and all proceeds will go into making the meet one of the biggest track events on the East Coast.

Second Try Planned For Airport Site

"We are very much disappointed with the rejection because it would have opened up that part of the city," said C. H. Byler about the Federal Aviation Agency's rejection of the proposed site for an airport in Virginia Beach.

The spot on which the airport would have been located is two miles southwest of City Hall on North Landing Road. The main reason for the objection to the airport is in a flight corridor between the Oceana Naval Air Station and Fentress Air Field. This factor was stated in a July 23 letter from Curtis F. Greene, chief of Airports Branch of the FAA to C. H. Byler, president of Beach Aviation.

The letter read, "We object to the establishment of the proposed airport because aircraft operating to and from it will adversely affect the safe and efficient use of airspace by aircraft operating to and from Fentress and Oceana. The traffic patterns would conflict regardless of whether left or right traffic patterns are established," Curtis noted.

The FAA letter further stated that the proposed site does not meet the traffic pattern, airspace area and spacing already met by Fentress and Oceana.

The letter continued, "The Navy aircraft would pass in close proximity to the proposed airport site not higher than 400 feet. These Navy aircraft transit on a direct line between Oceana and Fentress at altitudes below 1,000 feet. The majority of the approaches between Oceana are conducted on Runway 5. The approach pattern to this runway passes over the proposed site at approximately 1,000 feet."

Byler said, "We plan to make a new announcement about another location soon. This one will not conflict with the FAA."

Norman Looks Forward To Proposed Overall Plan

City Manager Roger M. Scott has proposed a five year capital improvement program as the city's guideline for growth.

Scott's administrative assistant, David Norman said that he "looks forward to working on the program. I see a need for a program of this type. It is very necessary to any city interested in growth, especially Virginia Beach."

"This will be of invaluable assistance in planning and in financial matters," Scott continued to say. "Since it (the plan) would be reviewed and revised annually, there would be adjustments and rescheduling of the program to meet what needs to be achieved."

According to the city manager, the plan would encompass all phases of capital improvements, with such future projects as branch government centers or satellite city halls. As of now, there are no future plans.

Proposed improvements include schools, public utilities, highways, municipal buildings, drainage canals, recreation, the Lynnhaven project, Rudee Inlet, Civic Center and industrial development.

According to Norman the plan should go into effect "between now and the first of the year."

Impact Funds Still Withheld

Sen. William B. Spong and many other Virginia legislators have urged President Johnson to release $90.9 million in federal aid to impacted school districts throughout the country.

The bill, which was on, off and on, is now off again. Unless action is taken soon, the area schools will find their budgets slashed by $2.2 million for the 1968-69 fiscal year which began Wednesday, July 31. The state may lose a total of $5.4 million, a cut second only to California.

Norfolk will be the biggest loser with $727,000. Virginia Beach is scheduled to lose

The request seeks a starting salary of $7,368.

Scott also discussed with Council an ordinance that would create historic and conservation districts to protect as well as contribute to the improvement of historic sites in Virginia Beach.

Planning Director Patrick Standing also presented to Council a study of the section around Independence Blvd. and Robbins Corner known as Cracetown, regarding future zoning and development of that area when the new Independence Blvd. is built. Standing also said he would present a study to Council next Monday regarding the future of all available property on Virginia Beach Blvd. for residential and commercial use. Council ordered the study when zoning matters came before it.

Scott recommended to Council that a request by the Virginia Beach Jaycees, sponsors of the East Coast Surfing Championships to be held later this month for additional surfing area north of the existing area at Steel Pier be rejected. The area had been asked for practice and for surfers not participating in the contest on a temporary basis. Scott recommended that the area south of the pier be granted for this purpose, since the pier is closed to fishing and open only to spectators during the competition.

Scott said he had received mixed feelings about moving the championship next year to Sandbridge, but that the Dept. of Recreation and Parks was most enthusiastic and said it could provide ample area for the contest and for practice, still leaving a bathing area 1,500 feet long.

Two members to be appointed to the Hampton Roads Stadium Authority from Virginia Beach were delayed again until more information is received.

Scott informed Council that three sites had been sold in the Virginia Beach Industrial Park at Lynnhaven and next to provide water and sewer facilities to the locations. Director of Public Utilities, Worth Petty, and Industrial Commission Director, L. Dean Curtis, were invited to the next informal meeting to discuss the matter, although it was felt that funds could be found.

Sever and water connections in Lakeview Shores area was also discussed. Under new regulations 75 per cent of residents of an area must request service. Not enough in the area in question have requested, although their petition is of long standing. Scott suggested ways the matter could be worked out by dividing the area and getting a few more signatures to meet requirements.

Bids on new fire trucks for Princess Anne Plaza Volunteer Fire Dept. were brought up, and it was suggested that they be rejected because they were not in compliance with new city ordinance defining specifications for all city fire equipment.

five days. He got it the next day. Kellam called the charge "trumped-up" and "sneaky."

Evans countered by saying he must not have thought them trumped-up when he resigned his board positions. While Evans hinted that legal action would be taken against Kellam to recover the money, no such action had been filed by Wednesday afternoon.

A suit was reportedly filed by Evans earlier in a similar matter against Richard Holland, former chairman of the defunct Police and Trial Board, who allegedly also sold goods to the City, but the papers had not been served on Holland several days after Evans had reported the filing. This reported action came after a similar letter to Holland and Holland's statement that he was not guilty of any conflict of interest, the opinion of Virginia Attorney General Robert X. Botton notwithstanding.

Button had ruled a conflict in the Holland matter but has not in the Kellam matter. The entire question of conflict of interest is now under review by a state study committee and Governor Godwin, while something similar to a moratorium has been urged on the matter. Nowhere else but in Virginia Beach has the matter been pursued since, although questions have been raised in a large number of other cities, including Norfolk.

Meanwhile City Councilman Murray Malbon reportedly returned $294 of the $565 asked by Evans of him in the sale of a part of the city. Malbon, who is aligned with the same political faction as Evans, said that Evans had erred in his request, and that the rest of the money was gained from a state agency. Evans promised to look into that matter.

Evans has also indicated he will seek return of funds from other Virginia Beach businessmen in the conflict of interest case, but has not done so in the past week. Meanwhile the conflict matter remains just that—the center of conflict.

Squad Needs Help of Public

Members of the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad are conducting their annual fund drive this month. The Squad has set a goal of $32,000 to finance the unit's operation for the next 12 months.

This marks the 16th year of operation for the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad, which began with a nucleus of 18 men in 1952. Today the Squad consists of 32 men who volunteer their services in offering 24 hour emergency first aid medical service and transportation for persons who may require immediate aid in the event of sudden sickness, accidents, or when unexpected situations place a person's life in jeopardy. Several members of the Squad have more than 10 years service with the unit. Every member of the Squad has been thoroughly trained through completion of the American Red Cross Standard and Advanced First Aid Courses.

The Rescue Squad operates from a headquarters building near 20th Street and Arctic Avenue which houses their equipment and contains office space, and a combination training and meeting room. Presently the Squad's equipment consists of three well-equipped ambulances, a "crash truck" which is only equipped with an auxiliary power plant, portable flood lights, and acetylene torch cutting equipment; plus an outboard motor boat which is used in emergencies which may arise in the numerous bodies of water in the region.

The Virginia Beach Rescue Squad has answered 19,437 calls for emergency service since its beginning in 1952, covering 439,432 miles of "in service" driving during this time, with 211,935 man hours being volunteered during the same time. Last year men of the Squad responded to 2,040 emergency calls, involving 42,432 miles of "in service" driving, and requiring 21,500 man hours of volunteered service. During the past 12 months the operation of the squad required expenditures totaling $28,944.82.

C.T. Dickson was recently elected captain of the Squad, and he is assisted by W.C. Eagan, first lieutenant; J.M. McDonald, second lieutenant; R. A. Hodges, Jr., secretary; and R. G. Tilghman, treasurer.

The office of Squad president held by J.F. Gallagher, with Dr. W.A. Dickinson as vice president.

The continued first rate operation of the Squad will depend upon the financial support given the Squad by the public during this month's fund raising campaign. All of the money raised through the campaign

Four men have returned to duty with the Virginia Beach Police Dept. after completing a course of study in the Central Police Training School. Detectives Edward G. Casey and Jude E. Haslinger, along with Officers Salvatore B. Sciorio and Charles E. Stinson graduated after three weeks at the State Police Training Center in Richmond.

Floyd Waterfield, Chief of the Creeds Volunteer Fire Dept., says that the men who have completed the course will now give the department a more ample supply of water and assist in caring for equipment.

The Princess Anne F.O.P. Lodge #8 softball team lost one of the "toughest" games of the season last Monday to men of the Norfolk Police K-9 Corps. The Norfolk team won by a score of 7 to 6 after eight full innings of play. Home runs were hit for the Virginia Beach team by Officer E.L. Jackson and Lt. C.D. Hathaway, Jr., who managed to hit two home runs, driving in two other men on base with one of them. Next Monday night's scheduled game has already been won by Virginia Beach through a forfeit.

tracts of land in the Woodland Area around Old Virginia Beach Road and Barberton Drive; and an application of Colonial Outdoor Advertising Corp. for a use permit to build a billboard near Great Neck Road and Virginia Beach Blvd.

A number of deferred items will also be heard.

Council holds a public hearing on all zoning matters after the one held by the City Planning Commission and most often takes into consideration the recommendation of the planners. The decisions of the commission have heretofore not been made public until the Council meeting, but because of the new Freedom of Information Law, were made known during the regular meeting of the commission in July.

At the commission meeting a number of items were involved in controversy and, as is usually the case, a large number of citizens are expected to appear before Council in the second public hearing.

New Library Breaks Ground

Ground was broken at ceremonies today for the Kempville Branch of the Virginia Beach Public Library.

The branch should be open by March of 1969, according to Mrs. Margaret Capps Bada, city librarian. The librarian hopes that the branch will open with about 7,000 books of which 2,000 have already been received and cataloged.

Beach Welcomes Footloose Pair

Their ultimate goal is the Trans-Siberian Railroad with stops along the way at the Olympic Games in Mexico City and a trek through Central and South America. If their past history is any indication, they'll make it too.

"They" are a pair of young Englishmen who were transported to South Africa at an early age. Both are 21, and one has been hitchhiking for two and a half years, while the other joined him only five months ago in England.

They arrived in Virginia Beach Thursday after being picked up near Smyrna, Del. by John Griffin, executive director of the Ocean Hwy. Association. After staying with him until Sunday morning, they headed south for Myrtle Beach and Charleston, S.C., where Griffin had arranged accommodations for them. From there they want to go to Key West (by way of the Ocean Hwy., naturally), to New Orleans, Texas, the mid-West, back to Vancouver, British Columbia, down the West Coast to Mexico, then Chile, Rio de Janeiro, ending with the trip through Siberia from Vladivostok to Moscow then home for a few months, they say.

They hope to travel in 100 countries. So far they have touched on 42.

Terry Murphy, a curly-haired, burly, the less talkative of the two, commented that he thought he might study to be a teacher when he returns. He spent four years as a printer's apprentice.

Michael Jeffers, also curly-haired, but blond, says he would like to study something but he doesn't know exactly what.

Michael started out from Capetown, South Africa two and a half years ago. His father owns a motel there. His parents' reaction to his decision to travel? "They didn't believe me. Hitchhiking through Africa just isn't done every day."

"The hospitality is fantastic in America," said Terry. "We've only slept out twice." They both carry sleeping bags in their rucksacks.

"We make it a principle not to pay for accommodations," added Michael. "We collect lots of addresses of places to stop from people we stay with."

For instance, they stayed a week in a fraternity house in Wilmington, Del., after getting a ride with a couple of the fraternity members. Then one of the "brothers" referred them to his girl friend's parents where they planned to stay one night and wound up staying two weeks.

"When we're staying with families with kids we have to watch what we say, though," Michael pointed out. "The kids want to pack up and leave too."

With another former Englishman (not Terry) Michael started out through Rhodesia and Zambia where they traveled along "Hell Run", so called because not only is it a dirt road, but trucks are overturned along it every few miles—seems the truck drivers stop for beer every 20 miles. After traveling through Tanzania, Kenya and Uganda, they wanted to travel up the Nile, but their plans were changed by an African war. They couldn't get into the Congo either.

Finally they hitchhiked up the coast of Tanganyika then bought third class tickets on a boat around Lake Victoria. They traveled behind bars all the way. Many places in Africa they stayed in mud huts with the natives. In one place Michael was chased by a native with a spear after Michael took his picture. "He wanted money. He put the spear down after I gave him 20 cents. They don't know how to speak English, but they know how to ask for money."

In Mombasa, Kenya they were faced with jail or deportation because their visas had expired by one day. They were given 24 hours to get out of town, so they bought deck passage on a ship to Bombay for $24. For 10 of the 13-day voyage they had nothing but potatoes and rice to eat.

In Bombay they worked for three weeks as movie extras at $3 a day while they lived at the Salvation Army. "You could hardly walk in the streets of Bombay at night because of the people sleeping there," said Michael.

In Pakistan they knocked on doors and asked for a place to stay. They were lucky enough to be taken in by the woman who represented Pakistan at the coronation of Queen Elizabeth.

They arrived in Israel just in time for the Jordan-Israeli war. Michael filled sand bags and spent part of his time in a bunker, while his travel-companion went on patrol.

On reaching Europe, he and his partner went separate ways. "You'd be surprised at the number of American girls who hitchhike in Europe," Michael commented. "They're parents would probably be horrified if they knew, but it's an accepted thing there."

Commenting on the Europeans' attitude toward Americans, he said, "Americans abroad are loud-mouthed. They're disliked as a whole, but individually they're okay. The Europeans dislike Americans, but they like their money."

On reaching England, Michael had traveled 23,000 miles in seven months at a cost of $300. After selling encyclopedias for five months, he took another trip through Europe with an American, then returned to England again where he met Terry at the Overseas Visitors Club in London.

Terry, who was from Durban, South Africa, had worked five years to save enough money to get back to England.

On leaving England again, Michael flew to New York and Terry to Halifax, Nova Scotia then they met in Montreal and hitchhiked to Niagara Falls. Michael said they had been stopped several times by police for hitchhiking, "but as soon as we show our British passports everything's fine."

With all their experiences and travels, both agree that the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel is "fantastic, an engineering marvel"—an opinion volunteered without any coaching from John Griffin.

When Griffin mentioned Southern hospitality to them, Terry said, "I don't know how it could be any better than we've already had."

Michael, in explaining his urge to travel, commented, "The more you see, the more you want to see and the more you realize you've missed."

Precinct Celebrates Anniversary

A day-long open-house celebration will be held today at the 3rd Police Precinct, 925 Independence Blvd., in commemoration of the first full year of service by the Precinct to the residents of the Bayside Borough of Virginia Beach.

The celebration, scheduled from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., will feature displays of police, fire and rescue equipment, and offer tours of the precinct's headquarters building facilities.

Special ceremonies, beginning at 2 p.m., will feature music by the Little Creek Amphibious Base Navy Band, Marine Corps and Police Color Guards, and a formal roll call and changing of shifts of the precinct's police officers on duty. Marine Lt. Col. C.J. Gilroy, Jr., informational services and public affairs officer for the Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, will serve as master of ceremonies for the special ceremonies.

Members of the Headquarters of the Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, and the Virginia Beach Detachment of the Tidewater Area Shore Patrol, who assist in policing the precinct's territory, will join men of the precinct in the day long event.

Today also marks the first anniversary as precinct commanding officer for Capt. W.J. "Bucky" Moore, Jr., who was first appointed to the Princess Anne County Police Force in 1957.

Title Changes Hands Tomorrow

The new Miss Virginia Beach will begin her reign tomorrow night, when she is crowned by current title holder, Miss Barbara Chullin. The ceremonies are scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. at the Civic Center.

Twelve girls are competing for the title, which enables the winner to go to Roanoke next summer to compete in the Miss Virginia Pageant. The contestants will meet the judges for the first time tomorrow morning for a personal interview followed by lunch at 1 p.m. at The Cavalier.

The girls, ranging in age from 17 to 20, will be judged according to Miss America rules, that is on talent, bathing suit modeling, evening gown modeling, intelligence, poise and personality.

Music for the evening will be provided by Johnny Horne and his Orchestra. Rick Allen, station manager of WVAB radio, will be master of ceremonies.

Prizes include more than $500 in scholarships, a car for the winner to drive for a year and a new wardrobe, and, of course, the glamorous trip to Roanoke.

Guitarist Opens Music Festival

Carlos Montoya, the world famous master of the flamenco guitar, will be heard in concert here at the Civic Center, Friday and Saturday nights, Aug. 3 and 4 at 8:30.

One of the most widely heard performers in any concert idiom, Montoya has brought flamenco music to virtually every major outpost of the free world, Canada, Europe and the Orient.

In addition to his tours, Montoya also has won international favor through his numerous recordings. He is, in fact, the most recorded flamenco artist in history.

A Spanish gypsy born in Madrid, Montoya was a musical prodigy, achieving national renown by the age of 14, when he was the toast of the "Cuartos Flamencos" during the heyday of flamenco singing and dancing. His debut as a concert artist was preceded by years of accompanying such distinguished dancers as La Argentina, Vicente Escudero and Argentina.

The first flamenco guitarist ever to display his artistry in a solo concert, he has been hailed by aficionados everywhere as one of the truly great masters of our times. His advanced techniques, his flair for creative innovation and his infinitely varied repertoire make him one of the most exciting artists in the concert world today.

Events are scheduled for every night of the two week duration of the Friends of Music Arts Festival. On Monday, Aug.

Sorry Situation

Editor, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN:
As a recent graduate of a Virginia Beach public high school, I was compelled to take a course in American Government in my senior year. One cannot receive a degree from an accredited high school in the city without taking and passing this course.

Although the course was effective and informative, it taught only the basics of Federal government. The text described local government in an outline form that is used in all states, but no mention was given to the way Virginia Beach Government worked.

Some of the high school graduates of June will be the voters in local as well as national elections in four years. I wonder how anyone expects these people to choose a capable candidate without ever learning what his specific function is in relation to Virginia Beach.

The curriculum is improving in Virginia Beach's public schools and I hope it continues to improve, but I feel that instruction in local government is most imperative and this facet is obviously lacking, particularly in a city where politics plays such an important role.

The idea of lowering the voting age to 18 has passed through more than one head in recent years. If this was law today, young voters with no knowledge of local government would probably have no idea for whom they were voting, or what their job was.

Young adults are fighting and dying in Vietnam, and yet, the majority do not know what half of the government they are trying to defend stands for. I think it is a sorry situation.

Guest Editorial

Look Around a Bit

Virginia Beach is one of those cities where a great deal has been done in the area of beautification and in anti-litter campaigns. Yet still the problem remains especially during the height of the tourist season when we have so many "guests" who don't seem to care. The following article on the subject is reprinted from the INDUSTRIAL PRESS SERVICE, of July 15, 1968.

Just imagine for a minute, that you had to change your job location, and need to find a home a couple of hundred miles away.

One of the first things you would do is to make many inquiries about the immediate area of the new location, and then select a few cities and towns for personal inspection.

While "casing" the surrounding countryside, those areas with neat attractive homes, clean streets, and modern shopping areas arouse your interest, while those which are litter-strewn and spotted with un-kempt homes are immediately rejected.

But, you don't have to move. Yet this imaginary visit has served a useful purpose. The way to keep America beautiful is to set a perfect example in your own backyard. It will serve as a challenge and reminder to your neighbors--and their neighbors will follow. When pride in cleanliness has permeated the neighborhood, this good example will encourage the entire city or town to follow.

Remember, it is the combined efforts of individuals who determine whether or not litter is to be downgraded and an entire area upgraded.

Cutting Federal Spending

The following editorial is also reprinted from the INDUSTRIAL PRESS SERVICE. It concerns one way to tighten the national budget, especially in light of recent cutbacks authorized by Congress, then partially relaxed.

One logical way to cut excessive federal spending is to reduce the number of government personnel. In April, 12,352 employees were added to the federal executive department payroll, making a grand total of 2,932,109 people. This exceeds the Korean war peak in January of 1954. It's about three and one-half times as many on the federal payroll during the peak of World War I.

Here are some random examples. If the 19,448 employees of TVA moved to one city, it would have more people than Talladega, Ala., Fairbanks, Alaska, or Whitefish Bay, Wis.

If the Veterans Administration personnel of 172,954 was in one city, this city would replace Nashville, Tenn., as the 73rd largest city in U. S. population according to the 1960 Census. If the Civil Service Commission with 5,362 employees had its own city it would outrank Monticello, Ark., Brownburg, Ind., Freeport, Maine, and Walnut Heights, Cal.

The Department of Agriculture has the equivalent of one employee for every 28 farms in the United States, with a total of 111,271 employees.

Proliferation of federal departments, bureaus, and committees expands with unrestrained federal spending, so while Mr. and Mrs. Consumer are expected to tighten up their budget to meet an increase in federal taxes, a realignment of the payroll priorities in the nation's capital is long overdue.

SUNSPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"Say something," she said, without moving a single muscle. "I can't," he answered, also without moving a muscle. "Besides, I wouldn't think you'd want anything to break this silence after this weekend."

"You've got a point there," she said. "Don't talk." "Now I know what they mean by 'silence is golden,'" he said. "Have you ever heard so much noise in a single two-and-a-half day period?"

"No, I haven't," she said. "And if I ever do again, I promise you I'm going to add to it by screaming."

That Was the Weekend That Was

"Somehow or other, you wouldn't think that four extra adults, one extra four-year old, one extra two-month old, one Great Dane and a Bassett added to our five year old, three year old and our cat could create such havoc," he said. "Or come to think of it I guess you would think so."

"I did all right until today when you got the bright idea to take everybody, babies included, to the beach club," she said. "Somehow or other that did it."

"I nearly did me in, just carrying all the infant seats, diapers, bottles, blankets, toys, towels, bottle warmer, and other junk to the car," he said. "Then if we hadn't taken two cars, we'd never have been able to make it."

"Did you see the look on that lifeguard's face when we tried to set up housekeeping on the beach?" she asked.

"Yeah," he laughed. "He started to ask if we needed anything else, then changed his mind and walked away."

"I never did even get my feet in the water," she noted. "I was too busy taking care of the baby or keeping the older kids from drowning, at least when you weren't doing it."

"I know. And when all three girls got sand in their eyes at the same time just as a big wave gobbled them up, I considered drowning myself too," he said.

"They cried so loud that time that they upset the tea dance going on at the Club," she said.

"Going to the beach was supposed to be so relaxing too," he said. "I was even thankful to get home when the storm came until I found the Great Dane had gone through the screen porch, probably chasing a squirrel."

"I guess the insurance will pay for that," she said. "Anyway I believe the birthday party Saturday afternoon for our three-year old was worse, I never saw so many kids. I know I just invited a few."

"You did," he said. "But she invited everybody in the neighborhood. And at the height of all that commotion when both babies began to scream at once, did you get the picture of the two fathers feeding their sons?"

"I did," she said with a laugh. "It was really funny."

"Sure it was. We laughed too, then cried, as we remembered the bachelor apartment the two of us had ten years ago," he said.

"Well, you're the one who begged me to marry you," she said. "I never begged in my life," he said. "I just chased you until you caught me."

"Isn't it nice now, though?" she asked. "The kids are in bed. Our company has all gone, and here we are... just the two of us, alone with a whole evening ahead of us. What shall we do?"

"I don't know about that, but I'm going to bed," he said. "These weekends are just too strenuous for me. Besides, maybe I'll dream about that bachelor apartment, and try to figure out where I went wrong."

Furniture Reflects Taste, Character

Furnishing a first home? More than 1.3 million brides are doing just that this year—and buying far more for their money than their mothers ever dreamt of.

In a world in which more and more seems to purchase less and less, furniture is literally a buy of a lifetime—at prices, by and large, that are lower than every for value that's higher. The secret is modern materials and manufacturing methods.

As a matter of fact, while good furniture isn't cheap, there's no longer any reason for the new bride to live with makeshifts and make-do while waiting to buy "real" furniture. For the bride who knows what she's looking for, the real thing is available right now, at sensible prices.

There doesn't even have to be anything intimidating about a furniture shopping trip—not when you know the language (furniture phrases can be baffling to the uninitiated) and have armed yourself with a list of wants and "wants."

First, on the most-wanted list is a beautiful—and beautifully livable—bedroom. Comfort, quality and convenience count—and no wonder. Today's typical working-girl bride spends better than 50 per cent of her at-home time in the bedroom.

Company quarters can wait. Just fill in the wide-open living room spaces with plants and decorative accents, while you're waiting to find just the right almost-antiques or contemporary classics. Friends won't mind—and family may even take the hint and help out with the purchase of major pieces.

Bedrooms are a different story; personal comfort can't wait. First decision to make involves style; today's most popular choices, according to Johnson-Carper, one of America's leading manufacturers, reflect the sunniest Mediterranean mood. Smart Spanish provincial retains a romantic flair—with the monumental massivity of the Iberian original scaled down to fit small modern rooms. Spanish or other furniture styles fall into four major groups: traditional, for regal elegance; provincial, for graceful charm; early American, for casual living; contemporary, for lively young moderns.

In any style setting, smart shoppers can marry form to functions, with double-duty pieces that look luxurious while they turn corners, climb walls and convert the cramped quarters that spell "first home" into a family castle. Newest of all are the build-your-own-wall chest, shelf and table combinations that are happily at home—and nicely un—"bedroomy"—even in one-room apartments. Favorite choices are Brocade and Entonado—both Spanish-styled—and delicately sculptured French Coquette. But don't be fooled by their traditional facades; like all of today's best furniture buys, they hide hard-working traits for practical-minded young moderns.

Actually, looking behind the surface is always a good idea. Quality checkpoints tell the inside story—particularly important in choosing the wood pieces (the trade calls them case goods) that are a bride's basic buys.

High on the Johnson-Carper checklist of qualities to look for are finish and veneer. Finish should show skillfully-matched grain. You'll want veneered furniture, with a fine wood laminated on the surface, to cut the weight of solid wood and reduce a price that would otherwise be prohibitive—but you won't want a clumsy "patchwork" effect.

Check what other people won't see, too. Words to remember are interlocking dovetailing (for drawer rigidity), center-guiding (for easy drawer opening without slipping), dustproofing (panels between the drawers to create individual compartments) and lamination (the addition of a wood-matching plastic top surface to resist spots, scratches and stains). Check doors to make sure they don't drag or rub; swing them to see that they hang right. And don't be afraid to tug on the hardware, to check that it's firmly attached. It won't take long—and you will be sure that your furniture is as pleasing to live with as it is to look at.

Choice made? Before you leave the store, check your salesman to make sure that the style is part of an "open stock" line, incorporating many units. You won't buy them all at once—but it's the only way to be sure that you can expand your living comforts as you expand your space, without losing the integrated look that makes for a firm fashion foundation.

Do your shopping early, too. Furniture is made to order. Instead of being stored in a warehouse.

Among the crowd at the Shrine Club dance were Dr. M.H. Legum, potentate of Khedive Temple, seated, Mrs. George Gordon and Mrs. M.E. Anderson. Standing behind them are Gordon and Anderson.

HERE COMES OLGA!

By Olga Edwards

Friday night the annual dance of the Virginia Beach Shrine Club was held at the Cavalier Beach and Cabana Club.

Bill Rice, who was the chairman of this dance, for about three weeks was like a cat on a hot tin roof getting publicity, hiring the band, plus a lot of leg work. I might say that Bill deserves a lot of credit because the dance was highly successful and very well attended. Don Glasser, the leader of the orchestra at the Cabana Club said that it was one of the largest crowds that he had played for in his nine years of coming to Virginia Beach.

The night was ideal for the dance. The weather was pleasantly cool, and of course the dance floor was in perfect condition for any type of dancing. One thing I noticed as I watched the crowd; that none of the men were wearing turtle-necks... what happened fellows?

The women were wearing both long and short formal and casual dresses. Grace (Mrs. Earl) DuVal was at the Shrine Club dance, too... with one foot wrapped almost to the knee in elastic bandages. Seems she had broken three bones in her foot when she was struck by a wave while wading in the surf only three days before.

Her comment was that she wasn't going to miss the dance even if she did have to come on crutches. She and her husband "Monk" were sharing a table with George and Agnes Aldridge and their daughter and son in law, Mr. and Mrs. Pinkard Dyer who are visiting here from Omaha, Neb., with their two daughters. Mrs. Dyer is the former Anita Aldridge.

The Divan of the Khedive Temple of Norfolk were in full attendance for the festivities. Mr. and Mrs. Meyer H. Legum (he is the Potentate of the Khedive Temple) were one of the important couples present. Among those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. James, Mr. and Mrs. A.R. Buchert, Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Brugh (he is President of the Virginia Beach Shrine Club), Mr. and

Mrs. Bill Hudgins, Mr. and Mrs. Hasty Perry, Mr. and Mrs. C.F. Kadas, Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Cavender, Mr. and Mrs. D.B. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ship, Mr. and Mrs. Lynwood Shipp, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. William Hall, Mr. and Mrs. James Land, Mr. and Mrs. George Aldridge, Mr. and Mrs. Earl DuVal, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert J. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth C. Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Padon, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Marks of North Carolina, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Casey, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wooling, Mr. and Mrs. J.K. Killen, Col. and Mrs. C.R. Tasher, Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Peels, Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Pittman, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Speight, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Kean, Mr. and Mrs. R.E. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Judson Rodman, Mr. and Mrs. Benjie Murden, Past Potentate, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gibbons, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kuhl, Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Savides, Mr. and Mrs. R.E. Washburn, Mr. and Mrs. Piggy Hogge, Mr. and Mrs. J.H. Drew, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Moore, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Hewitt, Mr. and Mrs. Horace L. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. J.E. Knowles and Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Scarborough.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Clements, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Morrell of Portsmouth, and quite a few from the Suffolk and other Shrine Clubs in the area attended.

This dance was one of the most outstanding social events of the season so far.

CPO Wives To Decorate

The Little Creek CPO Wives' Club recently held a Bake Sale in the mall at the Little Creek Exchange, netting approximately $70.

The wives will be making the decorations for the Little Creek CPO Club's annual Luau, which will be held on Aug. 21. Johnny Pineapple and his band will provide dinner music for the buffet.

Cheese Transforms Plain Recipes

To many homemakers, the only way cheese makes its appearance is on the All-American Cheese Sandwich or in an easy alliance with crackers as a tasty snack. Yet cheese can have a much more arresting personality: it refines the ordinary; adds zest to the bland; transforms plain recipes into party-perfect entrees; and turns a dull-looking dish into a visual showpiece. Of course, all this is no secret.

Cheese has been pleasing the palates of "trophies," or cheese connoisseurs, for thousands of years. This universally beloved food was discovered by accident in the Middle East centuries before the birth of Christ. An Arab merchant poured milk into a pouch made of a sheep's stomach and set off on his long trek. When he stopped to take what he thought would be a cooling drink, he discovered the milk had turned thick and strange-looking—but it tasted delicious anyway! Evidently, the heat of the desert and the rennet in the lining of the sheep's stomach had broken down the milk into whey and curd, and the mixture had started fermenting. The result: Cheese.

Once cheese had established itself in the Middle East, it was only a short time till roving caravans carried the art of cheese-making into other countries. The Romans were cheese-lovers par excellence and introduced it to England. During the Middle Ages, cheese manufacture was entrusted to monks in monasteries—a delicious addition to their wine-making! When the pilgrims made their famous journey to our shores, the ship's larder was well-provisioned with cheese. They had discovered its versatility. And we know it today, too.

More and more homemakers are discovering the culinary potential of cooking with cheese. The cucumber, for example, a humble vegetable most often used in salads, takes on a new dimension when cheddar cheese comes into the picture. But what gives the delicious hot cheese sauce, Cucumbers Au Gratin, its hearty texture are the flavorful crackers that serve three delicious purposes as the bottom lining, the intermediate layer, and the appetizing crusty topping of the recipe. Try your hand at making this wonderful tasting—yet economical—dish.

Cheese with a foreign accent is delicious and nutritious in a Swiss-Y Cheese Bake. A tantalizing crust of cracker crumbs is filled with swiss cheese, chopped green pepper and onion, then garnished with bacon curls for the final fillip of flavor.

cucumbers, cut into slices about 1/4 inch thick. Drop cucumbers into salted boiling water. Bring to boil again. Lower heat. Cover and simmer about 5 minutes. Drain. Place about 1/3 of cracker mixture in bottom of shallow 6-cup casserole. Cover with half the cucumbers; sprinkle with pepper and half of the cheese. Make another layer of 1/3 of the cracker mixture. Add remaining cucumbers; sprinkle with pepper and balance of cheese. Finish with final layer of cracker mixture. Bake in moderately hot oven (350 degrees) for about 30 minutes, or until lightly browned on top. Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

The oh-so-ordinary potato can also get a new lease on life in a tasty casserole like Saucy Spud Surprise. Cheese, sautéed onions, pungent olives and assorted spices give this dish its flavoring. When it reaches the table, it will not only taste marvelous, but it will look particularly appetizing because of its buttery tossed-crumbs garnish. A cup of coarsely crumbled crackers makes a perfect topping not only for this delicious recipe, but for any other casserole that calls for a crusty garnish, be it a macaroni-and-cheese dish or, perhaps, a tomato-spaghetti mixture. Here's how to prepare this appetite-whetting casserole.

SAUCY SPUD SURPRISE
1/2 c. chopped onion
1/2 c. butter or margarine
3 Tbs. flour
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. paprika
1 1/2 c. milk, scalded
1 c. shredded or grated sharp cheddar cheese
3-4 c. sliced peeled potatoes
1 cup coarsely crumbled crackers, 8 double

Saute the onions in half the butter over moderate heat until transparent; do not brown. Mix the flour, salt and paprika. Stir into the onions and let simmer for about 1 minute. Stir in the milk and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Remove from heat, add cheese and stir until melted. Stir in olives and potatoes. Turn into a 5-to-6-cup casserole. Melt remaining butter and toss with crumbs. Sprinkle over top of casserole. Bake in pre-heated moderate oven, 350 degrees F., for 20 to 25 minutes or until browned. Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

*Boil potatoes in salted water in jackets until tender. Time will depend on age and size of potatoes. Cool, peel and dice.

Another mouthwatering suggestion is Swiss-Y Cheese Bake, a tantalizing pie in a delicious crust made with Sunshine Krispy Cracker crumbs and garnished with bacon curls for the final fillip of flavor. This pie can be served warm or cold and is a good recipe. Here's how to make it.

SWISS-Y CHEESE BAKE
1 1/4 cups fine cracker crumbs about 1/2 of 7 1/4-oz. package of crackers
6 Tbs. melted butter or margarine
1 c. chopped green pepper
1 c. chopped onion
2 Tbs. butter or margarine
1 1/2 c. milk, scalded
3 eggs, lightly beaten
1 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. paprika
1/2 pound Swissland Swiss cheese, grated
Bacon, optional

Crush crumbs between waxed paper with rolling pin. Blend with melted butter or margarine. Press mixture evenly over bottom and sides of 9-inch pie plate, leaving small edge around top. Sauté the peppers and onions in 2 tablespoons butter or margarine until just tender. Spread over crumb crust. Pour milk over the eggs; add salt, paprika, and cheese. Stir well and pour over the pepper and onions. Bake in slow oven (325 F.) for 40 to 45 minutes or until silver knife inserted in the center comes out clean. Serve warm or cold. Garnish with bacon curls or crushed bacon if desired. Yield: 6 servings.

To those homemakers who have already discovered the wonderful potential in cheese cookery, these recipes from Sunshine Biscuits will be welcome additions to their files. To novices, the above three marvelous meal suggestions will be tasty revelations. These picture-pretty dishes are virtually mistake-proof. And they can't help but bring smiles.

Sooner or later, that day comes, the day when a woman feels she's changing. It's not a good feeling either. And she could use a good old-fashioned medicine then.

Could be you feel a little edgy, or maybe cross. You might even have what we call hot flashes and feel sad and slightly off-balance.

Hair Today, Gone Tomorrow?

By Susan Axelrod

(Editor's note: Susan Axelrod wrote several guest columns last year, and not to be outdone, here is her first of this summer.)

Could this year go down in history as the rise and fall of the fall? Maybe the season of the "poodle top"? Or, more likely, the annum of the quick-change wig?

In my case, at least, the latter, the middle, the former and the present are all correct descriptions of hair. I was born with hair that can only be described in one blunt, but truthful manner—awful. It makes Phyllis Diller look like she just stepped out of Kenneth's salon. When it rains, it frizzes. When it's sunny, it waves, and in cold weather, it flops.

But this kid is no defeatist, so two years ago I got a fall. It matches very well—too well, in fact because impulsive people always want to give long hair a yank or two, and falls just aren't that anchored. Pity one poor fellow who grabbed and got 24 inches of European hair in his hand as a result. Speechless? To say the least he was. So was I. Hairless, too.

Falls are great, that's all I can say about them. The only time it hurts is when someone comments on how beautiful my hair is, and another wise mouth in the group says, "Yeah, it's fake, too." What an ego stunner.

And then there is the case of the curly wig. It was a present from my mother for being such a good girl in the hospital. I had my tonsils out. I tried it on in a department store and automatically fell in love with "poodle tops."

Unfortunately, I was the only one besides my mother that felt that way about it. But I bought it anyway. "What do they know," I said to myself, "about fashion?" And when I walk down the street in it I can hear comments like "What does she know about fashion?"

Life is a vicious circle. The first night I wore it, my adoring cousin, age 17, told me that, "if you got your hair cut like that I'll never speak to you again." Well, it was funny at the time, as I pulled off the Dynel ringlets and he passed out. I don't know if it was from relief or shock.

Recently I've been taking the easy way out. It's called "pull-your-hair-back-to-the-nape-of-your-neck-and-tie-it-with-a-ribbon-and-forget-it." Believe me, I've been trying to forget it. I wish on every "star bright" and wishbone I can lay my hands on for straight hair, but all the permanent wave solution in the world can't help me. Somehow, every time I look, which is as infrequent as possible, it's still hanging in there, or should I say kinking in there?

I have a bit of a solution to my dilemma, however. If it rains, I wear the fall. If the humidity is 45 per cent to 99 per cent, I wear the wig or pull it back with a rubber band and a bow. And if the humidity is below 45 per cent, I'm so excited about it that I never know what to do, so I style it so many different ways that by the time I get through, there's nothing left in my head because it all fell out in my brush and I'm semi-bald. Hey, could I start a new fall? 1969, the year of the no-hair hair?

It was a mini-boardwalk art show at Alanton School last week when parents were invited to view the work produced by the 16 students in the Art Enrichment class there. This was one of four classes held in the city this summer. Joe Collins acted as a guide, and here he explains a picture to his teacher, Miss Charlotte Elder. The Alanton students sold their art work too.

It was cake-walk time at Princess Anne Plaza Saturday when the enlisted wives of Air Squadron VA 65 held an all day Country Fair for the Forrestal Fund.

Decorating Home Led to Business

A hobby of collecting antiques has turned into a business for a young, newlywed couple in the Resort City.

Barbara and Bill Verdon have been married since March, but as far back as November they had been searching for pieces of antiques for their own use. "We were originally buying for ourselves," said Barbara Verdon, who attended a decorating school in Chicago and then worked for a local furniture and interior decorating establishment in the area. "We just bought little things we liked, and then just decided to go into the business." Castle Decor opened on May 5.

The Verdons acquire most of their "antiques, imports, and junk" (so the sign says) from auctions and sales from private estates. "Many people just call us and tell us that they want to get rid of some stuff." The Verdons most prized possession is an Italian three-dimensional mosaic framed mirror that they found in the attic of an estate. The mirror shows intricate designs of flower patterns. The four corners of the frame display a winged creature that the Verdons say "we've been trying to find out what it is." The creature has a plaque-type vest on his chest with an inscription on it. No one can seem to make out what it says.

Castle Decor contains mostly glass works and furniture. The proprietors experience quite a bit of tourist looking but admit that "most of our buyers are resident people."

The shop, located just off Pacific Avenue on 30th Street, was a house that the Verdons changed into the present building. They left the rooms as they were, and placed furniture in the appropriate rooms—a living room, study, dining room and a bedroom. Mrs. Verdon said, "with the furniture like it is, it lets people see how things are used. It gives a better setting if things are where they should be in a home."

Castle Decor has both American and European pieces. The pieces that they classify as "junk" are actually just things whose age is under the 100 year mark, and because of their "youth" cannot be classified as antiques.

The shop has a large old book collection. Many are leather-bound editions that create the musty aroma so present in antique shops. "The oldest book we have is an 1802 hymnal which was printed with just words and not music," according to Mrs. Verdon. She continued that "many people are afraid to buy antique furniture because they think it will fall apart. Actually older furniture is more sturdy than the modern pieces. The wood is solid and not veneered like it is today." The new generation is blended with the old at Castle Decor, and the rooms afford an afternoon of browsing with ease that cannot be found in many local places.

Baldersons Share Love of Music

Picture a tall healthy gal with an engaging smile and three small blond children going from door to door for contributions, and you might think of Shelby Balderson.

She was expecting John, their fourth child, at the time she was pounding on doors and approaching friends for donations to the Friends of Music Arts Festival. She and her husband, Stafford, were responsible for soliciting the many contributions and donations to the Festival. Without this financial support, the Festival would not have been feasible.

When asked if this was a difficult job, Shelby replied, "I didn't have any trouble getting money from friends. I was so excited about the Festival." Having lived in Virginia Beach for 20 years and knowing so many whom she could call friends, she, no doubt, found this an advantage in raising money.

Shelby admits she has a lot of energy and gets by with a minimum of sleep. Her four children—Ridgely, Hatton, Scott, and John—are quite active and range from the ages of seven to four months. Ridgely, their daughter, is the oldest while Scott is at the devastating age of two. Besides being a mother, she has done some promotion and publicity work for the Hospital Auxiliary Board and the Junior League Thrift Shop. She is a former vice president of Kings Daughters and an active member of Gallilee Episcopal Church.

Before her marriage Shelby had a career in merchandising and was assistant buyer at Miller and Rhoads. Since then life has changed, but she is just as busy. In their white frame house on 54th Street she keeps the family going and enjoys painting and gardening. Her vegetable garden abounds in corn, squash, tomatoes, fan-tatoes, and cucumbers.

Mrs. Balderson

Stafford provides the cultural inspiration for the family. As an English major at VMI, he graduated first in his class. He is still an avid reader and a talented pianist. The program notes for the Festival concerts have been written by him.

The Baldersons share a love for good music. Stafford appreciates the classical while Shelby prefers jazz. They both are looking forward to the concerts which will begin Aug. 3 and continue through the 17th.

Shelby is optimistic about the Arts Festival and what it will do for Virginia Beach. She has had the satisfaction of "seeing people working together, seeing the Festival materialize, and proving it can actually be done." Along with the others who have helped, she hopes it will be a success and will continue and improve each year.

Do Your Potatoes Have Tomatoes?

(Editors note: Here is another in the series of home horticulture by Wesley P. Jenkins of the horticulture department at Virginia Tech.)

Do your potato plants have little tomatoes on them? If they do, it is a quite normal occurrence which should cause you no concern. We frequently have letters from gardeners who have observed these small green fruit on potatoes and think they have a real new freak which will have tomatoes on top and potatoes underground.

Potatoes and tomatoes belong to the same botanical family and have similar fruits. Both actually are berries. If you want to be real exact about the whole thing, on the potato they remain relatively small and green and are of value only as a means of securing seeds, if you are trying to breed a new variety. On the tomato plant they become large and fleshy, turn red when ripe and are one of our most important vegetables.

Just what is a vegetable anyway? I just stated that a tomato is a fruit, and a berry, and a vegetable. This sounds like a rather loose and faulty use of terms. Actually the tomato is all three. It is a fruit because it develops from the pistil or center part of the flower, which usually contains the seeds. It is a berry type of fruit because it is soft and succulent all the way through.

If the tomato is a fruit, how can it be a vegetable? This is a question which has bothered horticulturists for many decades. Actually a vegetable is any edible part of a plant which you want to call a vegetable. It sounds crazy, but let's consider some different parts of a plant which are edible, and which we call vegetables.

Start with the root and work up. Carrots, beets, turnips and sweet potatoes are roots, which are also considered vegetables. In asparagus and broccoli we eat fleshy stems. You can observe that they are stems because they have the constrictions or nodes from which buds and leaves arise. The potato also is a stem. It just happens to grow underground but is actually a fat stem. The eyes of the potato are the nodes, which proves it is a stem. Roots do not have nodes. They sometimes develop buds, but if they do they are called adventitious buds because they develop in an unusual location rather than at nodes where most buds typically arise.

Many of the vegetables we eat are leaves. This includes kale, spinach, leaf lettuce, endive and celery. In celery we eat mostly the stalk or petiole of the leaf. This is not the stem. The stem is the small hard basal portion from which the long celery leaves arise.

In cabbage and head lettuce we eat enormous terminal buds which develop on the top of short stems. The bud is of course, composed of many tightly folded leaves, but the whole thing is a bud. In Brussels sprouts we eat small side or lateral buds.

In snap beans you eat the entire fruit which happens to be a legume. In shelled beans, baked beans and peas, we eat seeds. In the snap beans we

How does a writer for children's books get started?

"First I ghost-wrote the autobiography of a pet white rabbit," remembers Jean Lewis. The rabbit lived in China. So did Jean as a youngster.

Later she returned to her native America and as a teenager lived for a time in a small Southern town. She wrote a monologue about high-school belles, used it to audition for a radio program, and suddenly found herself an actress. After a variety of soap opera roles in radio she made a stage debut in a Helen Hayes play.

Women's Clubs to Encourage Beautification of Businesses

The General Federation of Women's Clubs has adopted a new national awards program to encourage businesses to improve their appearance through use of landscaping and other beautification techniques.

Mrs. Walter Varney Magee, president of the GFWC, said that the "Business for Beauty" program, as it is officially named, will be sponsored by Cities Service Oil Company (CITGO).

"The GFWC and CITGO both feel," Mrs. Magee said, "that there must be a new concern eat the entire fruit with the seeds inside.

There are many vegetables which actually are fruit, such as cucumbers, okra, pumpkins, squash, pepper, muskmelon and watermelon. In some cases we cut the fruit open and discard the seeds as in muskmelon and pumpkin. In many other cases, when the fruit is consumed when quite young, we eat the seeds, as in cucumbers, okra and summer squash. In sweet corn, the principal edible part is the seed, although it is actually a specialized type of fruit.

Have we confused you enough? As we said before, the term vegetable is used quite loosely to refer to almost any edible part of a plant. And really, what difference does it make? They are all good and good for you.

Youngsters

As a result of merging many arts, Jean soon found herself writing radio and television scripts and magazine stories. Writing had begun as a hobby but became a career. About five years ago she began working on children's books, finding children a direct, responsive and humorous audience.

"Youngsters like plenty of plot and action," she says.

Right now she is plotting a Hoppy Hooper book and Alvin the Chipmunk book for Whitman. Print-size readers always enjoy the goings-on when she pens an up-to-date animal fable.

for the environment of our communities in the years of growth which lie ahead.

"Beauty must be the goal in every area of our cities and not just in parks or selected suburban areas. Our organization's nearly one-million dues-paying members in the U. S., belonging to 15,000 clubs, will be explaining to businessmen that just a little improvement by their firms can materially improve the appearance of our nation."

To help stimulate action there will be local, state and national awards, climaxed by a banquet in the nation's capital at which cash grants of $5,000 will be given.

GFWC clubs which participate in the program will be supplying interested firms with a Business for Beauty landscaping manual to help guide their efforts. This manual, now being developed by CITGO, was prompted by earlier success of a company guide to landscaping for its service stations.

The company manual was designed strictly for internal use, according to Stanley D. Breitwieser, executive vice president of Cities Service Oil Company, a subsidiary of Cities Service Company, New York. Word of the book spread across the country, however, and thousands of copies were requested by planning boards, city commissions, businesses and other groups.

The fall webworm has begun to appear in this area. They build conspicuous tents in many different kinds of trees, including pecan, persimmon, sweetgum, willow, elm, and wild cherry.

The larvae are cream colored with dark heads and two rows of black spots along the sides. They are sparsely covered with fine gray hairs arising from orange-red tubercles. These often give the larvae a reddish appearance.

The large filmy tents in which the larvae live are the most characteristic thing about this insect. These tents enclose the ends of the branches, or, on small trees the entire tree may be covered.

To control these, use two tablespoonsful of DDT 50 percent Wettable powder or two tablespoonsful of Malathion 57 percent emulsifiable concentrate per gallon of water.

Be sure to read any precautions given on the container.

"This convinced us," Breitwieser said, "that a major contribution to the national beautification effort could be made with a general version of the manual, not confined to service station situations. With the GFWC using this manual in a major program, the potential for progress is great.

Member clubs of the GFWC are noted for their ability to motivate action in thousands of communities. Through their individual involvement, they'll be doing this in the Business for Beauty campaign."

At the local level, GFWC clubs will contact proprietors of many types of businesses—running the gamut from restaurants and retail shops to motels and manufacturing plants. They will be encouraged to beautify their firms through simple landscaping procedures and other steps. Participating firms will receive certificates of commendation and one business will be singled out by each club for special recognition and entry in state competition.

State winners will receive additional recognition and go into regional judging. A prestige group of judges will select the six national winners. They will be honored at an awards program in Washington, D. C., scheduled in fall of 1969. Cash grants will be given to the GFWC clubs sponsoring the top winners, to enable continuation of their beautification work.

Fashion and Costume Merge

Coral sheer wool is crafted cunningly for a smart little day dress for Fall '68... by Branel. Shaped thru the bosom, it glides gently down to an easy skirt. Hat by Mr. John.

Thinking of Fall and Winter 1968, the American designer has approached that pressure-cooked personality, the woman of today, as if he were directing her in an art film. To him, as to the sensitized camera eye, she is the complex dreamer, moving from fact to fantasy and back again in a constant montage of "selves" created by her clothes.

With her, and for her, fashion and "costume" now merge.

It is not enough, designers reason, to tell such women that fashion will be thus and so, to give her a new uniform or a new set of timely trends.

Without confusion, without being all over the lot, the designers indulge her complex shift of moods. They help her visualize the active, tick-of-time citizen, then lead her to dreams of Scheherazade, Carmen, Natasha, Kitty Foyle, Iris March, Rita Hayworth. She steps back into Marlene Dietrich's cuffed trousers and from there, lap dissolve into a close-up from "Little Women."

Realistically, American fashion for Fall 1968 marks pronounced and definitive change in basic silhouettes in newly velvet-surfaced fabrics, in the sweetened color palette spiced with black and moody neutrals, and in decoration as rich as crocus.

Today's new dimension is less kooky, sleeker, spare at top and flaring below. Most designers keep skirts above the knee, but they are always full. Armholes are high and the bosom high and small, but those are the only links with a childish past. The waist and hips are well defined. Hips are occasionally padded. Sleeves are long and tight, the neckline sometimes muffled (never turtleneck) but more often low.

Women welcomed the waistline before the designers expected them to. Coats, suit jackets and/or skirts, day and evening dresses, all have a belt. It may be an easy-lifting chain mixed with silk cords, a soft sash, a simple fabric belt, a wide uncompromising leather belt, or a rich jeweled girdle from the Arabian Nights.

Most belts encircle the natural waist, although there is a respectable bow to the high Empire, the low inset belt of the 19-teens and the low bloused line of the 1940s. Several houses show real waistcinchers of quilted leather or satin, worn outside. Petticoats are beginning to appear.

The bosom is less flat, although still soft and rounded. Skirts are most often soft and fluid in circular flares, or pleats. Some, however, are gathered or pinch-pleated into great fullness. These are made in fabrics which give them great form and volume.

Though necklines are less high for daytime, evening dresses often play with the jeweled dog collar or with deep ruffs of fur, flowers or feathers. Daringly low U or V necklines appear frequently.

There are three suit shapes. One is greatly elongated and willowy at the top, often with an inset belt set low and a longish skirt, the echo of the suffragette. Another has a chunky short jacket and skirt really dirndl-full. The most realistic today look has a hip-length jacket, belted with a slick leather belt. Below this there is always an easy moving skirt, either gored or A-line.

The coat of next winter will not freeze at the knees. It is always well below the dress length, sometimes exaggeratedly dropped to about 8 inches from the floor. This type is often fur-bordered and frog-fastened. Daughter-of-the-regiment. The new theme is the day coat over trousers and a shirt.

Military accents are everywhere. There are dough-boy tunics, Sam Browne belts, campaign coats, fatigue caps.

Coat collars are usually generous and wrapped to the chin above somewhat widened, and sometimes padded, shoulders and long straight sleeves.

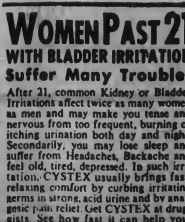

The evening looks play up allure in all its facets. Sharply cut, statuesque dresses of satin, taffeta, cut velvet and metal brocade have the clean gleam of a skyscraper, or the full, arrogant curves of the 18th Century. This newly blossoming fullness is counterpointed by slender, clinging and seductive Oriental shimmers, luminous transparencies of chiffon lame, jeweled chiffon or blazing, sequined lace.

Clothes are "good" again. The quick trick is sleazy quality is no longer amusing. Marvelous fabrics, elegant workmanship and expensive details return the words "investment" and "classic" to the fashion

Don't Judge By Its Cover

Can you remember back when old-fashioned blue and white mattress ticking was "discovered" by interior decorators? Ticking ended up on practically everything--chairs, sofas, windows, even walls.

So, when their long-time favorite material kidnapped by decorators, mattress manufacturers simply reversed the situation and substituted "decorator fabric" tickings. Manufacturers had discovered how to "dress up" their otherwise ungainly product.

Naturally, all this ticking beauty disappears when the bed is made. These shiny satens and dashing tickings can be greatly appealing, but don't ever judge a mattress by its cover.

In fact, ticking serves as the outside cover whose purpose is to hold together internal filling and insulation materials, plus most important of all, tension-packed coils of steel.

THE BEACH THIS WEEK

Wayside Robbed
-Virginia Beach police at last reports continued the search for thieves who made off with approximately $1,900 in cash and an undetermined amount of checks in a break-in at Wayside in the 4200 block of Virginia Beach Blvd. Police said the thieves entered the building through the roof, then forced open one of the office safes to get at the cash. Attempts to force open another safe failed. The theft occurred between the hours of the stores' closure on Tuesday night, and it's re-opening Wednesday morning.

Continuance Given
A continuance has been granted in the Juvenile Court proceedings against a 17-year-old Belts Road juvenile facing a manslaughter charge. Police said the juvenile was the driver of an auto which went out of control, hit a utility pole, then overturned several times on Sandbridge Road last April. Six teenagers in the car were injured. One of these, Otis B. Woolard, 17, of Wildwood Drive, died of head injuries one month after the accident. Judge Phillip Russo ordered a continuance in court proceedings pending a probation report on the background of the accused.

Man Charged
A 23-year-old man, stationed at the Navy's Dam Neck Guided Missile School, is awaiting court appearance on a charge of rape. Police officials told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the man, identified as Richard A. Allen, is accused of attacking a 19 year old girl behind the Sands Motel at 10th Street and Atlantic Avenue. Police quote the girl, who was vacationing in Virginia Beach, she accepted a ride from a man who offered to drive her to her apartment. Instead she was taken to the scene of the assault. The accused was reportedly arrested a short time after the attack when the girl saw the auto of her attacker drive past as she was reporting the attack to a police officer.

Juveniles Arrested
Three juveniles and an 18-year-old girl from Glen Burnie, Md., arrested by Virginia Beach police for vagrancy, are facing 12 felony charges in Maryland. Officials said they were found sleeping in an auto near the ocean front.

Vietnam Veteran Boosts Drive

Perhaps it was the picture of the young child sitting with Jerry Lewis on the Muscular Dystrophy poster, it may have been a personal feeling on the part of the young man to want to help a worthy cause, and yet the real reason behind his contributing $180 to the "M.D." drive, which has just concluded in Virginia Beach, may never be known.

The money, in the form of nine $20 bills, was put in an "M.D." donation container which had been placed on the counter inside Trader Nicks' Restaurant on Atlantic Avenue.

George Pearce, part owner of the restaurant, told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the man, described only as being in his early 20's, entered the restaurant with a male friend and the pair took a side booth. After a few moments, the anonymous philanthropist moved to a stool at the counter and placed an order with the waitress.

After a few moments, according to Pearce, he "began to stare at the 'M.D.' poster and starting sticking $20 bills into the container. A few moments later he left without saying anything." Upon seeing the amount of money left in the container, Pearce said he decided to place it in safekeeping on the chance the man may develop a change of heart, return to the restaurant and request a refund.

The following night the man, who to this moment has not been identified, returned to Trader Nicks. Pearce spoke with him about the previous evening and asked if he would like the money returned. Pearce says the unknown benefactor replied, "No, it was like blood money," that he had "just got back from Vietnam and I don't want the money back."

Pearce contacted Virginia Beach Borough Fire Chief E.B. Bayne, who is serving as president of the Tidewater Muscular Dystrophy Association, for collection of the contribution. To explain what the contribution means Bayne says the drive each year in Virginia Beach usually results in approximately $400 from 100 donation containers placed around the city.

The total contributions received from the container at Trader Nicks' amounted to $185.71. Incidentally, the anonymous donor's political feelings may be indicated in his gift. The container's are advised to allow contributions in favor of "Republican Friends" or "Democratic Friends". In this particular case the "Democratic" contributions amounted to six $20 bills, with the "Republicans" receiving three $20 bills.

By the way, the bills are genuine. This was verified by a local bank official who checked them for Chief Bayne in the event they might turn out to be counterfeit.

'Boy Friend' Has New Look In Cavalier Theatre Musical

Cavalier Dinner Playhouse is currently presenting a very different version of Sandy Wilson's well-known and oft-produced musical comedy, "The Boy Friend."

We have always seen it before as a sweet little spoof of life in the 1920's. It is a refreshing piece, full of the spirit and nostalgia of the era in both songs and dialogue.

But the Cavalier production is a greatly exaggerated farce, liberally combining energetic and loud production numbers with broad gestures and facial expressions reminiscent of the Keystone Cops.

It is not fair to say this is the wrong way to do this show, but the Cavalier production, under the direction of Woody Eney, comes off too superficial and loses a good deal of the charm that is written in. Sherry Loving has created some complicated and strenuous production dance numbers which are at times too much for the cast, but generally they get away with them well, particularly when Miss Loving herself is in the numbers.

Only the tango number by Skip Newton and Pamela Ely falls entirely flat. This comedy routine replaces the usual precision dance number which is a highlight of the show.

The story concerns a French finishing school full of rich American girls. The school is operated by a gentleman with a questionable past. One of the girls is Polly Browne, sweet young thing without a boyfriend. Her father comes to visit, and it seems he and Madame DuBonnet, the school operator, knew each other very well in years gone by.

Theresa Stallings plays a very superficial Polly, but does quite well in the musical numbers. Her father is played by William Pitts, who is far too young to play the role, even with much makeup. His blustering characterization makes him almost a bit of a doll and is questionable.

VI Ragan, as Madame DuBonnet, is excellent, and holds the show together with her outstanding warmth, her fine-tuning voice and her tremendous stage presence.

Welton Smith, who plays Polly's inevitable boyfriend, is quite good in his juvenile role. He is a good singer and dancer. And Hugh Williams does a nice job as Maisie's (Sherry Loving) impetuous boyfriend.

Tom Story and Lois Porter have some nice moments as the rich mother and father of Polly's boyfriend.

The chorus is made up of the rest of the students and their boyfriends. They are Barbara Ann Simpson, Celeste Vaillancourt, Gay Hobbs, Charles Cox, David Dexter, and Bill Goffred. It is debatable how ever, that one of the boyfriends should be a baby-faced youth with a pasted-on mustache who has his voice not yet changed. Rounding out the cast are Kathleen McDonald and Jim Noelander.

The settings are pleasing and do not restrict the cast in any way. It is therefore hard to understand why the entire production was directed entirely to the front when the audience sits on three sides of this theatre. It was particularly disturbing to those of us on the side.

While there are flaws, the production is fun and pleasant and good fare for a summer evening. HJL

Party Gains Momentum

It started out as a small party for 700 people, but has now turned into a little larger get together, for 1,400 people.

L. Charles Burlage, prominent attorney and owner-operator of the Breakers Hotel in Virginia Beach has invited the 1,400 businessmen and interested citizens from all over the city to the party.

The party is not really a party at all, although refreshments will be served after the business is conducted. The business concerns a 15-point plan authored by Burlage concerning expansion of the resort industry in Virginia Beach and makes clear how not only the city fathers but also businesses in all sections of the city may be involved in the resort industry.

Burlage has pointed out that the resort industry is second to none in Virginia Beach and extremely important to the economy. He says that sections other than the oceanfront area are not taking full advantage of ways they may participate in the industry.

At Burlage's meeting at Cox High School on Monday Aug. 12, at 8 p.m., a panel discussion will be held on the matter. Burlage said the response to the invitations has been excellent and that he is looking forward to a large crowd. He also noted that several other groups, including the Virginia Beach Innkeepers Association are also working on the same plans and through the efforts of everyone concerned he believes Virginia Beach can become a major resort unparalleled on the east coast.

The 15-point program is not new. Burlage presented it to the Innkeepers Association some months ago. Charles Gardner, president of the association, has submitted the plan to the press on several occasions and since that time, it has received widespread publicity.

Gardner and Littleton Hudgins appeared before an informal session of City Council to present the points and to make a request for a city tourist commission similar to an industrial development commission already operating within the city. The Innkeepers, according to Gardner, feel that the commission should be a municipal function, rather than a function of the industry itself, because of the value of the resort-oriented businesses to the city.

The proposed program by Burlage and Gardner includes activities that could be expanded and fulfilled by the new commission. If and when created, some of the facilities that the program calls for expansion of include: more public recreational facilities, such as golf courses, public beaches, tennis courts and the like; a new highway to connect the outer banks of Virginia and North Carolina; parimutuel horse racing; liquor-by-the-drink; additional hunting facilities; a complete

Impact Holdup Raises Problems

With Congress in recess for the political conventions, the whole matter of the release of federal impact funds remains in limbo.

There is strong speculation that the President's decision to freeze the funds earmarked for the education of students in federally-impacted areas is not the final round in the long fight for the funds, but it is creating a number of major questions in Virginia Beach.

A few weeks ago there was reason to believe the impact funds, $90.9 million nationwide, passed as a supplemental amount last year, would not be released because of economy moves. The supplement had just managed to squeak by Congress after a floor fight. But this year First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing, Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Jr. and Sen. William B. Spong, Jr., among others, led floor fights for the release and until last week their objective was supposedly accomplished.

Then President Johnson refused to release the funds, immediately a Senate floor fight ensued, ending in an amendment to the foreign aid bill.

Immediately a number of names were mentioned prominently for the job. Owen Pickett, Richard Guy and Richard Welton said they would not be candidates, as had been suggested. Reid Ervin, who ran for the seat in 1966 and was beaten by Simmons said he was interested, but would not campaign for the post.

Only J. Hugh Barnes, Jr., whose name was also mentioned was actively campaigning for the appointment expected to be made by the remaining members of Council.

Then at the end of the week Simmons said he had been urged to reconsider his resignation by several members of Council, and that he was doing so. All speculation for a successor or active or passive campaigning stopped and has remained stopped.

At Monday's informal Council meeting the only mention of the matter was a remark by City Manager Roger Scott who noted that he had been considering naming a replacement for Simmons on a Council committee looking into the purchase of Pennsylvania Railroad property at Little Creek by the city. He said that in light of Simmons' reconsideration he would not recommend any change until the decision is final one way or the other.

Simmons, when he was contacted by the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, said that he would announce his final decision before the next regular meeting next Monday.

He added that the decision would be based in part on his doctor's analysis of his condition. Simmons has been suffering from severe arthritis aggravated by tension.

"I have been grateful for the concern of my fellow Councilmen," said Simmons, "especially those who have urged me to reconsider."

He said also that it is a difficult decision to make since he has enjoyed serving the city as a Councilman.

College Is Step Closer

The site in Virginia Beach selected for a community college will be examined sometime the end of August or the first part of September.

Statewide 18 sites of 30 proposed colleges have already been chosen. In each case the municipality must furnish the site and the state will build the college through the newly created State Board of Community Colleges set up two years ago.

The consulting group, headed by Dr. Eric Rhodes, which chose the sites examined several sites in Virginia Beach recently and said the group's recommendations will be made to the board soon. While they were here they looked at three separate sites, but would not say which they favored.

The group, along with a number of city officials, visited the city-owned Green Run Farm where the city has offered 100 acres for the site. The city's vocational-technical high school will also be built on property nearby and other recreational uses are planned for the additional land there.

The group also looked over another 100 acres at the Wood Farm on Centerville Turnpike.

Simmons Reconsiders Resignation

The matter of a vacancy on Virginia Beach City Council is still a matter of question. Lynn-haven Councilman C. Dewey Simmons, Jr. announced his resignation during an informal Council meeting on July 19 due to health and financial reasons.

He left the meeting immediately after and said that this was his final decision and one that he had been considering for some time.

Council took steps to accept the resignation formally at the next regular meeting to be held Monday Aug. 12 and to prepare a resolution commending him for his work on Council since 1966.

Immediately a number of names were mentioned prominently for the job. Owen Pickett, Richard Guy and Richard Welton said they would not be candidates, as had been suggested. Reid Ervin, who ran for the seat in 1966 and was beaten by Simmons said he was interested, but would not campaign for the post.

Only J. Hugh Barnes, Jr., whose name was also mentioned was actively campaigning for the appointment expected to be made by the remaining members of Council.

He said that in light of Simmons' reconsideration he would not recommend any change until the decision is final one way or the other.

While Business Booms So Do Traffic Problems

Even the skeptics and the perpetual worriers among the resort business operators have had to admit that business is good at the beach this summer.

There is little doubt that business is booming along the oceanfront. The tax receipts again show a major increase over last year. They were up 44.6 per cent in June of this year over 1967, and July supposedly was even better. The one per cent city tax on the motel, hotel and restaurant businesses netted $4,554,182 in June, and business appears almost cer-

Investigation Is Complicated

An investigation continues into how a 25-caliber pistol, a box of 25-caliber ammunition and hacksaw blades found their way into the Virginia Beach City jail.

According to a police report the items were discovered in a search of the jail by Sheriff's deputies and uniformed police officers from the First Police Precinct. Indications are the search was made on the basis of information from a trusty at the jail reporting a gun had been hidden in one of the cell blocks.

A reliable source told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the items were discovered in the second floor cell block of the older portion of the jail, initial reports said the pistol and ammunition were found concealed under a prisoner's bunk. However, the SUN's source disputes this by saying the items were concealed in an area which connects waterlines into the jail. The package reportedly had been tied to one of the waterlines. It would have, however, been impossible for any prisoner confined to this section of the jail, which is defined as a maximum security region, to be able to reach the weapons, according to the source. The area of concealment is protected by steel plates and steel doors.

A controversy surrounds who was responsible for placing the weapons in the cell block. It has been speculated a trusty, who would have access to the area, may have been responsible. The question also centers around the possibility of a visitor of one of the prisoners bringing the items into the jail. It should however be pointed out that, according to the SUN's

Surfers Still Want More Space

City Councilmen spent another two hours in an informal meeting Monday discussing matters that will come before the regular meeting Monday, Aug. 12 at 2 p.m. at City Hall.

Added to the three informal hours last Monday and the hour-and-a-half briefing prior to the regular meeting, Council will have spent a total of six-and-a-half hours in discussion for a meeting that hopefully will not last that long. Some of the matters discussed informally will not come up next Monday, but will arrive in the public sessions at a later date.

One of the major items that came before the informal session Monday concerned an urgent request of the Virginia Beach Jaycees for an additional 200 yards north of the existing surfing area at Steel Pier during the East Coast Surfing Championship two-day event. After discussion a week earlier City Manager Scott had denied the request and offered smaller yardage south of the pier as a substitute for those not participating in the contest.

Webb Brown, Tuck Finlay and Mickey Hayes, representing the Jaycees said that area was dangerous although it was used for the same purpose a year ago. Council said it would reconsider the request and let the tain to be on the way to a record year. And 1967 was considered a good year also.

The only obvious explanation is that there are more people at the beach more of the time. And no one is more acutely aware of that right now than is Director of Traffic Safety, Reeves E. Johnson.

His traffic counts have been placed at a number of key points on major streets in Virginia Beach Borough and on all major roads coming into the borough. The results of these traffic counts are not complete, but Johnson says the vehicles are in the borough in record numbers this summer.

The need for a number of drastic changes in traffic are foreseen by Johnson, as well as the City Planning Commission and the Dept. of Public Works and Highways. All are in the process of compiling information about the current traffic congestion with an eye toward doing something about it before Atlantic Avenue becomes a giant parking lot. Incidentally parking is one of the major areas being studied also.

The Planning Commission is involved at present in studying the economic effects of the tourist businesses on the city and the proper use of land left in the borough.

The Dept. of Public Works and Highways is working with the others toward creating new streets, such as an extension of Holly Road northward from Laskin Road to about 35th Street, as recommended by the Wilbur Smith study of the Southeastern Regional Planning Commission.

The big question now is whether the major downtown thoroughfare can be relieved. There is speculation that it can if Atlantic Avenue is made one-way northbound, and Pacific Avenue is made one-way southbound, to tie in with a widened and divided Atlantic Parkway north of the Cavalier Hotel and with the removal of all parking on Atlantic Avenue and much of Pacific Avenue. The removal of the once unwanted median strip along Pacific Avenue that cost $75,000 is also being considered.

Many of the motel, hotel and restaurant operators have long been opposed to a one-way Atlantic Avenue, but most are beginning to see the reasoning behind such a move and are now even encouraging city fathers to take such a step. If this is done, there is also speculation that east-west streets between 17th and 31st Streets will also become one-way in alternating directions.

Off-street parking is also seen as a critical need and is now under some study with intensified study expected to begin in the fall. Johnson says he thinks that the city should possibly acquire land for controlled or metered parking lots. He also suggested that private interests might also be interested in parking lots, but said none have come forward so far.

Johnson cited the Civic Center as a parking problem. He said parking is allowed there free through the day and that it is often difficult for patrons of night activities there to find a place to park nearby because of the all-day free parking.

Downing Names Assistant

A former administrative assistant to a Member of Congress has joined the staff of Rep. Thomas N. Downing as a staff assistant in his Virginia Beach District office. The First District Representative announced today that Mrs. Elizabeth D. Heater has succeeded Mrs. Barbara Simile who has held the position of secretary in that office since it was opened at Princess Anne Court House early this year.

Prior to joining Congressman Downing's staff, Mrs. Heater was administrative assistant to Rep. Seymour Halpern of New York, serving as the top aide to the New York Congressman in his Washington office.

Her previous Capitol Hill experience included serving for a period of five years as the Chief Clerk of the Legal and Monetary Affairs Subcommittee under the direction of Congressman John Blain (Ala.), office manager for Congressman Marvin Eide of Michigan, and as a technical aide to the late Sen. Clair Engle of California.

"I am especially pleased to have a person of Mrs. Heater's professional capabilities on my District staff," said Downing. "Her long association with the Congress and with various governmental agencies will be especially beneficial to area residents and will enable me to provide even greater service to them."

Mrs. Heater has only recently moved to the Virginia Beach area where she is affiliated with the newly-built Shaker's Pizza Parlor on Virginia Beach Blvd. at Princess Anne Plaza, which is to be opened in the very near future.

In making this announcement, Downing said that the office will continue to be open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and also announced that a direct telephone line from the Virginia Beach office to Washington is being installed in order to provide immediate access to his office and to the government agencies located in Washington.

Linda Phillips Is Miss V.B.

Linda Gayle Phillips, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Phillips of Josephine Crescent, was crowned Miss Virginia Beach of 1969 Friday night at the Civic Center.

First Runner-Up was Marilyn June Thompson, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Thompson of Chesapeake Trail. Second Runner-Up was Ann Elizabeth Cherryman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rexford R. Cherryman of Auerston Lane.

Miss Phillips, a five-foot, six-inch brunet with hazel eyes and long dark auburn hair, presented a comic talent skit featuring impersonations of Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, Peggy Lee and Ethel Merman and winding up singing in her own voice. She plans to study dramatics at Old Dominion College this fall.

Her prizes included a college scholarship, makeup kit and the use of an Oldsmobile from Phillips Bros. for a year. She will also receive a wardrobe for the 1969 Miss Virginia Contest and a trip to the contest in Roanoke.

Rick Allen of radio station WVAB was master of ceremonies, and Mrs. Ellen MacKay was pageant director.

Other contestants were Sherry Lee Turley who was voted Miss Congeniality by the other girls, Debra Jo Schwartz, Marilee Lee Miller, Bonnie Deane Burbage, Marilyn Diana Skelton, Alice Daniels, Sandra Elizabeth Merritt, Valerie Ryan and Carol Ellen Renkovich. Police Boat Hits Piling, Sinks

The Virginia Beach 38-foot police boat has just undergone a complete overhaul and paint job, and was being tested out yesterday morning when it hit a submerged piling and sank in about 18 feet of water at 8:35 a.m.

On board were Capt. Robert K. Halstead, who commands the old converted Coast Guard boat, police diver Alfred Gregg and the son of Police Chief J.E. Moore, Jr., J.E. Moore, Jr.

The boat was being tested out and after a trial run was heading for Lynnhaven Inlet and Barco's Marina when in plain sight of hundreds of bathers it struck a tilted wooden piling about a quarter of a mile from shore in front of the Mariner Hotel at 56th Street.

Gregg said, "I thought at first we hit a big fish or a porpoise. It didn't feel like much."

Capt. Halstead said as soon as it happened, he knew they had hit something big. He turned the boat seaward and said later, "I looked toward the stern and by the time I turned again toward the bow, she was going down. Most of the bottom must have been gone from end to end."

The boat went to the bottom in less than four minutes. A number of surfers headed toward the boat on their boards and rescued Moore, who reportedly could not swim and was being pushed out to sea by the tide. All the crew wore life jackets, however.

An unidentified boater in an outboard rig then appeared and brought the men ashore after they tied a small raft to the mast of the boat.

Several people who are staying at the Mariner said they saw the boat directly offshore, heard a noise, then heard the engine rev and finally saw the boat sink. Ben Lecompe, a guest at the hotel and a long time visitor to Virginia Beach from Richmond said the old pile was used by a former owner of land where the Mariner now stands to tie up his cabin cruiser while he came ashore. He said the shiping

Audiences Welcome Festival

The Friends of Music's first Music Festival in its first week received enthusiastic support from the people of Virginia Beach as well as from tourists and people from surrounding areas.

Tonight, Aug. 8 at 8:30 p.m., the Recorder Society and the Recorder Consort of Colonial Williamsburg will present an evening of Baroque and contemporary music for the recorder.

This evening's concert will feature the works of two local composers: Johan Franco and Thomas Rice.

The Recorder Society, directed by Charles Hardin, merged with the Recorder Consort of Colonial Williamsburg in 1967 and recently made a video tape film displaying the many facets of the instruments they use for WHTO-TV.

The concert will be in the Small Festival Hall at the Civic Center.

On Friday and Saturday nights of this week William Warfield, baritone, and Veronica Tyler, soprano, international stars of the music world, will perform in concert with the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra and the Norfolk Cantata Chorus with Russell Stanger conducting.

A highlight of the evenings' concerts will be the presentation of the full concert version of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess." Miss Tyler in Moscow in June of 1966 added the second prize of the Tschakovsky International Music Competition to the collection of awards which document the numerous successes she has attained in her still young career.

Warfield began his vocal studies at the Eastman School of Music of Rochester University and studied under the American Theatre Wing's Professional Training Program for veterans. He sang the role of Porgy, with his wife, Leontyne Price as Bess, in the touring company of "Porgy and Bess" in Europe. His finest film was "Show Boat" in 1951.

The final week's events include the Feldman Chamber Music Society on Aug. 11 and the Armed Forces School of Music Band (free) on Aug. 12. Next Wednesday's concert will feature Odette, vibrant folk singing contralto, who has been receiving praise throughout the world while delighting audiences from concert halls and nightclub stages, on records, in films and on television.

The conflict of interest conflict goes on. Nine more Virginia Beach men received letters from Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans indicating that some of their business interests appeared to be in conflict with some of their present or past municipal positions.

Evans wrote the nine that it would seem they are in violation of the state law which also calls for repayment of any conflicting amounts. The letters did not specify a total for any of the men.

The newest recipient of the letters includes Councilman George Ferrell, former School Supt. Frank W. Cox, Rudee Inlet Authority and Industrial Authority chairman Frank Kellam, former Board of Electrical Examiners, Frank W. Kellam, Jr. and John Nixon who resigned recently. School Board member Dr. Charles Fletcher and present or at City Advertising Board members Floyd E. Kellam, Jr., C. McCurry and Frank J. Hall, Jr.

Evans has also noted that still others are under investigation for possible conflicts. He has filed suit against former Police and Trial Board chairman Richard Holland to recover about $214,000 in funds Evans says were received illegally by a firm of which Holland is president.

No other suits will be instituted until that one is settled, according to Evans, although he has also sought recovery of about $775,000 from Sidney S. Kellam. In all other cases to date a specific total amount has been mentioned in the letters.

The majority of the nine who received the recent letters are connected with Beach Publishing Corp., publishers of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN. The conflict allegedly comes through the publishing of the city's legal advertising.

Bogus Bills Passed At Seaside

Five counterfeit $20 bills were passed at the Seaside Amusement Park, the fifth discovered in currency accepted for purchases at Forbes Candy Co. salt water taffy and gift shop, near 31st Street and Atlantic Avenue.

Miss Eleanor Duquet, amusement park manager, told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the bills were apparently passed at food and refreshment stands near the main entrance to the park, possibly during the Saturday night heavy business period. The bills were identified as phonies during the counting of cash receipts from these stands that night.

The bills each contained the same serial number H442088-21A, bore the black numeral 8 in each corner of the face of bills, and the letter H inside a seal to the left of the portrait of Jackson. The lower right hand corner of face of the bills also bore the capital letter "E" with a small number 19. The lower right corner of the back of the bill contains the number 15.

Upon close examination the bills give a very clumsy appearance in print. The serial number on several of the bills is slanted on an angle, running the number into the word "Washington, D.C.", while the seal, behind the word "20" to the right of the portrait of Jackson, is not properly centered behind the word. The usual thread line markings which are visible on true paper bills are missing from the face of the "phonies."

In answer to questions about the significance of the bills turning up in Virginia Beach, L.M. Farmer, director of the Norfolk office of the Secret Service, told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN "It appears at this time someone who came into the area passed only a few of the bills, and there doesn't appear to be any amount of such activity at the present time to warrant any alarm."

Capt. Richard C. Davis, 2nd Police Precinct C. O., Capt. William W. Davis, director of the Police Department Detective Bureau, and City Traffic Safety Director Reeves Johnson were in Roanoke this past week attending a refresher course for graduates of the FBI National Academy. During the two day session Capt. William Davis was elected treasurer of the Commonwealth of Virginia Association of graduates of the Academy. Reeves Johnson, who is a past president of the state association presided over the installation of officers for the coming year.

Milton Holland, Chief Fire Inspector for the city says the field has been narrowed to five men in search for a man to fill an opening in the Fire Inspection Bureau. According to Holland screening and testing of the five applicants should be completed this month with the new man taking office by Sept. 1.

J. P. Louis Sergeant is back on duty at the Princess Anne Courthouse J. P. office after spending a few days relaxing in Gallatin, Tenn. We understand Sergeant spent most of the time catching up on his "loafin' by just taking it easy."

Eldon Swartzentruber, chief of the Kempsville Volunteer Fire Department, says his department has just placed an order with a New York firm for a new pump engine for the department. However, the arrival date of the new apparatus is uncertain.

Tommy Pharr, one of our

Virginia Beach city jailers, has been released from the hospital following a lengthy confinement due to illness. We understand Tommy is doing fine and is recuperating at home.

Those who attended the "Open House" ceremony marking the first anniversary of the 3rd Police Precinct were given an unexpected example of the musical talents of police officer W. H. Smith, Jr. As Smith was standing in formation awaiting the posting of the oncoming shift of the evening shift, Marine Lt. Col. C. J. Gilroy, Jr., master of ceremonies for the afternoon program, called Smith from the ranks and requested he take the baton and lead the Navy Band, on hand for the occasion, in a few musical selections. Incidentally, Smith gave a magnificent performance.

On Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 7 p.m. of each week there is a special performance for children of the Pussycat Puppet Theatre, in the Small Festival Hall. Admission is $1.

The festival will conclude with another concert of Baroque Music by the Recorder Society on Thursday, Aug. 15 and concerts on Friday and Saturday by Gary Graffman, pianist, with the Norfolk Symphony.

Committee Announced

Chamber Pres. Frank Kellam and the Executive Committee has named an area stadium study committee to work with other similar groups within the city of Virginia Beach.

The new Chamber committee will concern itself initially in making a study of the existing committees within the city dealing with this subject. It is hoped the Chamber committee might, after reviewing the work already accomplished, coordinate the efforts of the various groups.

Named to the Stadium Committee are Larry Sanello, chairman; Fred Napolitano and R. Bradshaw Pulley.

City May Be Stuck With Bills

Unless Federal help arrives soon, the City of Virginia Beach may be stuck with a bill of about $2.5 million on its hands.

The city bought 137.2 acres of land to be used as a recreational facility, located on Little Island. The purchase bill was for $522,000. The city had hoped that about half of the bill could be met by the federal government, and an application for $266,350.73 was sent in hopes of receiving this amount. The bill has been sent three times, and so far, no results have taken place.

Rudee Inlet poses the other half of the monetary problem. The city made an application to the State Outdoor Recreation Commission for $145,250 last winter, in hopes that if this sum was met, they would proceed to ask the federal government for about $300,000 to compensate the costs of the high-level bridge and the inlet's jetties. The cost of construction has amounted to approximately $1.4 million, and no funds have been received.

One alternative that can be made if the state does not come through with the money is the issuance of non-referendum bonds or by budgeting city funds for the 1969-70 fiscal year. Another possibility would be to seek bids from private individuals who are interested in either facility.

Seaside Features Chimps

"Charlotte and Her Chimps" one of the most amusing circus acts on tour today, are the free attraction at Seaside Amusement Park for this week giving two performances daily at 2:30 and 10 p.m. on the park's outdoor stage.

The chimps, dressed in Indian garb, go through a routine of war dances and play various instruments, such as the tambourine and drum.

Capes Swimmers Lose Two Meets

The Capes Swimming and Diving Team suffered two defeats in a row, last Thursday and Tuesday.

On Thursday, the team lost to the Mallory Swim Club of Norfolk by a score of 208-205. The meet was held at the Capes pool.

The team suffered their second defeat on Tuesday to the Churchland Swim and Racket Club. The final score was 213-195.

On Tuesday, August 15, the championship meet will be held at the Capes pool. The event will begin at 2 p.m.

Coaches Nelson Workman and Pam Heishober are hopeful that the team can pull from their slump and take a first in this meet.

Kim Kyle from the Capes gets ready for a splash down that earned her four points.

League to Fight Zoning

The Board of Zoning Appeals has a case on its hands after Monday night's decision granting permission to the Lake George Corp. to subdivide 48 lots between 78th and 89th Streets formally known as Holly Avenue.

The North Virginia Beach Civic League and Planning Director Patrick Standing says that the board's action constituted a rezoning of the area. Section 15.1-495 which defines the powers of boards in the state, specifically prohibits a board from rezoning land.

The Lake George Corp. is represented by lawyer Garland Layton. Layton says that the board's merely granted a variance. Layton said, "I think they (the civic league) would object to the return of James Christ." He also said that he did not think the action of the league represented the majority of the northern Virginia Beach residents.

Dr. G. William Whitehurst, dean of students at Old Dominion College, will be the guest speaker at the combined graduation exercises of Norfolk College and Princess Anne Business College at 8 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 9, at the Golden Triangle Motor Hotel. Dr. Whitehurst also is a Republican candidate for Congress from the Second Congressional District.

Both Princess Anne Business College and Norfolk College offer business courses to prepare people for office employment.

Long Docket Faces Planning Commission

The City Planning Commission faces a 26-item docket at its regular meeting on Aug. 13 at City Hall, but commission members are hopeful the docket won't take better than four hours to finish, as did the 35-item docket a month ago.

For the first time in recent memory only one new item concerns living units. Bernard Jaffe is seeking a use permit for 283 townhouses on the south side of Bonney Road across from S. Corwood Avenue in the Thalia Village area.

While some controversy may come up at the meeting, the agenda appears far less controversial than those faced by the planners in recent months.

City Council has three applications before the commission. The first would change all agricultural-restricted zoning in Blackwater, Pungo and Princess Anne boroughs to Agricultural-Restricted so that proper use of the land can better be selected. The measure had no objection from Councilmen in those areas.

Council is also seeking to amend the City code barring the storage, dumping or accumulation of animal or fowl manure within 150 feet of any property where the odor may cause a nuisance.

The third Council application calls for rezoning of property on the south side of the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway and along the north side of the Norfolk and Southern Railroad in the Greenhatch area to General Industrial.

In addition the School Board of the City of Virginia Beach is seeking a use permit to build the new Bayside Junior High School on Newtown Road near Sullivan Blvd. in the Aragon-Newsome Farm area.

Ruby Hall Dostler is asking a zoning change to allow for a taxicab office with minor repairs on land located on Diamond Springs Road across from Aragon Drive. A similar application which included a use permit for a service station in conjunction with the taxicab siding somewhere nearby. Some years ago that would have been a problem. The now dismantled railroad at one time went through the property on its route from Kempsville to Back Bay. The crowds at last year's fair neared the 100 thousand mark, and Rose said he is expecting a much larger crowd this year at the expanded site where the permanent facilities offer so much more to the public.

College

at Kempsville Road, W.E. Wood, Jr., Roy Charles, Frank Warren and Leon Hall have offered to donate the acreage for the college there.

The other site visited lies adjacent to a new subdivision near the Virginia Beach-Chesapeake line on the Coleman Farm. The 100-acre tract on Interstate 64 have been offered by Larry Goldrich of a development corporation.

Funds for the development of Virginia Beach's community college are tied up in the $81 million bond issue to be voted on in November. The issue is being pushed along by Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr. in every speech he makes.

Portsmouth already has Frederick College, now to operate as a two-year community college. Norfolk's Old Dominion University Technical School is considered a community college. Two others, in Chesapeake and Virginia Beach, will complete the four colleges recommended by the state to fill the higher educational needs of the south Tidewater area. Another community college is already under construction on the Peninsula.

Virginia Beach has had a City Council committee working with state officials for some time to determine the best site for the college. They were optimistic after the visit by Dr. Rhodes and his group that a community college in Virginia Beach is one step closer to becoming a reality.

Boat Sinks

had stood straight up even at high tide for about 15 years, but had somehow been tilted during the winter and was no longer visible at high tide.

It will no longer be visible either. The U.S. Army, U.S. Coast Guard and the police all worked together yesterday afternoon to pull it away.

The city sent a small crane out to the scene and a number of small boats gathered during the early afternoon to watch salvage operations. Finally a LARC V from the 305th Transportation Co. at Fort Story and the Virginia Beach Coast Guard LARC 5 hooked lines together and, using the combined horsepower, managed to drag the heavily damaged boat ashore. The line parted twice during the operation and once tore another part of the bow off the boat.

Late Wednesday afternoon there was no estimate of damage, but there was speculation that the boat, about 40 years old, was probably a total loss.

No one was injured in the mishap.

Police divers attached the lines to the boat and to the LARC's. They were Sgt. Norman C. Morse, Officers George Ball, Richard T. Munford, and Alfred Gregg, who were assisted in the water by officer Stanley F. Bennett, Jr.

A large crowd gathered on the beach to watch the combined Coast Guard, Army and Police operation, which ended late Wednesday afternoon.

Jaycees know in plenty of time. Standing's report did not include the area from London Bridge to Birdneck Road, despite his complete study of the underway of current and future uses of land in that area, as well as the same area along Laskin Road.

Scott informed Council of his intent to lower the speed limit on Oceana Blvd. and on Princess Anne Road from Dam Neck to the C.A. House. The original recommendation came from traffic safety, chief. Reeves Johnson who said a number of complaints had been received in the area. The limit will be lowered from 55 to 45 miles per hour. Council had no objections.

Scott reported to Council that Beach Transport Co., operators of the jitneys, will extend service to the courthouse area on a trail 60-day basis as had been requested by city employees. The jitneys will make the run only during morning and afternoon peak traffic times. It was also disclosed that the jitney operators will soon be appearing before Council to seek a rate hike okay.

In addition Council agreed to move its second September meeting to the last Monday in the month to allow the City Manager and other officials to attend the Virginia Municipal League Convention in Roanoke.

Plaza Volunteer Fire Dept. bids for two new fire engines were again taken under advisement but will apparently be rejected because they do not meet the city's new specifications, drawn while Plaza was getting the bids. Scott suggested that possibly all variations might be worked out with Purchasing Agent Carroll Clogh.

Scott also informed Council members that federal and state grants totaling $40,000 had been released for construction of the long-awaited boat ramp on Owl's Creek, which will include a parking area, timber pier, some dredging of the channel and a new entrance road. The land was given to the city by the state of Virginia for this purpose. The formal announcement came from the office of Senator William B. Spong a few hours later. Construction is expected to begin immediately.

Impact

that froze $122 million in foreign aid unless the impact funds were released. While the release of both may yet come, the impact funds will be far behind the Aug. 1 deadline.

A new effort was begun almost immediately by Spong who introduced an amendment to another bill extending to Sept. 30 the deadline for spending the impact funds.

The major contention now is that the funds were expected by school districts and accounted for in budgets, only now to find they will not receive the funds. The impact program has been in effect since the early 1950's, and Virginia receives amounts second only to California in the United States. Some $10.9 had been earmarked for Tidewater in the supplemental bill.

There is little doubt that eventual loss of the funds will work a hardship on Virginia Beach, where $484,000 is at stake. School Supt. E.E. Brickell noted that if the funds are not forthcoming the 1958-59 budget will have to be sharply evaluated and that City Council may eventually have to be called upon to make up the difference somehow.

Voting on the Spong amendment and on any other measures

Traffic

the linemen's Association are reportedly working with the governmental agencies to relieve the congestion.

The new Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway has changed traffic patterns in the borough considerably, according to Johnson, and has had much impact on the traffic congestion. Also there is no major construction going on anywhere on roads at or to Virginia Beach, and more people are travelling the new or improved roads.

For this reason, said Johnson, the studies must be made during the summer to see just how great the problems are.

If the speculation is correct, and there is good reason to believe it is, the face of Virginia Beach Borough will change again by next summer with a whole new traffic pattern of streets, and more roads or parking lots will be at least to the drawing board stage by then.

ures which could restore the funds is scheduled after the political conventions, but those who could be most severely affected are still somewhat optimistic.

Travers and Ralph Festa, Fair ass't. manager look over fairgrounds for place to set up the carnival. The building to be transformed into an exhibit hall is in the background.

Fair Finds Home

The third annual Greater Tidewater Fair is well along the way toward fair-time. The dates of the event are Sept. 27-Oct. 5, which includes for the first time two weekends.

In its first two years the fair was presented at Hilltop on a site between Virginia Beach Blvd. and Laskin Road where a shopping center had been scheduled to be built.

Criticism of the site included traffic problems, as heavy traffic tried to get into the one gate to a small parking lot, the fact that the parking lot was not well lighted or paved and that there was not enough area for all the expected fair exhibits.

All that is changed now. The fair has moved to the old abandoned Navy airfield at Pungo. And work crews are working almost around the clock to get the site ready for the big show.

An old abandoned barracks is being converted into a large exhibit hall for commercial and industrial displays. Outside there is a large area around the building for larger exhibits and public service booths.

Bleachers have been placed on the property for this event, but will also serve for races, rodeos and the like throughout the year. The bleachers will seat about 8,000 people, at each grandstand performance.

Grandstand acts are being booked at present, according to general manager Steve Rose. A high fence will be built around the seats.

Other existing buildings on the property will be converted to rest rooms and storage sheds, but Rose hopes to turn the large abandoned Bachelor Officers Quarters into an apartment house for a caretaker and his family in the future.

Besides the area needed for the carnival which will play at the fair, the rest of the 51 acre site will be used for parking. Paving wasn't necessary. The parking area will utilize the old paved quarter-mile runways and will hold an estimated eight to ten thousand cars. Nine separate gates from different access roads will bring traffic into the grounds.

The fairgrounds will be lighted throughout, but 18 mercury vapor street lights will be erected along Route 615 on the front of the grounds. Already the entire area has been fenced in with chain link fence covering 3,800 feet. Barbed wire on top should keep out intruders.

The famous 50-railroad car James E. Strates Show will be the carnival at the fair. The show, owned by a 34-year-old man, he considered the largest on the road today. Rose said he was pleased he was able to get this particular show.

Allan Travers, general agent for Strates, was at the fairgrounds Tuesday looking over the property. His next problem, he said was to find a railroad

Petition To Be Filed

According to attorney Richard Guy, local option petitions should be filed in court "in a week or ten days, along with a proposed order for the matter to go before voters in November."

The deadline for the filing is Sept. 1, so that the petitions can be processed and voted on in the November elections. The actual deadline is not until 60 days prior to Nov. 5, however it is desired to leave a few days for proper handling of the petitions in court before the deadline arrives.

Guy said his committee has "some people checking the signatures against voter registration lists to make certain they are qualified voters."

The petitioners are seeking to have the city of Virginia Beach become a charter city, which would give the city more control over its own affairs.

City Manager Roger Scott congratulates Capt. W. J. Moore, Jr., while accepting a slice of cake in celebration of the Third Police Precinct's first anniversary.

Precinct Celebrates Birthday

Virginia Beach city officials joined members of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and the city's police department in special ceremonies last Thursday to celebrate the first anniversary of the Third Police Precinct.

The public was invited to take part in the celebration during day-long open house at the precinct headquarters located at 925 Independence Blvd. in the Bayside Borough of the city. Residents were invited to tour facilities of the building and inspect various types of police, fire, rescue, civil defense and Armed Forces vehicles and equipment arranged in a static display around the headquarters building.

Members of the Navy Band from the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base provided music for an hour-long ceremony congratulating men of the Precinct on their public service to residents of the Bayside Borough, Marine Lt. Col. C. J. Gilroy, Jr., Informational Services and Public Affairs Officer of the Atlantic Fleet Marine Force, served as Master of Ceremonies for the program which featured addresses by Mayor Frank A. Dusch, City Manager Roger Scott, and Police Chief James E. Moore, Marine Corps and Police Color Guards participated in the "posting of the colors" during the playing of the National Anthem by the Navy Band, An Honor Guard, comprised of members of the precinct and the Armed Forces escorted a birthday cake to the front of the speakers platform which Precinct C.O. Capt. W. J. Moore, Jr. cut with a sabre. The ceremony ended with Police Sgt. Eddie Adams conducting a formal roll call of patrolmen and posting them for their next duty shift.

Capt. W. J. "Bucky" Moore, Jr., who served in the Princess Anne County Police Dept. prior to joining the Virginia Beach Police Dept. with the areas' merger, has served as Precinct Commander since its opening. Capt. Moore is assisted in supervision of the Precinct's 48 men by three lieutenants and five Sergeants.

Members of the Virginia Beach Detachment of the Tidewater Area Shore Patrol, under the command of Navy Lt. B. T. Morrison and Senior CPO G. C. Queen, assist in policing the Precinct which contains some of the largest shopping centers in Tidewater, the Little Creek Amphibious Base and government housing facilities and several of the most densely populated areas of Virginia Beach.

Hiway Assn. to 'Remind' N.C. of Earlier Promises

John Griffin, executive director of the Virginia Beach headquartered Ocean Hiway Association, said that spokesmen for the association have received permission to appear before the North Carolina Governor's Highway Study Committee on Aug. 16 and 17.

The speakers will be trying to get the State of North Carolina to live up to agreements dating back to 1957 for the redevelopment of U.S. Route 17 through North Carolina. The road is part of the Ocean Hiway.

Griffin says nothing has been done to improve the two-lane road while much has been spent in the Piedmont where the bulk of the state's industry lies. He says he also plans to show how other similar areas have brought a great deal of money into the economy by improving roads and attracting the industry of tourism.

The Ocean Hiway route enters Virginia Beach via the Chesapeake Bay-Bridge-Tunnel and goes by way of the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway through Norfolk and Chesapeake into North Carolina.

Griffin added that North Carolina has also expressed an interest over several years in building an outer banks highway which would be met by a road in Virginia Beach but has done nothing about building it. In recent months Virginia planners have noted increased interest in the road which would link the two states.

Tropical Fish Show Set

Norfolk's famed Azalea Gardens will be the site for the Fourth Annual 1968 Tropical Fish Show of the Tidewater Aquarist Society, to be held September 7-15.

Officials of the Aquarist Society, a non-profit organization, estimate the attendance at this year's show will go over the 10,000 mark. Last year's show, which ran only two days, attracted almost 5,000 people. Entry blanks for the Show may be obtained in many Tidewater pet stores or by contacting Terry Coffelt at 3212 Brookbridge Road, Virginia Beach, 23452, phone 340-7200.

Anyone interested in joining the Society or obtaining further information on Society activities may do so by writing to post office Box 155, Norfolk, Virginia, or by attending a monthly meeting held the third Wednesday of each month at the Azalea Gardens, from 8 to 10 p.m.

Comedy Opens at Stage Door

"Light Up the Sky" by Moss Hart is a play about the theatre and theatre people. The Stage Door Dinner Playhouse lets the audience in to watch their shenanigans and despite some opening night flaws the performance is a success.

The play concerns a sugar-sweet leading lady, her sister, the producers, the director and the author of a play ready to open in Boston. In his first act they raise the author to the heights with their words about his "beautiful play." In the second act when the audience doesn't like it, they all blame him for the flaws. And in the final analysis when the critics like the play, all is forgiven but the young author becomes a veteran.

Director Mark Thomas has invented some very nice bits of action that are quite funny, but the slow pacing of the first act on opening night made the whole play appear melodramatic instead of a fun spoof of some rather kooky people. While later acts improved the pacing was still not consistent and kept the play from being as funny as it really is. With proper pacing and fast-moving delivery of lines this could be a particularly sterling performance.

A major change was made in the script by Stage Door. The actresses' mother was converted to her sister because no suitable mother-type could be found. This might have destroyed the context of the play except that Arlene Poutasse who plays the new role is outstanding in her cynical, sarcastic, gin-playing, gin-drinking characterization. She does a nice job and could just as easily have played the actress to perfection.

The actress is played by Peggy Boykin who handles the role nicely, although much more tragically than the other sweetly vicious characterizations we have seen.

The wife of the producer, Andrea Harris, is another standout in this production. Her portrayal of the rich, but not too 'couth' former ice skater is pleasing and a lot of fun. Laverne Watson plays her husband, the big businessman, with a great deal more sophistication than the role is usually played, but his acting ability shines through to make the part successful.

Dennis Stephens, as the young author, is perhaps a bit too young for the role and his shy attitude in the first two acts is perhaps a bit too shy. He makes up for it however in the end.

As the emotional director, Ron Alexander is also a bit too young-looking and too often given to melodrama, but he is an audience favorite and gives a thoroughly acceptable performance.

It is Jack Welsman, as the older author who has written before for the actress, that gives one of the best performances in the production. His cool and even smiling cynicism is a delight to watch. Danny Gann plays the actress' Wall Street husband perhaps a bit too delirious, but he gets his point across. And Eugene Kanter again turns in a nice performance in a cameo role.

Terrie Watson, as the actress' biographer has little to do, although she is on stage most of the time. She does a nice job with a thankless role.

We had some difficulty hearing many of the cast members who must remember that even in intimate theatre, the back row must hear what is going on. This play is pleasant theatre fare on a nice setting and worthy of a look-see. HJL

The New Center Can't Wait

A number of facts have become increasingly clear. The old civic center is not large enough to attract a major convention and has too little space for exhibits. Conventioneers spend much money. The city would profit in any number of ways by having an adequate convention-cultural center.

All of this has been known for some time, but what little has been done has been done too slowly. Last winter a City Council Committee made a tour of southern centers with facilities much like we need. Their report back to Council took several months and then only recommended a study by the Planning Commission.

That Planning Commission study is complete and is a masterpiece. Its recommendations are excellent. A large arena, a large exhibition hall and a small theatre all fit neatly into the scheme of things. It is a comprehensive report which goes far beyond what Council asked for. It even includes a perfect site near the toll road and proposed roads to serve it, plus recommendations for other recreational uses of other city-owned property.

Virginia Beach's College-to-be

It is welcome news that Virginia Beach will eventually have its own two-year community college. Where it will be is now up to a consultant group and the state of Virginia.

The city and two other groups have offered to donate sites of 100 acres each for this purpose and the consultants were obviously impressed when they visited all three recently.

With more and more youngsters competing for fewer and fewer openings at major colleges in and outside Virginia, the need for such facilities as the community college is all

This should do it. We doubt seriously that a professional consultant need be called in now. As admonished by City Manager Roger Scott, the burden is now on Council to move quickly to follow the recommendations, to acquire the necessary land and to work with all concerned on the financing of the new center. This obviously will take some time, but time's a-wastin'.

The convention dollar is headed away from Virginia Beach, and so are the name entertainers. Each year we wait the more we lose in revenue and prestige.

We therefore respectfully request that City Council move with all possible dispatch in this matter. Consider that with construction time, the hope of getting it built by the early 1970's is still only a dream unless Council, resort businessmen, interested citizens and all the city fathers stop pussyfooting around on this thing and get something built with the "scope" of the center in Norfolk, but without all that grandeur and that huge price tag.

most to the desperate stage. And it is bound to get worse before it can get any better.

Funds for the continuation and expansion of the community college movement in Virginia depend largely now on the passage of the massive $81 million bond issue to be voted on in November. Money for Virginia Beach's college is included. Although the need for the passage of the issue is critical to the state's mental hospitals and higher education, the people of Virginia Beach can now see another good reason why they must vote in favor.

An Editorial Half-truth

It has been said that a half-truth is worse than a lie. And a Norfolk morning newspaper editorial that appeared last Saturday dealt in a half-truth that distorts the true picture.

Recently City Manager Roger Scott appointed a committee that will look carefully into the city's insurance coverage and make recommendations concerning it to Council. The School Board has been studying the same matter for some time.

Insurance is a necessary expense to the city and if money can be saved, it should be, but the matter must not be another political football for the anti and the Norfolk newspapers to toss around in attempts to discredit political leader Sidney S. Kellam. Kellam is a partner in the insurance firm that holds much of the city's insurance.

At no time has it ever been said or even hinted that there is any wrongdoing in Kellam's firm or in their coverage of the city. But the Norfolk editorial talks about a bid of William D. Nagg and his company once being rejected after being received unsolicited and received "frostily". But the editorial goes on to add that Nagg later submitted another bid and did indeed receive part of the city's insurance. But there is where the editorial stops. The truth is that Nagg's firm would not even submit a bid the following year for the same insurance. Kellam's firm did.

The editorial writer must be aware of Norfolk's policy of not accepting bids for that city's insurance and merely placing it. We do not say that there should not be bids. But how can a Norfolk newspaper criticize practices in Virginia Beach without saying one word about its own city practice?

It is the same as in the conflict of interest matter. What was editorially so terrible in Virginia Beach became editorially a virtue when it was disclosed in Norfolk.

STILL AT LARGE

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"How sweet it is," he said, lounging in the sun beside the swimming pool. "How sweet what is?" she asked, as she sat under the umbrella fully clothed.

"Just to get out of town for the weekend to a nice motel like this and just relax away from the kids and all our cares," he said.

"I'm glad you're having such a grand time," she said, fanning herself with a newspaper. "I wish I could go swimming too."

"Well, why don't you?" he asked. "The water's fine."

"Because I haven't lost enough weight after the baby was born to get into my bathing suit," she said. "And besides, it's an old bathing suit."

"Did you ever think of getting a new...larger bathing suit?"

"Certainly not," she shot back. "I wouldn't want anyone to see how fat I am."

"Oh," he said, knowing that the time had come to drop the subject. "Reach over there and flip that built-in radio on, please. It's nice of the motel to provide that right at the poolside."

"It doesn't work," she said. "I already tried it. It's just like those soft drink machines on each of the five floors here."

"Well, they look good, even if they don't work," he said. "At least they're offering all the conveniences."

"But I got a little angry this morning when I tried to get a drink," she said.

"I went from floor to floor trying to get a drink. Not one of the popular brands yielded a thing, and two of them ate my 15 cents too. Finally I got some awful cherry drink made here, but I did get too much change, so I broke even."

"You can't have everything," he said. "But I know what you mean. I went on four of those five floors trying for a pack of crackers and the only thing I could get was a stale bag of salted peanuts. They cost me 20 cents. The three other machines just ate my nickels."

"You know, it's nice to have a color TV in the room too," she said, "but can't you adjust it better. Everybody either looks purple or green."

"No, I can't," he said. "The whole thing needs adjusting and their TV engineer is off for the weekend, I called."

"Weren't you cold last night?" she asked.

"Sure I was," he said. "The thermostat is set on 55 degrees, but if you raise it any, the heat comes on."

"And their air conditioning engineer is off for the weekend too," she said.

"How'd you guess?" he asked. "Anyway the ice machine in the breezeway works, even if it's cold in the room. By the way, how do you like those single faucet gismos?"

"I couldn't get the hot and cold water adjusted, and the one in the basin leaks. It squirted me in the eye," she said.

"Oh, I'm sorry," he said. "I rather like it. The only problem I've had there is the fluorescent light that keeps flickering while I'm shaving. I cut myself three times."

"Well, there's one convenience I'm going to try tonight," she said. "It's that 25 cents for 15 minutes bed vibrator that's attached to the mattress."

"Yeah," he said. "That ought to be fine, as tired as I am. But that doesn't work either. It ate my quarter, and it's attached to that convenience alarm clock that didn't go off this morning."

"All the comforts of home," she said. He jumped in the pool.

Will Pollard Be Dumped?

The following article appeared in the current edition of the weekly newspaper, the JOURNAL-STANDARD, published in Alexandria. While there is no attempt made here to add credence to or discredit the report, it is reprinted here for the readers of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, as an item in the public interest following closely on the heels of the state Democratic convention.

Reliable sources told THE JOURNAL this week that the Virginia Democratic Organization is ready to dump Lt. Gov. Fred G. Pollard as its candidate for Governor next year, "because he just isn't catching fire as a candidate."

According to these sources, Pollard's stock dropped again when a power shift in Richmond's Third Congressional District reduced the Lieutenant Governor's strength in the Organization.

These developments took place at the state Democratic convention last weekend in Salem. Both reporters and delegates to the convention agreed that the emphasis was on state politics, and the national picture was strictly secondary.

Sen. Henry E. Howell of Norfolk, a liberal Democrat, already has announced his candidacy for governor. William C. Battle, Charlottesville attorney, is considered the candidate of the Democratic moderates, and until the convention, Pollard was believed to be the Organization's choice.

Now, the Organization now seems to be available for assignment elsewhere, and early speculation is settling on John Warren Cooke of Matthews, speaker of the House of Delegates.

If Cooke were indeed to become a candidate, the move would open the House speakership, possibly to Alexandria Delegate James M. Thomson, presently the majority leader of the House.

Last session Cooke moved up from majority leader to speakership, and Thomson took over the majority leadership. The move is not automatic, but usually the majority leader is in the running for the job.

These same sources also told THE JOURNAL that slates of candidates are not developing around the leading gubernatorial possibilities, as has been the custom in Virginia. Usually a slate will consist of the candidate for governor, plus "ticket-balancing" additions for lieutenant governor and attorney general from other areas of the state.

There was plenty of speculation about slates at the Salem convention, but so many names were mentioned that no firm idea of the eventual lineup could be formed.

One source said the Democratic primary election might be conducted without slates, with "open" competition for the second and third slots on the party ticket.

Some Northern Virginians mentioned in the convention halls were Sen. Robert C. Fitzgerald and Sen. LeRoy Bendheim as well as Del. Guy O. Farley, all considered in the running for attorney general.

Regardless of the Democratic winner, the republicans are expected to nominate A. Linwood Holton of Roanoke as their candidate. Holton ran unsuccessfully for Governor in 1965.

The real shocker, though, was the apparent decline of Pollard as the Organization choice. One newsman remarked that "You hear more about Howell and Battle than you did six months ago, but you hear less about Pollard."

One known supporter of Pollard's told a reporter after the convention, "John Warren Cooke is my man."

The convention itself amounted to a prelude for next year's gubernatorial race. When the Howell and Battle forces saw eye-to-eye on a contested issue or a contested party post, they carried the day. But when the slightest crack opened between the liberals and the moderates, the Organization carried the issue.

"Everybody went away happy," said one Northern Virginia delegate, "because everybody won something."

Spry-Arnesen Engagement

An October wedding is planned by Miss Anne Lee Spry, daughter of Lt. Cmdr. and Mrs. Norman Lee Spry of Peabody, Mass., to Knut M. Arnesen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alf M. Arnesen of Oslo, Norway.

Miss Spry is a graduate of Chamberlayne Junior College, Boston and studied at the University of Florence in Italy. She is now employed as a purser for Pan American World Airways.

Mr. Arnesen is a graduate of Scouse College in Oslo and obtained his master's degree in Civil Engineering at Stanford University in California.

Miss Spry is the granddaughter of Mrs. Henry S. Spry of Virginia Beach and the late Mrs. Burwell L. Whitehurst of Norfolk.

Wedding Will Be Aug. 16

Mrs. Roswitha Cooksey of Virginia Beach is engaged to Klaus Pagedarm, stationed with the U.S. Army at Ft. Story.

Mrs. Cooksey is originally from Frankfurt, Germany. Mr. Pagedarm is from Kitzingen, Germany.

The wedding will take place in Cleveland, Ohio on Aug. 16. Following a wedding trip, the couple will live in Virginia Beach.

Son Born

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Applegate of Harton Road announce the birth of a son, Ira Tremain Applegate, on Aug. 6 at the General Hospital of Virginia Beach. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. E.L. Applegate of Virginia Beach and Mr. and Mrs. C.K. Watson of Madison, N.C.

Bob Trundle, Mrs. John Musick, president of the Friends of Music, Russell Stanger, Norfolk Symphony conductor and executive director of the Music Festival, with William Ashton of Philadelphia who presented Stanger with Symphony Club of Philadelphia award of merit during Montoya's performance Saturday night.

HERE COMES OLGA!

Friday night at the Civic Center was the Miss Virginia Beach Pageant.

Rick Allen of WVAB radio was the master of ceremonies, and I might say he really was terrific. With his many talents he can also sing. I might say that Kathy Oliver did outshine him a little, but then again she is very talented. This year I was able to pick the right girl for Miss Virginia Beach and of course by now you know it was Linda Gayle Phillips. The only sad part about the contest was that I got a little depressed because all can't be chosen. I somehow seem to put myself in their position, and I can imagine what a let down it is when they have worked so hard.

Saturday night The Virginia Beach Friends of Music presented The Norfolk Symphony Orchestra directed by Russell Stanger with Carlos Montoya, Flamenco guitarist. The Civic Center was well-packed; I believe all of the VIP's were there as well as quite a few young people who apparently enjoyed every minute of this concert. Russell Stanger has conducted in many European capitals and has made recordings and has conducted on Television in Canada as well as in this country.

Second Son

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cary Myers of Manassas, Va., formerly of Virginia Beach, announce the birth of their second son, Bradley Allen, on July 15. Mrs. Myers is the former Miss Bettie Kate Pace Cadieux.

Carlos Montoya is the world famous master of the Flamenco guitar. He is one of the most widely heard performers in any concert idiom. Mr. Montoya is a Spanish gypsy who was born in Madrid. He was a musical prodigy and achieved national fame by the age of 14. I am sure if you were at the concert that this point was easily understandable. He is outstanding in every way, and I might say he has a wonderful personality.

After the concert, the Board of Directors of the Virginia Beach Friends of Music invited friends to an after concert party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Mackenzie Jenkins, Jr. on 73rd and Ocean front.

Mrs. Shelby Balderson, Mrs. Brad Tazewell and Mrs. Jenkins were responsible for this lovely affair. Once you enter the house, the first thing that catches your eye is the beautiful centerpiece of spring flowers in a very beautiful table arrangement, candles surround the centerpiece. The food for the evening was several kinds of dips, hot Smithfield ham biscuits, deviled eggs, shrimp, and last but not least, Petit fours which were delicious. The dress for the evening for men were white coats and dark suits. Some of the women wore long formals, some were in short formals as well as casual dress.

Mrs. Jean Reid had on a very attractive long dress of many colors rather Hawaiian in appearance. Ladies at a 19th century German coffeehouse savor ice cream and cups of steaming coffee--a long-established dessert combination.

Ice Cream, Coffee Are Match

Whether we realize it or not, the childhood habit of "saving room for dessert" often stays with us for the rest of our lives. It may change to saving room for coffee and dessert, but nevertheless the feeling is there in one form or another. And don't think it is anything to be embarrassed about. On the contrary. What could be more sensible and sophisticated than the anticipation of after-dinner coffee accompanied by something cool and sweet to soothe the palate?

If you look forward to refreshing frosty desserts, you can be proud of a long and noble lineage. At ancient Roman feasts, a dish of ice was served not only after dinner but between courses as well. Emperor Nero had bowls of ice passed around so that guests could help themselves. The ice cooled the mouth from burning spices, eased digestion and stimulated the appetite so that the "gluttony" could proceed. Because there were no refrigerators with freezing units in ancient Rome, the ice was scooped off the top of the Alps and stored in "ice houses."

realized the assets of ice on the dinner menu. On Marco Polo's return from the Orient in the fourteenth century, he told about ice that was brought from the mountains by camel pack and flavored with the juices of various exotic fruits.

The custom of eating ices or sherbets at dinner time gradually found its way into the creative kitchens of Italy and, from there, into the banquet rooms of France and England. When Catherine de' Medici traveled to France to wed Henry II in 1533, her Florentine chefs were ordered to prepare different foods for each day of the festivities. During this gourmet holiday, French royalty had its first taste of flavored Italian ices, sherbets and, possibly, ice cream.

Historians differ on exactly how and when ice cream was born. One authority points to a notation in an old manuscript that "creme frez" was offered at King Henry V's coronation banquet in England in 1413. Another simply states that ice cream was born in Tuscany in the sixteenth century, while a third speculates that the French chef of the Duc de Chartres created it to refresh his master one hot day in 1774.

Although the French were introduced to frozen desserts at Catherine de' Medici's wedding, it took over a century before they became popular with the public. In the late seventeenth century, Francois Porcope, and Italian lemonade vendor, established an Oriental-style coffeehouse in Paris which featured a selection of flavored ices and ice creams.

By the 1700's, the French had mastered the art of preparing ice cream in a bevy of flavors including apricot, violet, rose, caramel, chocolate and, of course, coffee. A special coffee ice cream made with whole roasted coffee beans later became a favorite of the royal court of Austria.

On the American scene, George Washington was fascinated by French ice cream and described in his account book for May 17, 1784 "a cream machine for making ice." Thomas Jefferson imported the recipe for a type of Baked Alaska so he could introduce it with his carefully-brewed coffee at a White House affair. James Madison's First Lady, Dolley, gained ice cream fame the night she served a mold of pink ice cream at her husband's second inaugural dinner.

Like our Founding Fathers (and mothers), we have come to love ice cream. And since coffee is America's most popular beverage, it follows that it is also a popular ice cream flavor. Put the two together and you come up with an irresistible dessert such as this Frozen Coffee Cream. Here's how to make it: Soften one tablespoon unflavored gelatin in a quarter cup of cold coffee. Combine one and a quarter cups sugar, one and a quarter cups hot coffee and a few grains salt. Stir until the sugar dissolves, then add to softened gelatin and stir until gelatin dissolves. Add two cups milk, one cup heavy cream and one teaspoon vanilla, and mix well.

Remove the ice-cube partition from a double refrigerator tray and pour the mixture into the tray. Freeze until firm. Remove the mixture to a chilled bowl and break up, then beat until it is free from lumps, but is still a thick mush. Now return the mixture to the tray and freeze until firm.

THE WOMEN

VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

Thursday, August 8, 1968

Mrs. Phillips and Linda.

Plans Change with Title

A slim brunet with blue-gray eyes that change color according to what she is wearing is Miss Virginia Beach 1968.

The crowning of Miss Linda Gayle Phillips, 17, last Friday night has already changed her life. She had planned to attend Madison College this fall. Now she will enter Old Dominion College—Madison doesn't allow freshmen to have cars, and an Oldsmobile from Phillips Bros. was one of her prizes. "Besides, I didn't want to leave my parents anyway," she confessed.

Linda is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Phillips of Josephine Crescent and recently graduated from Princess Anne High School where she was secretary of the Theatrics, and was a member of the Madrigal Singers and a Capella Chorus.

Her mother also made a semi-formal gown Linda wore in the contest. Her encouragement for Linda is natural—she was interested in dramatics herself. "Only she met my father and they got married," laughed Linda.

The multi-talented young lady also sews "with her mother's help," and enjoys going to the beach, boating and water skiing.

As to her winning, "My parents were elated," she said. Her father, tape recorded her talent act the night of the pageant.

Linda admits there is one boy in the neighborhood whom she has been dating rather steadily for the last three months.

As to the future, Linda hopes with the audience. "I was surprised at their reaction," Linda said. "Before the contest I practiced the skit two or three times a day. My mother has been a tremendous help. She gives me confidence."

"I just couldn't believe it," said Linda of winning the title. "Nothing's really changed. I have a year to look forward to."

A native of North Carolina, Linda moved here with her family about five years ago from Columbia, S. C. Her father is a salesman for Kellogg. Her older brother, Jack, lives in Wilmington, N.C.

Linda displayed with understandable pride her collection of ceramic pitchers and mugs she made in a crafts class at Princess Anne. "I love Early American things," she said. She has also completed an eight piece service of Early American china.

Her talent act in the contest—impersonations—was a big hit to become an apprentice at the Lake Wright Theatre when it opens. After graduation from ODC she would like to attend the National Academy of Dramatic Arts.

"Just as long as I act, I don't care where," she said positively.

Group Loses President

Guests at the July meeting of the Beta Kappa chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha International sorority were Carol Cross, Helen Saunders, Norma Armfield, Brenda Barrow and Lucy Radford.

Farewells marked this as one of the less happy meetings of the chapter. Mrs. C. B. Cross announced that she would be retiring as president of the Alpha Xi chapter and moving out of state.

July had one bright and glowing spot in it for Beta Kappa, and that came at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fleetwood Mitchell and son. The Mitchell family held an old fashioned Ice Cream Social for the girls and their families.

Mrs. R. E. Doody, Mrs. R. P. Carrabrant, Mrs. F. J. Bridges and Mrs. R. D. Perry spent some time working at St. Aiden's Child Development Center this month. Mrs. R. K. Holbert gave some time working for the Army Community Service this past month.

Miss Anne Elizabeth Kitchin, bride-elect of Harry Ramsey White, was honored with a tea on Aug. 6 at the home of Mrs. Clarence James Smith Jr. on 55th Street. Hostesses were, standing, Mrs. Graham Hinnant, Mrs. John Havens Bonner of Elizabeth City, Mrs. Smith's mother; and Mrs. Smith, right. Seated is Mrs. James Leggett Kitchin, mother of the honoree, Miss Kitchin, who will be married Aug. 17, is wearing the nosegay.

Call the Station!

If the presidential election were held today, I know of at least three votes in favor of Captain Kangaroo.

Monday there were cries of dismay when the Republican Convention appeared on the screen at 7:30 instead of Filibuster-bol. And what can you do with three monsters at 7:30 in the morning? It's too early to turn them loose on the neighbors. Most of the neighborhood kids stay up all night and don't get up until 10.

Sanity was restored Tuesday morning bright and early when their favorite programs came on as scheduled—that is until 8:10 when I (right in the middle of dressing for work) heard screams from the living room. There was Richard Nixon's smiling face replacing the genial Captain Kangaroo.

"Mommy, call the television station and complain," demanded the seven-year-old, backed up by her five-year-old sister. "I don't like him."

After I explained to no avail that the station couldn't do anything about it, the monsters sat in sulky silence.

Then, "Why doesn't he get off? Tell him to shut up." I couldn't think of a good answer for that one, so I went back to dressing.

Again there was silence. I thought they had turned off the tv like they did the day before when they finally became resigned to the fact that there would be no Captain.

But later when I came into the living room again, there sat all three in front of the tv watching the screen but with the sound off. "We don't want to listen to him, Mommy," explained the seven-year-old.

I didn't have the heart to tell them that the Democrats would be next.

I Go Pogo.

Teen Recreation Classes

Basketball Player Decorates Cakes

While several girls in the class licked icing from their fingers, the six-foot three boy concentrated on making pink roses to decorate a large white cake.

The boy and 13 girls are all members of a teen cake decorating class taught by Mrs. Sue Lewis and sponsored by the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation.

The boy, Kenneth Hamernik, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hamernik of Silina Drive, is one of her "star" pupils. "He's almost a fanatic at it," said Mrs. Lewis. "He had never done cake decorating before, and he makes a cake himself and brings it every week."

Kenneth, a rising sophomore at Kellam High, has other interests besides cake decorating, however. He plays baseball and was a member of the junior varsity basketball team last year. He's thinking of trying out for football this fall.

So what's he doing in a class with 13 girls? Mrs. Hamernik said Kenneth became interested in cake decorating last spring when he attended a party at which a boy brought a cake he had decorated. Then Kenneth brought a notice about the Recreation Department's teen classes, and his mother, who has also done some cake decorating, encouraged him to enroll.

The cake he was working on Monday was for a shower. One reason he is taking the course is the hope of making some extra money from his cakes.

Until last weekend, Kenneth also sported a mustache. An older brother is growing a beard. His mother said someone teased him about the mustache so he shaved it off. "Now if I could just get him to cut off some of his hair," Kenneth just grinned and went on perfecting his roses, unselfishly.

Mrs. Lewis teaches a night class for teens too. Another class is taught at Bayside High School. There is a total enrollment of 47.

Schools to Avoid Split Shifts

The Virginia Beach School Board has now been assured that two of three new elementary schools scheduled to open this fall will be ready for pupils when school begins on Sept. 6.

Classroom wings of Pembroke Meadows Elementary School and Point-O-View Elementary School will be completed to the extent that students scheduled to attend those schools will be able to do so; cafeteria, gymnasium, and other auxiliary facilities will be completed soon after the opening date of school.

The new elementary school now under construction in the Windsor Woods area will not be ready to receive students on opening day. The School Board, in its concern to avoid a "split shift" situation in any Virginia Beach school, and in an effort to make the transfer of students to the new school on its completion as smooth as possible, will assign pupils temporarily to other schools as complete grades, rather than as individual students.

"In this way," said Supt.

E.E. Brickell, "all Virginia Beach children will be assured of a full educational day; the pupils will remain with their classmates and with their regularly-assigned teacher during the whole school year. We feel this is the best alternative under the circumstances."

Temporary assignments for students who normally would attend the new Windsor Woods School are as follows:

First grades will attend the existing Windsor Woods Elementary School.

Second, third, fourth grades will attend Pembroke Meadows Elementary School.

Fifth grades will attend Old Donation Elementary School and sixth and seventh grades will attend the Kempville Elementary School.

All students will be housed in regular classrooms, and bus schedules are being planned in such a manner as to hold the travel time of students to the nearest possible minimum. In another directive Supt. Brickell said that:

In line with recommendations of a teacher-student-administrator committee, the "dress code" is hereby modified to read as follows, until further notice:

"All students and faculty members are expected to wear dress appropriate to the occasion; extreme or ostentatious apparel or appearance is to be avoided."

This modification will have the effect of permitting girls to wear the culotte-type skirt and certain other now-accepted styles of clothing; boys will be allowed to wear the levi dress pants; heretofore prohibited. Elementary guidelines will remain generally unchanged. Questions relative to other specifics should be referred to the principal personnel office.

Principals are expected to establish and maintain good order in their schools, and the modification of the "dress code" is in no way to be construed as a relaxation of the high standard of personal conduct and appearance traditionally expected in Virginia Beach schools.

Man Completes Program

George L. Carroll is the second man to complete Air-Plane Corporation's apprentice incentive program.

In January 1964, the corporation which sells mobile air conditioners for cargo and passenger aircraft, instituted an Employee Training Program for selected young men designed to produce draftsman in the field of Mechanical Engineering. On the job training is augmented by assigned courses of night study at selected educational institutions. Tuition fees and book costs are paid for by the company.

The program is registered with the Virginia Apprenticeship Council and wages over the training period are scaled so that the trainee receives the current Journeyman's rate upon completion of his training. In addition to his regular wage, a certain amount is invested weekly by the company and earmarked for the trainee. Upon completion of the first phase of instruction, which is four years, the trainee receives a guaranteed $3000.00 cash reward. At the end of six years, which completes the course, the trainee will have received approximately $4,400.00 in a reward money besides his regular wages.

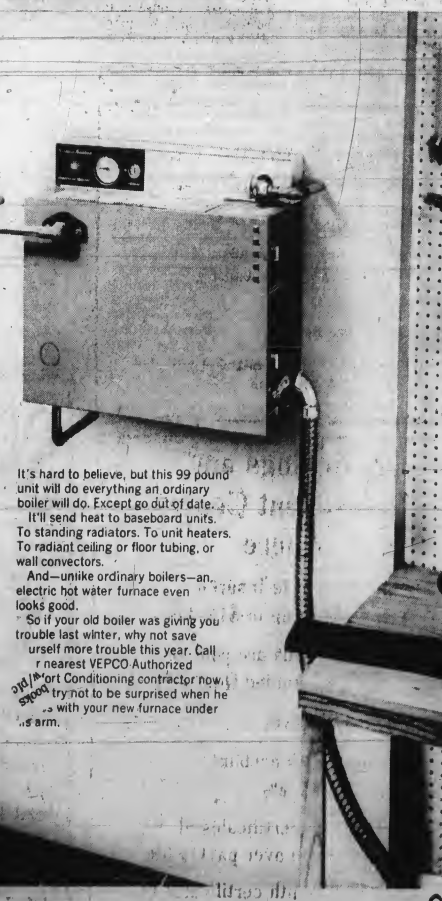

Carroll lives with his parents at Pennsylvania Avenue.

Heroes of Old Known for Cooking

It might seem that father at the barbecue grill is a mid-century social phenomenon, his chef's cap acquired at the same time as the mortgage on the split-level or ranchhouse.

As a matter of fact, in the old days men did the important cooking, with women in step-and-fetch-it roles. Homer's heroes would have felt right at home in modern suburbia. Ulysses was a prize fire-maker and knew just when the coals were ready for broiling. Achilles manned the spit. Patroclus saw to it that everyone had something to drink.

One cook of 2,000 years ago gave this advice, "Often taste your dishes while you are boiling them. Do they want salt? Add some. Is any other seasoning needed? Add it and taste again, till you've arrived at harmony of flavor; like a man who tunes a lyre until it rightly sounds."

Most men season to taste, adding black pepper, for instance, "until it's right." They are venturesome enough to use more pepper than do most women. The gadget-minded man loves peppermills and the pleasing bouquet of the coarsest ground pepper which crackles out of a mill. To please him, spice companies are all piling coarse ground black pepper in addition to regular table grind and whole black pepper berries. (Incidentally, it's hard to get coarse ground pepper through the small holes of an old-fashioned pepper shaker. The smart thing to do is to put coarse pepper in a salt shaker which has larger holes in the top.)

Home economists of the American Spice Trade Association send us these well-peppered recipes for summer meals.

PEPPERY MARINATED SEAFOOD KEBABS

- 2/3 c. olive or salad oil
- 1/3 c. lemon juice
- 1 1/2 teas. instant minced onion
- 1 teas. salt
- 1 teas. coarse ground black pepper
- 1/4 teas. instant garlic powder
- 1 pkg. (12 oz.) frozen, peeled and deveined shrimp, defrosted
- 1 pkg. (12 oz.) frozen fish steaks, defrosted and cut into 1 inch squares
- 1/2 lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced into halves

Combine oil, lemon juice, minced onion, garlic, black pepper and salt; pour over shrimp, fish and mushrooms. Toss gently. Cover and refrigerate 12 hours, turning occasionally. Arrange shrimp, fish and mushrooms on skewers. Place under broiler for 10 minutes, basting occasionally and turning once, or broil over hot coals basting and turning until done. Yield: 4 portions.

Mushrooms are an ideal accompaniment to barbecued meats, especially when liberally peppered and enhanced with lemon juice and anchovy fillets.

SPICED SAUTEED MUSHROOMS

- 1 lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced or 2 cans (6 to 8 oz. each) sliced mushrooms
- 1/4 c. olive oil
- 1/4 teas. salt
- 1/4 teas. ground black pepper
- 1 tbl. butter or margarine
- 1/4 teas. instant garlic powder
- 2 tbl. parsley flakes
- 5 teas. lemon juice
- 4 anchovy fillets, finely minced, optional

If using fresh mushrooms, add to hot oil in large skillet. If using canned mushrooms, drain well and dry on paper.

Now Possible To Shrink Hemorrhoids

And Promptly Stop Itching, Relieve Pain In Most Cases.

Science has found a medication with the ability, in most cases, to relieve pain, itching and shrink hemorrhoids. In case after case doctors proved, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction took place. The secret is Preparation H®. It also soothes irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. Just ask for Preparation H Ointment or Suppositories.

A well-seasoned marinade not only tenderizes foods, but gives them appetizing aroma.

towel before adding to hot oil. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Saute 4 to 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add remaining ingredients. Heat thoroughly and serve hot as accompaniment to veal, broiled fish and seafood or cheese main dishes. Yield: 6 portions.

Cook this smartly peppered pot roast indoors; serve it out on the patio.

BLACK PEPPER POT ROAST

- 4 1/2 to 5 lb. bottom round of beef
- 1 (6 oz.) can tomato paste
- 1 small bay leaf
- 1 1/2 teas. salt
- 1 teas. instant minced onion
- 1 1/2 teas. whole black pepper
- 8 small new potatoes, peeled
- 6 medium carrots, halved

In a large Dutch oven brown meat on all sides, fat side first.

Reduce heat. Combine 1 1/2 cups hot water, tomato paste, bay leaf, salt and minced onion. Pour over meat. Add whole black pepper tied in cheese cloth bag. Cover and simmer 3 hours, or until meat is almost tender, turning meat frequently. Add potatoes and carrots and continue cooking 30 minutes longer or until meat is tender. Add more ground black pepper, if desired. Yield: 8 portions.

Bed-playroom for sisters--The refreshing, airy look of this attractive room depends a lot on the major decorating fabric--a handsome poppy-printed cotton in tones of blue and white. A matching panel of wallpaper is used as flat headboard-canopies. The deep delphinium blue in the fabric is repeated in a room-darkening window shade. Tangy lime green serves as accent color on the shade hem, toss pillows, and painted cabinet.

Pots Can Be Pretty Too

The evolution in cookware from fired clay pots of earliest time to today's decorative utensils took centuries.

Today one of the most practical and popular types of cookware is heavy gauge steel sheathed with tough ceramic, according to E. M. Robinson, vice president of United States Stamping Company. The core provides good heat transference and the satin-smooth ceramic makes for easy washing.

Robinson points out that cookware design has been improved, too. Quality cookware available today has no hard-to-clean corners, rims are smooth, tops fit snugly and oven-proof handles designed for wall or cabinet storage are taken for granted. Design is pretty as well as practical.

Two recent developments have still further eased home-makers' labor. The first was the introduction of non-stick Teflon coating for roasters and frying pans and the second, a new Cera-Met finish by United States Stamping. Cera-Met is a coating of refractory crystals on the bottoms of cookware that provides the ultimate in heat transference.

Hang It All

Hang it all! You can do just that--on a Woodgrained panel wall that's both functional and beautiful.

Suppose you need a place for books over a desk in a bedroom. Putting up a Royacote Living Wall is a good "starter" project for any handyman. He simply attaches furring strips to the existing wall with a cartridge-type adhesive and follows similarly with the panels.

Many people are beginning to get their lawns prepared for winter by taking soil samples. This is the only sure way to know if you need time or fertilizer.

When taking a soil sample, one should be sure that it is a representative sample--in other words, the sample would be an average soil mixture for the area from which it is obtained.

In taking the sample, use a clean bucket for collecting it. Take several samples from each area and mix them thoroughly to insure that this sample be representative. Each area that has been treated differently or that is a different problem should constitute a different sample.

For example, the front yard does not grow good grass, and in one area almost nothing will grow. Thus, there should be two soil samples from the front yard. One should come from the area where nothing grows, and one from the remaining area of the front lawn.

To take a soil sample, take your gardening trowel and make a cut the full length of the trowel directly into the ground. Pull the trowel out. Make another cut identical to the first, but about an inch behind it. Now you can take out the slice of soil.

This should be done a number of times; then mix these thoroughly and bring about one cup to my office at Princess Anne Court House.

Continue Planting for Fall

(Editor's note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Jenkins of the horticulture department at Virginia Tech.)

This is the season for odd job operations in the garden. Continue to plant quick-maturing vegetables for use this fall. You can still plant many beans, beets, kale, mustard, spinach and turnips. You might try a few radishes but wait until early September, they will not grow well during the hot weather in August.

Here is a good suggestion I

Flower Beds Need Styling

Everyone loves flowers, but few people know how to design a flower garden so that it's attractive all year long.

Yet, it's not hard. The main trick is to plant fillers and build picture frames around the flower garden.

The frame is the most important: a backdrop screen that the flowers can show off against. Although nearly any style will be complementary, the fence shouldn't be painted. Flowers look best against natural wood tones or the silver shades of

Panels Provide Privacy

Growing boy or girls sharing the same room need some privacy. In a good-sized bedroom or other area, this becomes feasible by installing a simple room divider.

"This divider, for best ventilation and heating, should be suspended between floor and ceiling," suggests John Concord, home planning consultant to Masonite Corporation. "Leave a common hallway, too."

One type of room divider is available practically ready to install. It's Masonite Filigree, available with pre-grooved moldings and accessories at lumber and building materials dealers.

Filigree hardboard comes in various perforated patterns such as Cloverleaf, Regency, Camelot and Rosette. The openings give privacy but permit ventilation and passage of light. Spring-activated plungers and floor glides are fitted to the moldings to hold the panels firmly against floor and ceiling.

ran across the other day. Place a thin, small board under each muskmelon and watermelon in your garden. This will help prevent decay and wireworm damage which may occur when the fruit rests on moist soil.

Plant some dwarf annual flower for potting this fall to be used as house plants for winter bloom. Some of the new small varieties of aster, calendula, celosia, marigold and petunia are excellent for this purpose. All you need are a few short rows, two or three feet long, to supply many plants for late fall and winter blooms in the home.

Next important is to include a few evergreens in the flower bed. With the screen, they'll give the area structure year-around and will fill in nicely between bloom dates.

Last, set a simple garden bench near the flower garden to add a sense of both permanence and invitation.

Even when drifted with snow, this scene will have enough shape and form to delight the eye.

For a more permanent installation, Concord recommends any of the Royacote woodgrained hardboard panels, which may be mounted on 2x4-inch lumber. They are prefinished, durable and easy to maintain by damp-wiping. Another possibility is peg-board or living wall, each of which offers an opportunity for storage and display against interesting backgrounds.

For ideas on using Filigree hardboards, send a postcard to Masonite Corp., Box B, Chicago, Ill., requesting Form 6812.

When laying 2x4 inch deck boards flat, greatest serviceability is obtained if the "bark side" of the planks is used as the wearing surface. To determine which is the bark side, look at the growth rings on the ends of the planks and turn them so they make an arc with ends down, curve at the top like a rainbow.

Then, there's that once a month when a girl could use a good old-fashioned medicine.

Maybe you feel just plain bad then. Or maybe a little lonely and sad, like you could use a pair of arms around you.

Well, we have just the thing for this once a month time. Lydia E. Pinkham Tablets. They're made with gentle, natural ingredients, including one that works to help relax tightened muscles that give you cramps. Plus a little iron that a girl could use at a time like this. And, you don't run any chance of the kind of unpleasant side effects you could get from some of the newer drugs.

With an old-fashioned problem like this, couldn't you take an old-fashioned medicine.

Davis Succeeds Chief Jail Investigation Broadens; No Formal Charges Filed Yet

Virginia Beach has a new acting assistant police chief. Detective Capt. W.W. Davis will fill that job as well as his job as chief of detectives until Jan. 1, when he takes over as Virginia Beach's second police chief.

City Manager Roger Scott read City Councilmen a letter from Chief James Edward Moore at an informal briefing prior to the regular meeting Monday. Moore noted that he would reach the mandatory age of retirement (65) by Oct. 1 of this year, but that he would stay on a reasonable length of time until a successor had been named.

Scott took advantage of this and asked Moore to stay on until Dec. 31, so that the transition could be handled in an orderly manner and Moore could assist the new chief in preparing the next budget.

The City Manager then told Councilmen that the selection of a new chief had been entirely his decision. He noted that he had reviewed resumes of the seven police captains and had narrowed down the field to three highly capable men before making the decision.

Scott noted that Davis was selected on his experience, education and ability. Davis and Moore appeared before Council at its regular meeting when Scott made the public announcement of the appointment, the first major appointment Scott has made since he became City Manager July 1.

Davis, 43, has been with the police department for 17 years. He began as a temporary criminal clerk and dispatcher for a year and admits that he wasn't sure then he was embarked on a permanent career.

In 1952 he became a patrolman, and in 1957 was promoted to the detective bureau where he was promoted to the rank of sergeant a year later. He was made a detective lieutenant in 1961 in the old police department, but was again made growth of the department with the growth of the city. He said manpower has always been a problem in effectively patrolling the mammoth city. The police force has now grown to nearly 200 men. Scott indicated that Davis' a sergeant in the reshuffled surrounding merger of Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County. A short time later, he was again made a lieutenant in charge of the detective bureau. Last year he was promoted to captain, and as Moore's retirement became imminent there was strong speculation that Davis would be the man to succeed the chief.

In his career, Davis has attended 23 police schools and has been enrolled in the Dale Carnegie Course. He is a 1942 graduate of the old Oceana High School and also attended the old Norfolk Division of the College of William and Mary, now Old Dominion College. He is also a graduate of the Federal Investigation Bureau Academy.

Davis said the biggest challenge he faces is keeping the salary will remain the same until he takes over officially on Jan. 1. Any organizational reshuffling within the department after that time will be up to Davis, according to Scott. Council did not, however, that it felt some thought should be given to the creation of the new post of deputy police chief. Davis said he could not comment on that yet.

Speculation has it that organizational changes caused by Davis' promotion will affect the second police precinct in Virginia Beach through more than any other. Davis' brother, Capt. R.C. Davis, now commander of the second precinct, is expected to take Payne's position. In the event the post of deputy chief is later created, Capt. Walter J. "Buck" Moore, Jr., now commander of the third police precinct is thought to be in the best position to get that job.

The new chief is considered a task-master and a professional, dedicated police officer. Moore said he was quite pleased with the selection of Davis. Moore went to work for the old Princess Anne County Police Department the same year Davis graduated from high school. Moore was 39 at the time and had been a fisherman with his family until the storms of 1933 "wiped them out." Moore then worked at a Norfolk brewery until he became a policeman during a time when the county was considered "wide open" to gamblers and gambling. Looking back over his 26 years Moore said that when the people decided they wanted to clean up the county and move the gambling and the bootleggers out, he worked hard on it until it was done. He admits, however, that it was not an easy task.

The quiet spoken Moore is credited with outstanding operation and leadership of the police department throughout his career.

Davis had nothing but praise for Moore, whom he said had maintained a high respect and morale for the department.

The investigation into circumstances behind the finding of a pistol and box of ammunition in the Virginia Beach city jail ten days ago continues and is apparently becoming increasingly broader.

Members of the City Sergeant's staff and uniformed police officers found the pistol and ammunition tied to water line pipes in the old section of the jail, while conducting a search of the jail on word from an informant that a gun had been hidden in the cellblock.

Earlier reports indicated to the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN that the investigation had progressed to the point that reliable information had pointed to the person responsible for placing the gun in the cellblock, but that the case had not progressed to the filing of any formal charges.

Progress on this point apparently has now been made, according to City Sgt. John E. Marr, the elected constitutional officer who operates the jail.

While discussing the situation with Marr, he told the SUN, "A man has been investigated in bringing the gun into the jail, but no arrest has been made as yet."

This man was described by Marr as an "inside man." Marr would only elaborate to the point that the man was a "former deputy . . . a jail employee who is not on the payroll anymore, I've seen to that."

When Marr was questioned about circumstances leading to placing the gun in the cellblock, he replied, "It involved one man in the jail, as a prisoner who had offered to pay this man money if he got a gun and arranged for his (the prisoner's) escape."

Marr added, "I knew of the workings of this deal over two months ago. A letter was put in my possession at that time whereby this man was offering the jailer up to $20,000. I sent the letter to the Police Department detective bureau. It was read by a member of the Bureau, who said there was nothing to it and didn't take any action."

Marr then pointed out, "At that time I had a photostatic copy of the letter made and gave it to one of the assistant Commonwealth's Attorneys and have heard nothing on that 'til now."

The matter of the letter was discussed with Virginia Beach Police department acting assistant police chief Capt. W. W. Davis, who is also director of the department's detective bureau.

Capt. Davis pointed out, "We are continuing our investigation of a situation over at the jail, and to make any comment at this time could endanger this investigation."

The question of such a letter being turned over to the office of the Commonwealth's Attorney was discussed with Andre Evans. Evans told the SUN, "I have no knowledge of the letter myself and have talked to my assistant who was handling the case. He knows nothing about such a letter."

Evans added, "A prisoner's father came to my office stating his son, who was confined at the jail, was reportedly posing a possible security problem, and planning some action toward a possible escape from the jail. One of my investigators and I took him to Marr for a discussion of the matter, and that ended the immediate situation at that time with the personnel of my office."

Evans did not disclose the conversation.

Marr earlier had said "I got wind through certain information that a jailbreak was liable to be attempted by a prisoner. I placed this prisoner in a separate section of the jail and issued orders the prisoner was to have no visitors unless they were accompanied by a guard. That fellow is still being watched closely."

Marr also pointed out, "If a gun had gotten into his possession, he didn't have much chance of getting out of the jail."

Center Hearing To Be Sept. 30

City Council Monday authorized a public hearing at the regular Council meeting on Sept. 30 at 10 a.m. on a proposal to build a new cultural-convention center in Virginia Beach.

A feasibility report on such a center was prepared by Planning Director Patrick Standing and his staff and presented to Council officially Monday, although it had been given to Councilmen at an informal meeting two weeks ago.

The report calls for a large sports arena, an exhibition hall and ample off-street parking. A music hall or smaller theatre could either be included or be built at the present Dome, according to the report, which recommended that the Dome be used as a tourist information bureau, home of the Chamber of Commerce, airlines ticket offices and the like.

The same feasibility report recommends that land once used for the old sewage disposal facility on Laskin Road be converted to recreational use for a children's zoo and tennis courts.

The report recommends that the new center be built near the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway west of Park Avenue at 23rd Street on mostly undeveloped land partly owned by the City. The report calls for a 30-acre site.

Cost of such a facility was not in the report, and estimates have ranged from $6 million to $17 million.

On the same day Council will also hold two other public hearings on future land uses and zoning along Virginia Beach Blvd. from Newton Road to the oceanfront and along Independence Blvd. in the Robbins Center (See 'Hearings', Page 2)

Simmons Reconsiders Council Resignation

Simmons

Lynne Simmons, Councilman G. Dewey Simmons, Jr., has reconsidered his earlier decision to resign from City Council and will continue to serve.

Simmons announced his decision at the regular Council meeting Monday, after giving notice of his resignation at an informal meeting two weeks ago.

He said, "At the time I noted my intention to resign, I was completely sincere, but I made the final decision last Thursday."

Simmons said he had yielded to the strong urging of a number of his fellow Councilmen that he reconsider and that after a complete evaluation of the situation, he would stay on.

He said at the time of the earlier resignation that he was resigning because of a severe arthritic condition aggravated by tension and because the pressures of being a Councilman had taken him away from his job enough to cause a financial strain on his family and business.

Monday he said that he had been re-examined by his doctors on several occasions and had been told the condition was getting no worse and was one "we can learn to live with."

He added that the pressures of the job had also been greatly reduced since Roger Scott had become City Manager on July 1 and had taken over many of the smaller jobs that the Councilmen had to handle before.

Concerning the other Councilmen who urged him to stay on, Simmons said, "It's nice to be wanted."

In closing, he said, "I offer my services to continue on as long as I can honestly, efficiently and conscientiously."

Kellam Gets Convention Appointment

Democratic National Committeeman Sidney S. Kellam of Virginia Beach has been appointed to the important Credentials Committee of the Democratic national convention beginning in Chicago on Aug. 25.

The committee is expected to be the center of attention since Mississippi and 13 other states are expecting challenges to the credentials of their delegates. Several challenges are thought to have a good chance of succeeding.

Kellam, 65, has been in the General Hospital of Virginia Beach for tests and treatment of a minor ailment since Sunday. He is reported in satisfactory condition and is expected to be released within the next few days. He says he plans to attend the convention.

Through this election Kellam remains in the post as committeeman he has held since 1960, but did not run again at the state convention last month. State Sen. William Hopkins of Roanoke succeeds Kellam next year.

6 Rescued From Sinking Sloop

GINIA BEACH SUN Catherine Sue Hoyt received a broken right leg and left ankle when she was struck by a bow cleat which had ripped loose from the disabled sloop as it was being secured on the beachfront in the area of 65th Street.

The cleat reportedly ripped loose under the strain of a tow rope from a Coast Guard LARC, and was sent some 75 yards to the beach, bouncing off the roof of a beachfront home, and then striking the woman as she stood in a yard on shore.

Six other persons who had been on the sloop when it was caught up in the stormy seas managed to escape injury.

According to Ronald Olson, owner of the craft who says he lived on the vessel at the Bay Marina on Pretty Lake Road in Norfolk, he and two Norfolk men along with three girls from New York had taken the vessel out for a trip Saturday afternoon. While sailing the Virginia Beach Ocean front the storm forced them to anchor off 37th Street for the night. While attempting to reach Norfolk Sunday morning high waves broke over the sloop's cabin forcing them to anchor again, this time off 65th Street. Signaling that they were in distress brought a Coast Guard LARC to their assistance.

One of the girls, who became seasick, attempted to jump to a Coast Guard ring in waters of the Atlantic, but had to be assisted in boarding the LARC by Seaman Apprentice C. S. Briggs who jumped into the water to aid her. The remaining four passengers on board the sloop swam ashore, and were later joined by Olson after he secured his floundering sloop.

The sloop's anchor line parted in the rough seas and the vessel drifted ashore, where it was secured on the beach until weather permitted it's refloating. Residents of the region, who had gathered on the beach front during the incident, provided all six who had been on board the sloop with warm clothing and offered the group shelter for Sunday night.

The craft was finally refloated and towed to Bay Marina at Little Creek, with some difficulty. The salvage crew finally pulled the sailboat off dry land late Monday night and headed for port.

Attempts to tow slowly failed because the craft had a number of bad leaks. The crew of the 37-foot islander, which handled the towing job, said they had to tow fast to keep the boat planing so it would not sink.

Olson built the boat himself last winter and has it insured for $10,000.

Ronald Olson stood in front of his beached 26-ft. sloop as he pondered conditions under which he could refloat the craft in the ocean off 65th Street.

High-Rent Complex Approved in Thalia

An application for a high-rent apartment complex, shops, business offices and a motel to be built on a site off Virginia Beach Blvd. in Thalia, was approved by the City Planning Commission at that meeting held Tuesday.

Richard Bell, vice-president of Thalia Wayside Corp., presented the plans for the $18 to $20 million complex, which will have 458 apartment units. Bell said that the units would rent from $195 to $400 a month. Construction is planned to begin next spring.

Lago Mar Realty Development Company, Inc. was also approved a change in zoning that would permit property in Sandbridge to be zoned for residences instead of it's past agricultural zoning.

A use permit submitted by the Windjammer Motor Lodge, Inc. was approved to construct 10 additional units to the Lodge's already planned 60. The Lodge is located on Atlantic Avenue at 19th Street.

James G. Kellam's application for a change in zoning from residential to general industrial on the north side of Potter's road was deferred for 60 days to give the engineering department more time to specifically locate the road.

An application submitted by Bernard Jaffee to construct 283 townhouses on Bonney Road across from Corwood Avenue was withdrawn by the applicant. Some changes have to be made before Jaffee will re-submit. Residents from Holland Road and Larispur were among those who objected to W.P. Oberdorfer's application for a change of zoning on property on Holla and Baxter Roads from residential to general industrial. Oberdorfer's application was denied.

A use permit was denied to operators of the Intrigue Restaurant on Indian River Road, which would have allowed dancing on the premises.

Among those applications approved by the Planning Commission was one to permit a change in zoning lying in the Blackwater, Pungo and Princess Anne areas from unrestricted agricultural districts to restricted ones. Before the change, anyone would be permitted to construct any kind of building in these areas. Now the Commission will restrict the building.

Local Republicans Comment on Candidates

Republican reaction to the Nixon-Agnew ticket and the GOP convention in Miami Beach last week in general ranged from disappointment to shock to pleasure.

No Virginia Beach Republicans attended the convention as a delegate or alternate, although John A. Field III, attorney and city-Republican chairman, did attend as a spectator and interested observer.

Field was an unsuccessful GOP candidate for the Virginia House of Delegates from Virginia Beach last fall.

Commenting on the Richard Nixon-Spiro Agnew ticket, Field said, "I was a little disappointed with Mr. Nixon on his choice of a vice-presidential candidate, but the more I think about it, I feel that the Governor will compliment the ticket."

C. Bernard Brown, Virginia Beach real estate broker and chairman of the mass Republican meeting last winter, said, "I think it's a very good ticket, because it's a well-balanced ticket. Both Nixon and Agnew are moderates."

Israel Steingold, who ran unsuccessfully last November for Virginia Beach Commonwealth's Attorney on the GOP ticket had a much more succinct comment. He said, "It shocked me somewhat."

Both Field and Brown believe that Virginia will be in the Republican column this fall. Brown said he did not foresee anything the Democrats could do that would change his opinion. Field also said he thought the GOP would carry Virginia Beach.

Steingold said he had not evaluated the prospects yet, but thought if the Democrats drafted President Johnson, the country would elect Nixon "regardless of feelings."

Steingold also said he considered the convention too "professionally operated." Brown said the platform indicated that the party is out to win in November and that "rather than one of the hard-sell conservatives sticking to their principles they are going to bend some."

Field said he thought the platform was a little too moderate but that it was designed to accommodate the ticket.

While Field predicted a "smashing victory for the GOP in Virginia Beach and Virginia, Steingold said he doubted that eastern Virginia would go Republican, but thought the rest of the state probably would.

When questioned on how the ticket would help the gubernatorial aspirations of once-defeated candidate Linwood Holton, Brown said, "Everything looks rosy for him. He's backed Nixon all the way, and Agnew is just across the river in Maryland."

Field agreed and noted that many who support Nixon in Virginia this year will support Holton next year.

Field also said he was "miffed" at NBC News for the way they "indicated the Republicans have biased off the Negro vote." He said this was not true and had been refuted by Rockefeller, Lindsey, Agnew and even Nixon.

2 Head Administrative Posts

Two Virginia Beach Public School administrators who both attended the University of Virginia have been named to higher positions in the school system.

Mrs. Margaret A. Fraser has been named as the first Library Supervisor for the City of Virginia Beach Schools. Joseph J. Owens, Jr., has assumed the position of administrative assistant in charge of pupil personnel.

Mrs. Fraser received a B. S. degree from Radford College and a master's degree in Library Science from the Library School of George Peabody College. She has done further research at the College of William and Mary, O.D.C. and U. Va.

Mrs. Fraser was the head librarian at Norview High School for 11 years before going to First Colonial High School in 1966. She was the recipient of a federal grant award in 1968 for $22,222, selected by the State Board of Education of Virginia. First Colonial was one of three secondary schools in the State receiving this award to develop a Demonstration School Library in 1968-69.

Mrs. Fraser is a member of Pi Gamma Mu national honorary fraternity, the American Library Association and the Virginia Beach Education Association.

Mrs. Fraser is the wife of James H. Fraser. The Frasers, who live in the Mayflower Apartments, have one married daughter, Mrs. Sandra Kittell, and four grandchildren.

Owens is a graduate of California State College, where he received a bachelor of science degree, and of the University of Virginia, where he obtained a master of education degree.

Since 1962, Owens has served as the Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent of Schools. Previously he was principal of John B. Dey Elementary School and the Director of Testing and Research for the public schools for the City of Virginia Beach.

Owens

Mrs. Fraser

Owens is past president of the Virginia Beach Education Association. He is a member of the Princess Anne Ruritan Club and of the Mayor's Council Youth Opportunity Program.

He is married to the former Martha Armistead of Portsmouth, and the Owens' have three children, Joseph J. Owens, III, 14 Jeffrey L. Owens 6 and Kathryn M. Owens 4.

Virginia Beach city librarian Mrs. Margaret Bada smiles approvingly as Mrs. Roger Oberndorf, Public Library Board Chairman, turns over the ceremonial first spade of dirt at the construction site of the new Kempsville branch library.

Construction Starts

Construction is under way on the new Kempsville branch library which is located near the intersection of Lobaugh and Kempsville Roads. It is anticipated the new library will be completed for opening by March 30, 1969.

Upon completion the library will represent an estimated $153,000 investment, half of which will be covered by federal funds, including the cost of land and the building including furnishings. Initially, the library is expected to contain 7,000 books, which will represent a cost of approximately $42,000.

The ground breaking ceremonies featured addresses by City Manager Roger Scott, and City Councilman George Ferrell who resides in the Kempsville Borough of the city. Both Scott and Ferrell pointed to the library as another sign of the continuing forward progress being made by the growing city of Virginia Beach, and what the library will mean to the education and cultural growth of children who will make use of the many volumes to be placed in the new library. The design is similar to the Bayside and Windsor Woods branches.

Nutritionist to Speak

Adelle Davis, nationally known nutritionist, will lecture on "Your Health Is In Your Hands" on Friday, Aug. 8 at 8 p.m. in First Colonial High School Auditorium on First Colonial Road, sponsored by the Association for Research and Enlightenment.

Other public lectures to be presented by the Association in the course of the week, being celebrated as Health Week, will be given in the A. R. E. auditorium. On Monday, Aug. 5 at 8 p.m. William McGarey, M.D. from Phoenix, Ariz. will speak on "Medical Research in the Edgar Cayce Readings." Fishing Is Free On Pier

The Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel recently eliminated all charges for fishing and sight seeing from its famous Sea Gull Pier.

Now motorists who use the Bridge-Tunnel in their north south travels can enjoy a cost-free "fishing break" when they cross the 17.6 mile long span. Until recently there was a $1 charge for fishing and a 50 cent charge for sightseeing from the pier which accommodates more than 500 fishermen at a time.

Zoning Occupies Council

Zoning matters again consumed the better part of City Council's regular meeting Monday. Council moved through the 37 regular and deferred items in just under two hours.

The item which caused the most controversy concerned the construction of 460 townhouses at Baker Road and Newton Road by developer Herbert Kramer.

The dispute centers around a school site in the development which the School Board says is necessary, but is not at all pleased with the price tag offered them by Kramer for acreage within the site. The School Board contends the price is too high per acre, Kramer says he has offered it to the city at about $2,000 an acre under what he paid, or about $90,000. School officials contend he must have paid too much for the land and that other land nearby can be bought cheaper. The townhouses were deferred another 30 days until a school site can be agreed upon, whether the one offered by Kramer or another.

Several councilmen got into the heated discussion with Kramer over the controversy, including G. Dewey Simmons, Jr., George Ferrell and Robert Cromwell and Curtis Payne. Other deferred items did better. Thomas M. Murphy received a zoning change on property at 16th Street and Mediterranean Avenue for limited commercial development.

Judy Lowe Miller received permission to operate a snack bar at a new motel at 22nd Street and Atlantic Avenue. But two gas stations on Thalia Drive and Virginia Beach Blvd., which had been before Council for about three months were denied.

Council also overrode objections of the City Planning Commission and allowed Bailey Parker Construction Corp. permission to build 56 apartments on property off Pinewood and Holly Roads. The Planning Commission had recommended only 32 apartments in the high-rise building.

The SPCA received final approval on the regular docket for its new building already under construction at General Booth and Oceana Blvds.

An application of Time Giant for a new store at Witcomb and Bonney Roads in Kempville was denied.

Seven applications of the Dorman Corp., recommended for denial by the Planning Commission were withdrawn. They concerned odd-sized lots in the Woodland area for duplex housing. Others in the same area were approved by application by Robert Simpson were on larger lots and were approved.

An application for a billboard on Virginia Beach Blvd. near Great Neck Road was denied.

Living units again received much attention of Council. An application of Bernard and Albert Kroil and Ruth Cohen for rezoning and a use permit for 1,000 apartments at Holland and Lynnhaven Roads was approved, although only 350 apartments on the east side of the drainage canal were immediately approved.

Lynnhaven Building Supply Corp. was granted a zoning change and use permit for 164 townhouses near Wolfshire Road and Regency Drive.

C. M. Morgan was granted a use permit for 24 apartments near Seateck Elementary School and Lynnhaven Road. Corporation was granted a use permit for 300 townhouses and apartments on South Newtown Road near Pontiac Road in the Arrowhead area.

In the case of each apartment or townhouse complex approved, the School Board was consulted and either did not feel a new school was necessary or already had a site available in the area.

Horse Show Planned

The Second Annual Bayside-Fraternel Horse Show will be held on Saturday, Aug. 17 and Sunday Aug. 18. The event is sponsored by the Bayside Charity Lodge.

The 75-class show will be held at Greenbrier Farms, which is on Military Highway. Events will be in western, English, hunting, jumping, ponies and roadsters. Gate prizes will be offered, and a concession stand will be open on both days.

Admission to the show is $1 for adults. Children under 10 will be admitted free of charge. Rain dates for the show are Aug. 24 and 25.

Outsiders Outnumber Local Surfers

Unless Virginia Beach really puts out some effort, the 6th Annual East Coast Surfing Championships, to be held on Aug. 24 and 25, will go to the south and west, just like it did last year.

According to Jaycee's chairman L.D. (Tuck) Finley III, only about 15 out of every 100 entries are from local surfers. This amounts to about 45 or 50 locals out of the 400 to 500 entrants who will be eligible to cop prizes and fame. The current entries are "about the same" as they were for the '67 contest, according to Finley. They stopped the number there because "any more would be cumbersome. The 500 feet we have at the pier is more than enough to give them room," Finley continued.

Two local standouts for the contest are midget Jimbo Brothers and senior men's division nationally known champion Bob Holland.

Quite a few well-known world surfers have entered the event. Corky Carroll, once the number one surfer in the world will compete in the men's division and try to gain that title from Newport Beach California's Steve Bigler who shut him out in the finals last year. Greg Tucker, Mike Doyle and Rusty Miller have also entered.

Joyce Hoffman, also from California has indicated that she will enter the contest, along with a sister team Cathy and Cindy Lienhard, who are expected to put on a good performance.

If at First You Don't Succeed...

After an earlier attempt to set off the alarm system Sunday night, burglars returned to Miller's Department Store at Indian River Road and Military Highway Monday night and successfully took nearly $5,000 in rings and merchandise.

According to Detective H.J. Coffield of the Virginia Beach Police Department, "only the expensive section" of the jewelry counter was hit by the returning burglars.

In their first try, the burglars entered the building through an adjoining grocery store but were blocked by a metal chain door which separates the two stores during closing hours. When the would-be-thieves rattled the metal door, they set off a burglar alarm and fled, Coffield.

On their second attempt entry was gained through glass double doors at the front of the building sometime between 11 p.m. Monday and 8 a.m. Tuesday. There is no burglar alarm on the front door.

The Park Lane Jewelry Co. of San Antonio, Texas stocks the jewelry counter at Miller's as they do at many such Miller stores.

Police are continuing their investigation.

Cdr. Relieved

Cdr. Arthur J. Storeide, USN relieved Cdr. Paul B. Tuzo III, USN as Commanding Officer, Tactical Air Control Squadron Twenty-Two on Aug. 2, at the Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek.

Cdr. Tuzo, who resides with his wife Billie at Abington Dr., was Commanding Officer since Aug. 1967 and also served as Executive Officer from November 1966. His next duty station will be in Newport, R.I., where he will study at the Naval War College.

Gary Propper, a favorite here last year, will be among many entrants from Florida. Puerto Rico's top surfer, George Muchuca, has also indicated that he will compete for the men's title.

Surfboard manufacturer Dewey Weber will try to enter two events. Weber, along with other surfboard builders, will enter his competition team, Virginia Beach's favorite son, Bob White and his Wave Riding Vehicles team who have gained national recognition in the past year, will be out for the prizes, too. Rules have been changed to the men's title.

BADGES & BANTER

By Les Lehigh

A family picnic for members of the Virginia Beach police department will be held Saturday at Redwing Park, on General Booth Boulevard. Sponsored by Princess Anne F.O.P. Lodge #8, the affair promises to offer plenty of food and entertainment for everyone.

Members of the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad are still conducting their annual fund raising drive. Men of the squad hope to raise $32,000 to finance the squad's operation for the coming year. This year's fund raising drive slogan, which points very vividly of the importance of the drive, is "We need your help now! You may need ours later!"

Four men of the Virginia Beach Police Department will travel to Richmond next Monday to take part in the Central Police Training School. Those who will be participating in the three week course include officers M.M. Brown, Traffic Bureau; L.A. Ives, 2nd Precinct; G.B. St. Amand, 3rd Precinct; and detective C.C. Pace, attached to the Youth Bureau.

Everyone is pleased to learn officer Ray Phillips, attached to the radio room in police headquarters at Princess Anne Courthouse, has been released after two weeks confinement in the hospital. Phillips is reported doing fine while recuperating at home.

Two members of the Plaza Rescue Squad showed the importance of their training and services of the Squad last Monday night. The men were dispatched to a Malibu home to transport Mrs. Emily Adams to a hospital for the expected birth of her child. Although he tried, ambulance driver Clarence Rush lost his race with the stork, and Squadsmen M.E. Eardley delivered Mrs. Adams' 7 pound, 10 ounce son. At last reports mother, son, and squadsmen were all doing fine.

"Obviously," he added, "this will take much more time than we had anticipated and will delay final selections. We are in a continuous process of site evaluation. The consultants have not visited all sites in all regions and the Board wants all regions completed before making any site announcements."

The building and site committee of the Board has also asked the consultants to provide additional information on several sites under consideration.

"And," Synor added, "some political subdivisions have not obtained options on proposed sites. It would serve little purpose to select a site which later turned out not to be available."

Synor said, "We do not want to overlook any possibility of picking the best site for each of the remaining regions."

The three sites in Virginia Beach under construction would be donated either by the City or by private developers. All are 100 acre sites, as required by the Board. The City owns the Green Run Farm site offered for the college, and the two other sites, one near the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway and the other near the Chesapeake-Virginia Beach line on Interstate 64, are owned by developers.

He said that, "We have received information on a large number of additional possible sites which had not previously been brought to our attention. To be absolutely certain that no good site is overlooked the State Board has asked its consultants to review all new sites very carefully."

accommodate the Championship's growing status. All entrants must be members of one of the three surfing associations before they can be considered eligible. The associations, Eastern, Western or Hawaiian Surfing Association, will serve as proof before membership entry will be given. Membership will be denied without this proof, according to entree chairman George Desgain.

Hoppy Schwartz, the competition director for the Western Surfing Association, will return to the resort city to judge the contest for the second year in a row. Rusty Huber, the executive director of the East Coast Surfing Association, will accompany five other judges who will determine the best of the contest.

Grant Parrish, who has designed all of the East Coast Surfing Championship's decals in the past, has again done the one used officially this year. About $1,200 has been spent on trophies that will be awarded to the winners of each event. The main prize is a four-foot high mahogany surfboard with a gold surfer on the top.

Events will begin at 7 a.m. on the left side of the Steel Fishing Pier, which will be closed for the two-day event. About 20,000 spectators are expected for the event, and it is hoped that next year it will be carried on ABC television's Wide World of Sports.

The all-time great surfing film "Free and Easy" will be shown at the Civic Center for one show only on Friday, Aug. 23. Tickets are $2.25 at the door and $1.75 in advance. Pre-show tickets may be purchased at The Temple of Music, Pembroke Mall, The Hub at Princess Anne Plaza, Martens & Davis Diving Shop on Colley Avenue in Norfolk and at Alexander-Beeble on Laskin Road and at Pembroke Mall.

Elmer E. Walters, Game Warden Area Leader in the Norfolk-Chesapeake-Virginia Beach Area, has been named Virginia Game Warden of the Year. Game Commission executive director Chester F. Phelps announced.

Walters has an excellent law enforcement record coupled with the unique ability to command top performance from those working under him. As recipient of the Game Warden of the Year title, he will attend the Southeastern Association of Game and Fish Commissioners to be held in Baltimore during October, where he will receive an attractive plaque during special ceremonies.

The area under his supervision is one of the two most populous in the state.

Dredging To Require Permission

The Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries gave final approval to a regulation requiring special permission for dredging operations in Back Bay at their recent meeting in Richmond.

Effective Oct. 1, any drilling, dredging or other operations designed to recover shell, minerals or other substance from the bottom of Back Bay or its tributaries must first be sanctioned by a permit from the Commission. The lands lying under Back Bay are considered property of the Commonwealth of Virginia and are under the specific control of the Game Commission.

The Commission also announced that it will set waterfowl seasons and bag limits as soon as possible after the season framework is released from Washington about mid-August.

Successful Meet to Continue

The Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce's First Annual Track and Field Open was considered "successful" by Chamber member Robert E. Whitley. The meet, held on Monday, attracted about 800 spectators who witnessed Olympic Bronze Medal winner Ed Roberts set three meet records. Seven other records were broken. Frank Kellam, Chamber of Commerce president, welcomed the crowd and then introduced First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing who spoke briefly. Downing and Kellam also assisted meet chairman

Gus Riganio in passing out trophies. State AAU president Richard Holander said that "this was the best show for a first track meet that I've ever seen."

McClanan Wins Round

Billy McClanan, from the Princess Anne Country Club, closed with a 74, yesterday at the Eastern Amateur's First Flight qualifying tournament. He totaled 146.

McClanan won the round by a three stroke lead over Robert Callahan of Melbourne, Fla., who was the first round leader with a 71. Callahan slipped to a 76, and wound up with a total for second place with 149.

McClanan's six over par score was one of the lowest ever to be recorded in the first flight qualifying event.

Footballers To Register

Registration for the Princess Anne Plaza football league will be conducted at Lynnhaven Elementary School on Saturday, August 17.

All boys between the ages of 9 and 16 who are interested in participating in either a touch or tackle football team are invited to register between 1 and 4 p.m. Registration at this time is required if the boy is to play in the league.

About 14 teams will be formed citywide under the auspices of the Virginia Beach Dept. of Parks and Recreation.

Maryland shot-putter Enrie Heaton set a meet record at 58-6. Three Baltimore Olympic Club teammates, high-jumper Frank Costello (6-9), discus thrower Rich Drescher (163-8) and javelin thrower Dick Dull (231-2), also set meet records.

Two Junior Olympic records, both of them in the 16-17 age division, were broken. Hammond's Jack Clauson shot put for a distance of 55-10 and Washington's Dan Brooks high jumped 6-4.

Dr. Doug Conkwright, a Virginia Beach local, won a special style award for his prowess in the Master's Mile, an event for men over 40. His prize was a book on jogging and a pair of jogging shoes.

Since the meet was an apparent success for a first timer, the Chamber plans to continue it as an annual summertime event.

By the Way, We're on Fire

The fire truck came slowly to a stop in the 3100 block of Pacific Avenue, and Mrs. Hazel Ware, bookkeeper for the Virginia Beach Sun, said, "There must be a fire somewhere close around here."

She was told it was upstairs in the WVAB studios.

Les Lehigh, news director of WVAB, came down the back stairs and asked casually of Joe Lowenthal, managing editor of the Virginia Beach Sun, "Do you know where the main switches for WVAB are?"

But it was not until Lehigh was assured that Lowenthal did indeed know where the switches were that Lehigh said, "The place is on fire."

Lowenthal threw the switches. It had all happened rather quickly. At the height of a severe thunderstorm Friday afternoon there was a sizzling sound and a loud clap of thunder which sounded nearby. It was, it was on the roof. Lightning struck one of the radio station's antennae and crack through the wiring into an electrical outlet in the production studio on the second floor of the building at 3108 Pacific Ave.

The wires around the outlet caught on fire, igniting the soundproofing insulation and wall supports behind the paneling. The shock was too much for a magnetic tape eraser that had been plugged into the outlet. It gave one puff of smoke and died.

General manager Jack H. Harris happened to be looking into the studio and saw the sparks fly. He suggested calling the fire department.

In less than five minutes the firemen from the Virginia Beach Borough fire department were on the scene and very efficiently put the fire out and cleaned up the mess.

Of course one section of paneling had to be torn away. Quite a bit of water had to be pumped into the burning mess. Anderson and Strudwick office workers downstairs were slightly surprised when water began pouring from an overhead light fixture. And an exhaust fan had to be set up to get rid of the smoke.

Oddly enough the lightning did not knock the radio station off the air. Lowenthal did that when he pulled the main switches. When the burned outlet was cut away and wires secured, the radio station resumed broadcasting. It was all done in a matter of minutes.

Although no estimate was made immediately, damage was considered slight. Harris had high praise for the quick work of the firemen.

At the height of the blaze Lowenthal walked upstairs to find two of his reporters staring at the scene.

"Did anyone think of taking a picture for the newspaper?" he asked.

Convicted 2nd Time

A 32-year-old Virginia Beach woman has been fined $250 and given a 30 day jail sentence after receiving a second conviction of charges of prostitution, Mrs. Patricia B. Groves is free on $500 bond while she appeals the conviction. Police investigators said Mrs. Groves was arrested after Detective Joseph P. Vitale, Jr., reportedly arranged a date with her at her home on Ballo Drive. Vitale indicated the home had been under surveillance for 30 days, during which time a large number of persons were observed entering and leaving the home at night, following a complaint about the home from residents of the region.

In Critical Condition

Hospital officials at last report listed Richard Keith Barco, 16, in critical condition from injuries received in a Sunday auto accident. Police investigators said Barco, of the 400 block of 27th Street, received head injuries when his auto went out of control during a heavy rain fall on the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway. Barco's auto reportedly skidded into a guard rail approximately one-half mile from the Expressway main toll plaza. The guard rail passed through the auto, and Barco was thrown from the auto striking the guard rail.

Man Burned

A Norfolk man is reported to be in satisfactory condition today suffering from burns from his waist to his neck, which he received when his small van truck flipped over, spilling hot water and gasoline on him.

Clifton M. Miller was struck by a car driven by Carrie Madge Bailey, who was not injured in the wreck. Police said that both vehicles were headed south on Military Highway when Miller's truck stopped to make a left turn.

Mrs. Bailey was charged with following too close.

Charged with Procuring

Ray Clifton Coley, 11, 23, of Early Bird Street has been bound over to a Virginia Beach Circuit Court grand jury on a charge of procuring girls for the purpose of prostitution. He is employed by Republic Personnel. A 21-year-old policeman was sent to the Malibu Towers office on the pretext of seeing work in the secretarial or public relations field.

The woman, who said she needed money to meet medical expenses, was told she could make a minimum of $500 a week if she was willing to accept a job entertaining men. During preliminary court proceedings a defense motion for dismissal of the charges was overruled.

Principal Killed

Mrs. Geneva Hunt McCollum, principal of Holland Elementary School, died in a Williamsburg hospital Tuesday as a result of injuries she received in an automobile crash on Aug. 11. Mrs. McCollum was a passenger in a car driven by her husband, John Curtis McCollum, which struck another car driven by Samuel E. Diggs of Nyack, N. J. Alice McCollum, daughter of the deceased, was admitted to the hospital and released on Tuesday.

Charge Reduced

A charge of possession of marijuana was reduced to the possession of dangerous drugs against William John Kempf, in Municipal Court. He was given a six months suspended sentence.

Kempf, 19, was arrested at Peabody's Warehouse. Detective J. P. Vitale Jr. said that Kempf had an envelope in his pocket that contained marijuana.

Jackets Taken

Police are continuing their investigation into the break-in of Sears, Roebuck & Co. store at Pembroke Mall, where thieves took 27 boys' jackets.

The building was entered between 2 and 3:50 p.m. Sunday through a broken display window on the northwest side of the store.

The police, who have no suspects in the case, said the jackets were worth about $17 each for a total loss of about $450.

City Adds Adult Classes

The Virginia Beach City School Board will offer to the citizens of the City a much expanded Adult Education Program this fall.

The program, which in the past has been concentrated at Princess Anne High School, will be expanded into several areas of the city. An effort is being made to place classes in the areas of the city where the greatest demand for a particular class exists. A much broader course offering will be available to those adults interested in further educational opportunities.

Engineers Add Two Partners

After nearly 30 years in business, Frank Tarrall of Frank D. Tarrall, Jr. & Associates has formed a partnership with two other men, but the name of the consulting engineering and surveying firm will remain the same.

The business, founded in Norfolk in 1940, moved to Virginia Beach in 1958, and now has offices at 101 N. Plaza Trail in Princess Anne Plaza.

The two new partners are Warner G. Marsh, 44, and Joseph J. Basgier, 44.

Marsh, who worked for the firm from 1949 to 1957, has recently returned to Virginia Beach from Tampa, Fla., where he was employed with a consulting engineering firm. He also has been the City Engineer of Gainesville, Fla.

Marsh is a registered civil engineer and land surveyor in Florida and a registered professional engineer in Virginia. He lives with his wife and three sons in Princess Anne Plaza.

Basgier has been a consulting engineer in the Tidewater area for the past 15 years. He is a registered professional engineer and registered land surveyor. He holds both a bachelor's and a master's degree in engineering from VPI. He lives with his wife and five children in Thalia Shores.

Tarrall said that with the addition of the two men to the firm that additional services can be available with greater dispatch. He added, "In every business, young blood is needed in the interest of progress and efficiency."

Registration for this program will be held on Wednesday, Aug. 28, and Thursday, Aug. 29 from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. at nine locations. The nine locations are Bayside High School, First Colonial High School, Kellam High School, Oceana Naval Air Station, Princess Anne High School, Seateck Elementary School, Union Kempsville High School, Virginia Beach Junior High School, and Woodstock Elementary School.

In other action Council renewed hospital agreements with seven hospitals for medical care of indigent patients through the Welfare Dept. The daily cost of care went up from a high of $27 last year to $45.62 this year.

Surfers were granted use of the Croatan Beach area from Route 146 southward to Camp Pendleton for practice and for the use of surfers not participating in the East Coast Surfing Championship at the regular surfing area at Steel Pier. Previously Council had also allowed the surfers use of an area south of the pier to the inlet also during the two-day contest period.

Beach Transport Corp. was given permission to raise its jitney fares from 25 to 50 cents for service from the Court-house, Dam Neck and NAS Oceana to Fort Story. Service to those facilities from Fort Story will remain at 25 cents. The new rates go into effect in 60 days from the two Navy installations.

The Courthouse runs began yesterday on a 60-day trial period, at the request of City manager Roger Scott, during peak traffic hours of the morning and afternoon.

The city also accepted three acres of land and a lake from Herbert Kramer for recreational use. The area is known as Lake Edward near Newtown Road.

Funds totaling $1,398 were appropriated to meet the assessment of the Southeastern Regional Planning Commission for Virginia Beach based on ten cents per person living in the city. The commission says the population is 145,800, considerably under city estimates. The new funds were necessary to meet the $14,584 assessment based on the 1967 estimate instead of the 1966 estimate budgeted.

Council also gave Scott permission to apply for anti-crime funds just approved and released by Congress and the State of Virginia before the Aug. 26 deadline.

Action on a City Code amendment for a personnel board and names to be considered for that board was deferred in the informal meeting.

The incident apparently has resulted in stronger steps on the part of City Sgt. Marr to increase security at the jail.

Marr told the SUN he has set up a schedule whereby two or three jailers will be on duty at all times, and he has requested jailors to be more cautious in keeping a close watch at all times.

Marr added, "There have been several 'shakedowns' in the jail since this incident and there is no other gun within the confines of this jail."

The City Sergeant said, "On numerous occasions I have taken out warrants against prisoners in the jail for destroying city property, and there has not been very much done about it in the courts."

He also said he wished to point out the matter of the gun in the jail is still being thoroughly investigated by members of his staff, members of the Commonwealth's Attorney's office, and the Police Department's detective bureau.

Marr had one other remark on the subject. He said, "There is also a lot of jealousy among some of the city personnel due to the fact that I won out in the last election."

Children's Week Starts Monday

Most parents will agree that every week is "Children's Week" but nevertheless The Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce makes a special 10-day of the third week in August every year and calls it "Children's Week."

The week is studied with special "treats" to spark a last fling of summer for back-to-schoolers. Many families coincide their vacation with this special week, others treat the children to an extra vacation before the school term sets in.

This year as heretofore, Aug. 19-25 is programmed with one or more events a day, everything is free for young visitors whose host guides for the week will be members of the local Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y Clubs.

Monday, activity centers around Seaside Park where there'll be a special performance of "Charlotte and Her Chimps" in the afternoon followed by a "Summer Sing-Off" competition of folk groups in the early evening.

Tuesday takes young vacationers overseas for a "Sea Lore Safari", with a science teacher who will show shells, talk about them and the sea. The Safari will visit the Nauticus Museum to see all the shells native to Virginia Beach.

A Puppet Show is scheduled for the evening's entertainment. Wednesday morning ages 6 to 16 are invited to play in a miniature Golf Tournament for a cash prize. That evening "Sing Out Virginia Beach" will enthrall all ages with its stimulating music that carries the freedom message.

Thursday features a Square Dance exhibition seaside at sunset. Friday there's a bus trip to "Treasure Island" at Norfolk's Garden-of-the-Sea.

Climaxing the week is an event of almost national significance and spectacle. The Jaycee's East Coast Surfing Championship.

Fraternity Will Meet

PI Kappa Phi Fraternity will hold their 30th annual convention at The Cavalier beginning on Aug. 18-22.

There are approximately 300 alumni in the area which incorporates the fraternity's corporate Beta Chapter at Old Dominion College.

Assistant FBI Director C. D. DeLoach will address the conventioners. A PI Kappa Phi alumni himself, DeLoach was initiated while a student at Stetson.

So the small fry is not neglected there will be a Sand Castle building contest for the bucket brigade six years and under. "Sand Castle Queen and King for 1968" will be named and crowned on the beach in front of The Norwegian Lady statue.

The incident apparently has resulted in stronger steps on the part of City Sgt. Marr to increase security at the jail.

Marr told the SUN he has set up a schedule whereby two or three jailers will be on duty at all times, and he has requested jailors to be more cautious in keeping a close watch at all times.

Marr added, "There have been several 'shakedowns' in the jail since this incident and there is no other gun within the confines of this jail."

The City Sergeant said, "On numerous occasions I have taken out warrants against prisoners in the jail for destroying city property, and there has not been very much done about it in the courts."

He also said he wished to point out the matter of the gun in the jail is still being thoroughly investigated by members of his staff, members of the Commonwealth's Attorney's office, and the Police Department's detective bureau.

Stores Stay on Guard for Shoplifters

By Susan Axelrod

The friendly, carefree atmosphere that Virginia Beach presents might seem like a haven for shoplifters, but dishonest people, beware. Those mild-mannered salesmen are more wary of you than you might think. And don't ever believe that if something stolen is returned owners won't press charges. In most cases they will.

Webb Brown, of Webster's Clothing Store says, "We prosecute every shoplifter we catch." So does Miller's Department Store, according to Manager J. Richard Cohick.

In most stores, the sales people themselves are the main security measures taken. Brian Johnson, public relations manager for the Colonial Stores in the area says, "We concentrate on more of a general awareness instilled in the help by the managers."

At Miller and Rhoades, a large department store located at Pembroke Mall, they have fitting room checkers who check the clothes as they go into and out of the fitting rooms. Their main concentration is in the numerous fitting rooms scattered throughout the store. Says Mrs. Barbara Hertzler, secretary to store manager Foster, "We try to make the employees aware of the merchandise in their department; we try to instill a general alertness in all areas."

At Sears Roebuck, also at the Mall, the management tries to "get the sales people to act as security guards. They won't usually chase a criminal, they'll call a security guard for that. We stress alertness in them," says Laskin Road store assistant manager Joe Midgette.

But in many cases, alert salespeople are just not enough, especially in the larger department stores.

Miller's manager Cohick points out that his store employs plainclothes security guards that patrol the aisles of the store. "Many of these men are off-duty policemen," says Cohick.

Miller and Rhoades also has a full-time security guard, as does the store's Mall neighbor, Sears. Colonial Stores does not have any official protectors such as this, and unlike most food stores, Colonial "does not employ mirrors or any devices like that," says Johnson.

What does the small businessman, then, who does not employ two-way mirrors and house detectives, do to stop the shrinkage of his wares by pilferers?

"We just have to keep our eyes open," says Francis Wood, of Alexander-Beeble, Sales-girls Mark Tarrall and Charlene Spruill Resh agree. "We just watch what is taken into the dressing rooms," they say, "and also look at the dresses on the racks that have been unzipped. That's where someone almost get away with it."

"We haven't had much trouble lately," according to Leslie Koett of Webster's. "But we have certain rules that keep the potential shoplifter in line," she continues. "For example, customers can only take two bathing suits into a dressing room at one time."

Mike Clark of The Clothing Chest agrees with the others in saying, "We just watch what they take into the dressing room."

What does the Virginia Beach police force think of the increasing problem? "We don't like it," said Detective W.D. Haden.

The laws on apprehending shoplifters have been relaxed somewhat, according to Haden. "Now," he says, "we can catch them in the act, with goods in their possession when leaving the store or still inside. It's better, however, to wait until they get outside, because they could always say they were going to pay for it later."

The majority of juvenile shoplifters, under 21, are boys, according to Haden. "They steal little things," he said, "like candy and records. Transistor radios are a big thing that is stolen around here. These kids can come into a store and slip an album or a bar of candy into their notebook or bookbag and try to walk out with it."

Nine out of ten juvenile pilferers are apprehended on the spot by the store managers or representatives of the store. What happens then? The popular fairy tale is that if the child puts the article back, all is considered square. Not so. Roses Department Store prosecutes every case, young as well as old. Many stores contact the juvenile bureau of the police force, which in turn, contacts the child's parents. If no formal action is taken by the store, the child is released into his parent's custody. If charges are brought, the case goes to court. A juvenile officer, then turns to the child's school standing, his background. His findings are then turned over to the judge who delivers a sentence.

If the case is serious enough the parents of the child may be fined or he may be sent to a detention home or Beaumont, a boys' reformatory, or both actions may be taken. If the case is lighter, the child may only be turned over to his parents for their supervision. "Most of the time, the parents could afford to buy the kid a candy bar, but he steals it anyway," Haden said.

The majority of adult shoplifters are middle-aged women, according to Haden. They steal anything from produce, to one case by a professional shoplifter who walked out with a portable color television set under her dress between her legs. The most common commodity stolen is cigarettes. The professional woman lifter might wear a longer-than-average skirt, or carry large shopping bags. A much-used trick by professional shoplifters is a belt with a pulley hooked underneath a long skirt. The woman practices with the hook so that she can lift objects up and walk out of the store with little detection and even less discomfort.

The outnumbered men in the racket often wear jackets over their shirts that have numerous pockets in them for easy hiding. Men usually steal small objects, according to Haden, like sunglasses. Many times they will walk into a store with a book in their hands, looking very studious. But, the book has no pages in the middle, instead, a cut out place where a few packs of cigarettes or a transistor radio may be neatly stashed.

There was recently a professional shoplifting ring in the Virginia Beach area. "They will register license plates under a dead man's name, so that they cannot be caught. Professional shoplifters work fast. There is usually a get-away car in front of the store waiting for the lifters to come out of the store so they can get out of the parking lot in a hurry," said Haden. There are many who shoplift out of need, and need only. "I recall one case," Haden said, "where a mother was stealing milk for her baby, and she was caught. This isn't the first time someone has been caught doing this. Sometimes the owner will prosecute and sometimes he won't. Sometimes, he just gives the woman the milk and sends her home."

The stores do not seem to have many returning shoplifters whom they have suspected, or who have actually been caught.

"We don't have any that come back," says Cohick, "especially if they know they have been spotted by a security guard, because they know that we know what they're up to."

Borough Kicks Off UCF Drive

A knock on the door or a big smile on the face between now and Sept. 1 could mean a visit from a volunteer of the Virginia Beach Borough United Communities Fund.

The annual campaign was kicked off Tuesday morning with a breakfast meeting at Neptune's Corner attended by about 25 persons, including a number of officials of the Tidewater UCF.

The borough campaign is held about a month earlier than the rest of Tidewater because of the seasonal businesses that close after Labor Day.

Earl Slattum, of Virginia National Bank, and William Swertfeffer, of First & Merchants National Bank, co-presidents of the borough fund, announced the 1968 goal of $6,950.

That total represents a ten per cent increase over last year, according to Slattum. He said the increase was added since a number of new businesses have opened since last summer and since last year's goal was exceeded by about two per cent.

Stanley Waranch, vice-president and vice-chairman of the Tidewater UCF; H.E. Price III, general units chairman; and Tim Shea, executive director, all spoke to the breakfast meeting.

Charles McAllen, assistant to the director and Lib Riber, campaign assistant, both of the Tidewater fund, also attended the meeting.

Slattum said that the volunteers will begin canvassing the borough within the next few days.

He also announced that Bill Dekker and Roy Neil will be co-captains for motels and hotels and that Michael Savvides and Mike Erhard will be co-captains for restaurants. In addition 13 other captains will be supervising solicitation in individual blocks of the borough, according to Slattum.

Slattum promised that progress reports will be issued each week, at close intervals.

Burlage Aims City's Future

A small but enthusiastic crowd attended a meeting Monday night at Cox High School, sponsored by L. Charles Burlage, attorney and Virginia Beach businessman.

About 250 persons attended the meeting to hear proposals concerning expansion of the resort industry to every section of Virginia Beach and to discuss additional matters which could be incorporated in the resort activity.

Burlage and a few others, independently of the Virginia Beach Innkeepers Association, called the meeting and invited about 1,400 people. While some called the crowd "disappointing," Burlage said he was not at all disappointed that 250 businessmen and women would come out on a hot night at the height of the summer season to discuss the issue. He said after the meeting that he considered it a success and that he felt a great deal had been accomplished.

Appearing on the platform with Burlage was former City Manager W. Russell Hatchett, who has long been interested in the expansion of the resort industry in Virginia Beach. Hatchett told the group that Council should be approached with concrete suggestions and asked for help.

Representatives from businessmen's associations in Bay-side and Kempsville were also present, since Burlage said he wished to involve the entire city.

After Burlage and others had presented their prepared remarks, the floor was opened for discussion, and a number of complaints and suggestions were aired.

Burlage, who owns the Beakers Hotel on Atlantic Avenue, then accepted a motion from the floor made by Princess Anne Inn operator Scott Sterling that City Council be approached to appoint a committee to study resort problems and set priorities concerning expansion.

This is in line with a request made earlier by Innkeepers Association president Charles Gardner, who appeared before an informal meeting of Council to seek a Tourist Commission to be set up by the city.

Mention was also made at the meeting that area differences should be forgotten and that the four-city south Tidewater area should work together closely on a new sports stadium and a new large airport.

In his prepared remarks, Burlage said, "Advertising the name of Virginia Beach is important, but unless you have something to offer once the tourist arrives he will get out as fast as he can after a couple of days."

He noted the lack of tourist attractions, both night and day, to hold tourists in Virginia Beach and proposed a 22-point program he said was not meant to be all-inclusive for resort expansion, since the industry is and can be so important to the economy of Virginia Beach.

Included in Burlage's proposals were voting for local option liquor-by-the-drink, encouragement of a bird hunting preserve, further development of Rudee Inlet for fishing and boating and the connection of a canal system throughout the city, private or municipal off-street parking, working with historical societies for development of sites, movement and expansion of the present amusement park and the addition of new amusement attractions.

Other proposals included efforts to attract a national golf tournament in the off-season, development of a coastal highway through Virginia Beach, efforts to get Camp Pendleton released from state ownership for commercial use, a small airport near the resort area, a new convention center, (now under study) and encouragement of convention business.

Hatchett said he thought it would be difficult to get Camp Pendleton released, particularly since the state had just given the city 300 acres for a municipal golf course.

Burlage said financing of most of the proposals could be accomplished by a bond issue which would return the investment over and over. He also suggested a department of tourism to be set up as part of the city government to coordinate the development and expansion of the tourist industry.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Laura Lambe, who now handles the city's advertising, said strong efforts are being made to promote the city during the coming fall season for hunting and fishing.

Dougherty stated that Davis has been hired to manage the Association's proposed new branch office.

Hail to the Chief

The choice of Police Capt. W.W. Davis to succeed retiring Chief Jim Ed Moore could not please us more. Bill Davis was one of those we met on the first day we arrived in Virginia Beach.

That was the beginning of not only a friendship but also a continually growing respect and admiration for him as a person and as a police officer.

Bill Davis is eminently qualified professionally for his new task. Not only has he risen through the ranks of police work and continued to attend every school possible for the furthering of his police knowledge, but he has also been an avid reader and has used all the available tools of his field to become a shrewd investigator and administrator.

We have found him to be an unbending, uncompromising policeman, but always ready with a quick remark that shows to advantage his sense of humor. On matters relating to the Press he has always been more than fair, but has never given us any break he would not give others at the same time.

Chief Jim Ed Moore has done a magnificent job with the police department, and under his leadership it has grown and become highly respected. His quiet efficiency will be missed, but the police department will continue to grow and continue to acquire laurels for itself in the capable hands of Bill Davis.

We also congratulate City Manager Roger Scott in his wisdom in this, the first major appointment of his administration.

The Surfing Plight

The time has definitely come for the surfing problem in Virginia Beach to be brought into the open and discussed coolly and intelligently.

Surfing is becoming a bigger sport each year here. More and more participants of all ages are getting involved. Land is becoming scarcer for surfing, and with new hotels and motels, is destined to become scarcer.

Surfers and bathers do not mix. A surfboard in the teeth is not pleasant for a bather. Homeowners don't want surfers in front of their homes. The military installations are not about to give one inch to the bather, the surfer or anybody else. No new space is available and the existing areas are crowded.

The new surfing area at Sandbridge was supposed to help, but

An impasse? Maybe.

We have no solution. But City Council cannot continue to ignore the surfer and his space plight. The resort business operators cannot be ignored either. Nor can the bathers, the fishermen, or anyone else. The surfers, by the same token, cannot continue to use their youth to demand from us old folks just because of their youth.

Instead of hoping it will go away, Council, the surfers, the Recreation Commission, the Innkeepers Association and all others interested should sit down at the private conference table and find some immediate and long-range fair and equitable answer, before the squabble becomes a war.

Resort of the Future

In the next decade the resort area of Virginia Beach will grow and prosper beyond belief despite what anyone does now. But the help of everyone, city-wide, in a planned approach to the future of the resort, would be not only desirable but also downright good common sense.

The resort industry can bring in more money to the economy than any other industry and help stabilize taxes. That has been proved elsewhere. But this takes the combined efforts of everyone with no one barring the doors of progress.

The first step is liquor by the drink. New motels, restaurants, hotels and night spots will follow and will probably push northward splitting the resort area into two parts.

This will also create new traffic and parking problems which are being partially studied now. The city needs its own parking lots and better control of resort traffic. We have no quarrel here. This is at least started.

Bickering among resort business operators must grind to a halt. They must pull together for their own future and take concrete steps on their own to regenerate business. Then and only then do they have a case in asking for municipal help. We agree that the city must take an interest and fight for such things as a new convention center and a racetrack, but the businessmen must exhibit initiative.

Virginia Beach can become the resort of the future. We urge everyone to take an interest and a part in that future...now, as only a few conscientious people have already done alone and collectively.

POLLY-ANNA

Law Enforcement

Editor, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN: There is an urgent need in our nation today to improve the attitude of some people toward our law enforcement men and women.

Many of our law abiding citizens have a deep respect for our city's police force, but do we well demonstrate our unwavering support?

No individual has ever grown on bitter criticism alone. But any normal person gets bigger and better on words and deeds loaded with commendation. Good police are like all other good people. Demonstrate your faith and trust in them and they won't let you down. Right now would be a good time for our local papers to stage a drive to raise a fund, so that we could present each of our police officers a Christmas gift. Let's start a much needed "Praise Campaign" for law and order. Ed Applegate

Common Sense--

Where Did it Go?

The following editorial is reprinted from the VIRGINIA ROAD BUILDER, official publication of the Virginia Road Builders Association, Richmond, Va. It was written by the Engineer-Director of the association, Frank A. Howard.

What, in Heaven's name, has happened to our common sense during the last few years? Have we taken leave of our senses entirely? We're pampering criminals and hampering police. We're spending billions to pay people not to work--when we can't find workers to fill the available jobs. We embrace abroad and renounce our friends. We permit teen-age children to take over our educational institutions. We permit laws to be determined by demonstrations and riots. Have we gone completely nuts?

We apologize for the shiftless and lazy and castigate the enterprising people who work for a living. We send out billions in foreign aid and permit nations who owe us billions to use our money to buy our critical food supply. We employ devoted military men to fight to keep our country safe and then completely ignore their military advice for purely political reasons. We're spending billions to get to the moon, for ridiculous "prestige," and going broke doing it. We allow our federal government to exercise power far beyond that authorized by our constitution, which destroys local governments--the backbone of our Republic--and freedom.

We're turning our backs on everything that made America great. Why?

Who was behind it all? Strangely enough he wasn't an American at all. He was a German and his name was Karl Marx. In 1840 he wrote the Communist Manifesto and spelled out in detail ten steps or methods necessary for the overthrow of republican forms of government. Four of these were: a graduated personal income tax; discrediting of law enforcement officers; civil disobedience; and a redistribution of wealth. We're following these four Marxist commandments to the letter!

Have we, like Rip Van Winkle, been asleep for forty years, to permit ourselves to be seduced into accepting the socialist principles that have robbed us of our common sense? For we should all know that the causes of violence lie in the philosophy of compulsion that all types of socialism are built upon. By supporting the welfare state society, into which we have been lured step by fatal step, we are unwittingly endorsing violence as a way of life.

By effective propaganda, the people involved in the violence in our cities today have been taught that they have a right to the fruits of the labor of others. Is it any wonder then that we have the violence, the plundering and the burning? There shouldn't be. There is only one means at man's disposal to redistribute the wealth and that means is compulsion, no matter how it's spelled. And compulsion requires force and force requires violence!

We make laws on social mores which are not in man's power to enforce. It's absurd that man should think that he can enjoy by law such things as prejudice, discrimination, charity and compassion. Yet for the last eight years we've had many men in this country working overtime passing just these kinds of laws, with our Supreme Court upholding them. There seems to be a complete disregard for the limitations of law.

Sense: we should have learned the futility and violence caused by this kind of law in our unhappy experience with another law concerning social mores--the Eighteenth Amendment--prohibition. The Constitution of the United States does not provide for and did not authorize the Federal Government to engage in social reconstruction.

Our troubles all stem from a very human trait--envy--and envy is nothing more than an avid desire to possess what belongs exclusively to others. Our government has no business passing laws to aid and abet covetousness--which is exactly what it's doing. Where did our common sense go?

We make it illegal for a farmer to grow grain on his own farm to feed his own chickens and subject the violator to more severe penalties than those now being applied to looters and arsonists.

The majority of people promoting the welfare state are not idealistic people who have any ideals concerning the poor and distressed. They are a desperate set of groups, each interested in enhancing its own material status at the expense of others.

The welfare state has produced a state of dependency which is being handed down within families from generation to generation. They have created the poor, since it pays to be poor.

The peril, make no mistake about it, threatens our way of life. It threatens our well being, it threatens our prosperity, it threatens our freedom--yours and mine.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"Would you mind telling me exactly why you are angry with me?" he begged.

"That's all right," she said, in her martyr voice. "I'm not angry." Then she gave a stifled sigh and went back in the house.

"OK," he yelled after her. "Come back out here in the garage and let's get this thing over with."

She came, and looked something like Joan of Arc about to be burned at the stake. "What do you want?" she asked in that same voice.

We Will Not Go

"It's really not important," she said, and started to go.

"Oh, yes it is," he said, stopping her. "I'm not going through the rest of this week and with your putting, especially when I'm not even sure what I've done wrong."

"You have been moping around here all day slamming things around, speaking to me in monosyllables only to answer direct questions," he explained. "Now what I want to know is what it is I have done this time?"

"It's not what you've done," she said, finally warming up to the subject. "It's what you haven't done."

"Fine. Now we're getting somewhere," he said triumphantly. "What haven't I done?"

"You haven't taken us on a picnic," she blurted out.

"No, I haven't," he said, measuring each word, since he wasn't quite sure what was coming. "Not since two weeks ago."

"You've spent this entire Saturday morning and afternoon working in this garage or in the yard, and it's such a beautiful day, we could have gone on a picnic. Told you so early this morning," she said.

"Of course you did," he said. "Then in the next breath you asked me when I was going to cut the grass, clean out the old refrigerator so we could sell it and clean the garage."

"Well, I didn't mean for you to do all those things immediately," she said. "I meant I wanted to go on a picnic. You could have done all that work any time," she said.

"Sure. Anytime this weekend, since weekends are the only time I have to work around the house, and if I hadn't gotten all those things done before I took on some recreational pleasure, you would have complained about that too," he argued.

"I would not," she said. "When did I remind you before about all the work you had to do around the house?"

"Last weekend when I went fishing," he said. "You pouted then too. So I thought I was right this weekend."

"But I didn't go fishing with you. I had to stay home and take care of the kids."

"That's another thing," he said. "I just can't quite see a six-week-old baby on a picnic. Pass the Plabum, please."

"Why not?" she asked. "I'd take care of him."

"Couldn't you do that just as well at home?" he asked.

"You just don't understand," she started to sniff. "I work my fingers to the bone day in and day out and you won't take us on a picnic. All you do is cut the grass and clean the refrigerator and the garage."

"I give up," he said. "Any other wife would be happy about that. But give me a half hour to shave and get dressed. You get the mess ready for a picnic."

"No," she said in that same martyred tone. "It's too late now. I'm out of the mood."

THE WOMEN

VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

Thursday, August 15, 1968

Mark Tarraill combines a Fisherman's knit sweater and a Tartan plaid kilt for the true mini look.

Mark chooses this grey tweed to show the street-length hem. Her clothes are from Alexander-Beegle.

Leslie Koett models another street-length dress of red, white and blue, a perfect election year dress.

What Is 'Proper and Appropriate'?

The fashion scene for fall-mini mod or maxi miss? Hem lengths this year are where you wear them, up, down or in the middle, whichever is best for your figure.

But for the school girl, fashion has reached a new high in Virginia Beach public schools. Skirts may be shorter and culottes, once a super "no, no" are now allowed.

What has Henrietta High School got to say about the Great Awakening?

"You better believe I'll wear my skirts shorter," says Debbie Huck, a rising senior at First Colonial High School. What about culottes? "Certainly, I sure will wear them." What does mother have to say about the shorter skirts? "It depends," says Debbie, "my skirts have to be a reasonable length, but she doesn't really censor them."

Mrs. John Custer censors daughter Martha Jean's "pretty much." But Martha Jean, a student at Princess Anne High School says, "yes, I'll wear them shorter. I'm going to wear culottes, too."

"Yes, I'm going to wear my skirts shorter, you buy them short, what's the use of letting a hem out?" said Anne Dowling, a rising sophomore at First Colonial. Her mother, Mrs. William Dowling said that she "has censored hems in the past, but styles come and go." Anne will wear culottes in the fall.

Mrs. Angie Alexander is "a great believer in short dresses, particularly for the young. Maybe I'm more concerned with fashion than a lot of people." Her daughter, Julie is a student at Virginia Beach Junior High School. Will she let Julie wear culottes? "Of course I will, I thing they afford more privacy than a skirt."

The School Board has become aware of the times, skirts are going up, and culottes are peeking out from behind closed doors. With the trend switching rapidly from skirts to pants, could the City be in for more than they bargained?

The official directive from School Supt. E. E. Brickell states that: "All students and faculty members are expected to wear dress appropriate to the occasion; extreme or ostentatious apparel or appearance is to be avoided."

"This modification will have the effect of permitting girls (and faculty women) to wear the culotte-type skirt and certain other now accepted styles of clothing. Principals are expected to establish and maintain good order in their schools, and the modification of the 'dress code' is in no way to be construed as a relaxation of the high standard of personal conduct and appearance traditionally expected in Virginia Beach Schools."

The directive is a definite change from last year. The old "code" read: "Appropriate

One Plus One Is, Ah...

(Editor's note: Susan Axelrod offered another contribution to the column this week.)

Kid--Just as long as you keep more money in my checking account than I spend, I'm alright, Okay, Daddy?

Daddy--No! You're going to learn how to balance this book if it kills me.

Mother--It might, Susan, what are you going to do when you get married?

Kid--Blite your tongue, I'll just let my husband-the-math-major do it. Now...you add the bottom two figures together to get the top part, and that's how you check it, right?

Parents--Right.

Kid--Let's see...eight and four is (all fingers working).

Parents--Why don't you take off your shoes, too? Or don't your toes work slow enough?

Kid--Funny...like I was saying...eight and four is...uh, eight, nine, ten, eleven-ah, yes, eleven.

Mother--And you're a high school graduate?

Kid--Well, I didn't major in math, you know.....

Daddy--Yeah, and you didn't minor in it, either.

Kid--Thanks, I really know where I'm wanted...Okay, so if you carry the one and add it to the six, that makes seven. And seven and eight are, ugh, um...seven and seven are fourteen and one makes fifteen...oh, then you carry another one and then add it to the zero. Umm...one and nothing is something, or is it nothing? No, that's in subtraction--or is that division? I never was very good in math, yea see...Well, Daddy, does $7478, sound reasonable?

Daddy--Seven THOUSAND four HUNDRED and seventy-eight DOLLARS? You should BE so lucky...I should be so lucky... Remember the little rule you learned in third grade about decimals?

Kid--Oh, yeah, so it's only $74.78. Gosh, I'm poor. Maybe I should recheck it... eight and four is, hey I've got a hangnail on my right ring finger....

Parents--Our daughter the graduate!

Expert Emphasizes Fashion Accessories

Miss Stevens

A New Yorker who was born in Brooklyn, reared in Queens and now lives in Manhattan spoke with the voice of ultimate fashion recently while she was in the Resort City working with a local department store.

Miss Mary Stevens is the Southern Fashion Coordinator for "Glamour" magazine. Her job is to promote fashion shows for stores from the District of Columbia down-to-but-not-including Texas. "I think that's about 14 states, but every time I count, I get scared," she said with no detectable accent. Why? "I hate New York accents!" She was in Virginia Beach for four days last week to help Miller & Rhodes promote their fall and winter line of clothes and accessories.

A firm believer in "doing one's own thing" as far as fashion goes, Miss Stevens thinks that women "have to adapt styles to themselves. They have to find their own look and stay there. Most of all they have to be honest with themselves. No woman should say to herself 'the fashionable length for skirts is three inches above the knee so that's where I'll wear mine.' Skirt lengths are so varied this year, that everyone can create their own look in good taste."

Fashion has changed immensely in recent years. Where once, all one needed was the basic black or brown shoes and handbags, and a pair of white gloves and pearls for accessories, scarves, rope necklaces and an abundance of rings are now "in" for the fashion scene. "You really have to plan your wardrobe now," she said sitting perfectly lady-like in an eight inch above the knee mini. "Buying on impulses is fun, but it is a bad thing to get stuck with something that you can only wear by itself. You should always think before you buy. Even if I'm just buying a scarf, and I've got tons of them, I think to myself, 'now what do you have that will go with it?'"

Accessories are bigger than ever for fall and winter. Rings on every finger, long necklaces or beads and matching hose are a must for the well-dressed swinger, not to even mention shoes and handbags. "This is the season of the total look. Hair, make-up, jewelry" and stockings are just as important as the clothes you wear," Miss Stevens is a believer in the look of a dress and not the price tag. "The most important thing is to look neat, clean and well-groomed. The best thing is how a dress looks on you, and the way it is accessorized. A dress that costs $20 can look as good as a dress that costs $220 if it fits well and the right things are worn with it."

Make-up should also be suited to the individual. "The additional things to see are girls who have seen models made up in fashion magazines and they try to copy that look. It might be right for the model, but make-up is a very personal, individual thing. You should find the right look for you. The best make up job is the one you can't see." The application of make-up is an art in itself. "You just have to practice until you find that look. Make-up that looks so simple is the kind that takes the longest to apply." Long time or short time, once that special curled eyelash or fake beauty mark falls into place, femininity is turned on full blast.

Hair is almost as changeable as skirt lengths this fall. "You almost have to change your hair-do for every outfit you wear. Curls are great for being really feminine. They look marvelous with velvets and satins with ruffles for evening wear." Hair as well as the rest of the "total look" depends a lot on the wearer and her own thing. "I have a fall that I wear with all kinds of clothes, it's great because it is so versatile." Miss Stevens' own hair is cropped extremely close to her head, and it's natural waves frame her classic face.

C. of C. Sets Canada Trip

Virginia Beach will be represented by members of the Chamber of Commerce at the 90th Annual Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto from Aug. 15 to Sept. 2.

Virginia Beach will share a booth with Norfolk again this year. These two cities are the only ones in Virginia represented on an individual basis. The other cities are represented by the Virginia Travel Council.

The Exhibition is the oldest and largest event of its kind on the American continent. For the first time, this year the Exhibition will be open on Sundays, which should attract more spectators than in previous years, by several thousands.

Representation at the CNE is a major project of the Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber's committee is headed by Mrs. George Leary.

Veterans 65 years of age or older number two million and make up eight per cent of all veterans. By 1985 this group will total five million and form 19 per cent.

Boat Ramp Scheduled

The Department of the Army has received an application from the City of Virginia Beach to dredge a canal and construct boat-launching facilities in Owl Creek and on property acquired from the Commonwealth of Virginia. The land is located on the west side of General Booth Blvd., and south of Harbor Point.

Any objections to the proposed work should be clearly stated in writing to the District Engineer, and should reach his office on 803 Front St., Norfolk, Va. no later than Sept. 9.

Drug Analysis Poses Problems

The announcement from Virginia Medical Examiner Geoffrey T. Mann that the state medical examiner's office in Norfolk will no longer offer drug analysis services to Tidewater police agencies is having little effect on the Virginia Beach police department.

Officials of the department indicated such analysis will likely be made by the state medical examiner's office in Richmond. Everyone connected with investigation of illegal drug trafficking, sale and/or use of narcotics drugs in Virginia Beach indicated the move will, however, result in a delay in court proceedings against persons suspected of violating laws concerning illegal drugs or narcotics.

Joseph Lyle, assistant Virginia Beach Commonwealth's Attorney, told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, he feels the time involved in waiting for reports from the Richmond office would "be valid grounds in obtaining a continuance from the courts in trial of such cases". In discussing the recent not pressing of a narcotics charge in Portsmouth Municipal Court because of the lack of a report on analysis of material thought to contain drugs and a similar event happening in Virginia Beach, Lyle replied "It's absurd to suppose all drug cases will be not pressed because of this".

Members of the police department told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the ruling is not going to have any effect on their investigation of violations of drug and narcotics laws. Capt. W.W. Davis, director of the detective bureau, said any suspicious material obtained by men of his office will "be packaged by registered mail to the examiners office in Richmond for analysis, and when required this report will be used in court proceedings."

Lt. Henry Capps, youth bureau director, echoed the words of Capt. Davis that police investigators are going to continue searching out illegal sale and/or use of drugs. Lt. Capps added, "I'm going to go ahead with charges of law violations and leave it up to the Commonwealth's Attorney." Capps, however, did point out that "if we can't get proper analysis on drugs, there is the possibility of a case being dismissed."

Sgt. Carl Weast, a member of the police department's vice squad, was also questioned on how the ruling might affect drug investigations. Weast pointed out that several of his fellow investigators have been trained to the point that they can recognize marijuana in the field, but that the ruling would deny him "the privilege of quick analysis of other drugs when required". Weast said "If I could take questionable items to the Norfolk lab, I could have the results in the same day and determine if a suspect should be charged. However the four or five days required in obtaining an analysis and report from the Richmond lab could possibly allow a suspect to continue pushing drugs, and even leave town before receipt of an analysis report and thus escape arrest."

Drake Is P.A. Asst.

Richard G. Drake, who has served as principal of Blair Junior High School in Norfolk for two years, will become assistant principal in charge of instruction for Princess Anne High School. The appointment is subject to his release from his Norfolk contract and final approval by the Virginia Beach School Board.

Drake's release will be recommended at the School Board meeting today, said one school official in Norfolk. He continued to say, "we don't want to keep anyone against their will."

Drake will assume the position vacated by Francis J. Patrick Riley of Newport News who was killed in an automobile accident.

E. E. Brickell, Virginia Beach's superintendent of schools said, "we are very pleased. He's a topflight educator."

Drake is a resident of Thorougheed. His wife will continue to teach at Maury High School. He is a native of Portsmouth and a graduate of Woodrow Wilson High School. Drake was assistant principal at Granby and Maury High Schools between the years 1960-66.

4-H Leaders To Learn Sewing

Women who know something about home sewing and would like to volunteer as a 4-H Club leader can add to their skills through a program designed especially for 4-H clothing and home improvement leaders.

The announcement comes from the National 4-H Service Committee, which in cooperation with the Extension Service and The Singer Company has arranged a course called "Your Sewing Machine."

The course is set up by the Extension Service and usually runs for two days. Three teaching manuals are used: (1) Know Your Sewing Machine (2) Regulation and Care for Your Sewing Machine (3) Make the Most of Your Sewing Machine. Singer provides the manuals.

The training sessions feature latest methods of teaching young people of different ages and abilities, and include actual work with the sewing machine.

Upon returning home, the project leaders show their 4-H girls what they learned, and how to make sewing a joy instead of a chore.

A certificate of merit is presented each woman completing the course. More information can be obtained from the VPI Extension office at Princess Anne Courthouse.

Many times, green thumbs will get the urge to fertilize their shrubs and trees good in the fall, hoping that this will make the shrub or tree better able to withstand the winter.

This is not true, however. When fertilized in the fall, new growth will be promoted, as it always is. The difference this time, however, is that the new growth will not have time to "harden off" before cold weather sets in.

Damage will many times only be the new growth frozen back. This gives the shrub or tree a plant a bad appearance. At the worst, it will result in a tremendous splitting of the bark on the south and southwest side, quite often resulting in death of the plant. This is especially true of trees.

As a general rule of thumb for this area of the state, do not apply fertilizers to shrubs or trees between Aug. 1 and Oct. 1. Fertilizers can be applied after this, since tree and shrub roots will continue to absorb nutrients in the autumn long after the leaves have been shed. Nutrients are most readily taken up, however, during the period of early spring growth.

Summer Is Critical in Lawn Care

Summer is the critical time in the care of your lawn. In most parts of the country it's during July, August and early September when weeds seemingly run out of control, lack of rain combined with hot weather causes grass to wither or go dormant and insects and disease cause extensive damage.

Fortunately, however, with modern fertilizers, chemicals and lawn care equipment, these problems can be easily avoided and a strong, healthy, good-looking lawn maintained with the expenditure of just a few minutes effort each week.

Lawn care experts at Melnor's, one of the world's leading manufacturers of sprayers and garden care aids, point out that frequent mowings—leaving short clippings—are preferable during the summer.

Mowing infrequently and taking too much of the grass blades off at one time is a shock to grass and invites lawn diseases. Also, mowing so clippings are short usually eliminates the need for sweeping or picking green.

Proper watering is very important in the summer, the Melnor experts explain, for it takes a relatively short period of hot, dry weather to take its toll of improperly watered grasses. Some grasses go dormant in summer and require additional watering to remain green.

A light feeding of a balanced fertilizer early in the season is desirable to help the lawn withstand the strains of summer sun and drought.

If you failed to take preventive measures against weeds—and crabgrass—in the spring, you may find them growing vigorously and sprouting all over the lawn, especially in late summer. However, they are fairly easy to kill with selective chemicals. It is important to dispose of them before they go to seed and develop into even more difficult and widespread problems the following year.

The objective of watering is to soak the soil down to the root zone—at least six inches—but only as frequently as necessary. Many light sprinklings encourage weeds and shallow root growth.

Your soil type determines how much water should be applied. Sandy soils absorb water more quickly and retain less than do clay or loamy soils. A rule of thumb is to apply 1/2 inch of water on sandy soils and from 1 to 1 1/2 inches on clay or loamy soils.

The condition of your grass will tell you when to water. If it has a bluish haze, shows footprints and doesn't spring back when you walk on it, get out your Melnor sprinkler. If possible, apply water early in the day. Grass that stays wet through the night is more susceptible to disease.

A dry, brown lawn isn't necessarily a dead lawn. Well fertilized, permanent grass will recover when watered sufficiently. Use a good, properly operating lawn sprinkler. It not only will do the job better, but makes it easier and uses water more economically.

For insect control, there are almost as many types of chemical products as there are bugs. Many, however, give effective, general purpose control, depending on concentration of insecticide, efficiency of use, and frequency of application. All insecticides currently sold are poisonous to varying degrees, so instructions for handling and use should be followed carefully.

If you have followed good lawn maintenance procedures, you should have little trouble with lawn diseases. However, if parts of the lawn discolor or fade out, a fungus disease most likely is the cause. There are several broad range fungicides on the market that control a variety of these diseases. Early diagnosis and treatment is most important.

Poison Ivy is one of the most common of the pest plants in this area.

Many individuals are quite allergic to the plant as it causes severe irritation, a very uncomfortable rash which can lead to a breakout of small blisters or sores. A hot shower with one of the stronger soaps as soon as possible can be helpful whenever one has come in contact with it. Poison Ivy is a small three leaf green plant which grows and runs on the ground as well as running up from the base of trees.

Consult a physician for the relief of severe cases of Poison Ivy.

Plants Are Dangerous

The summertime beauty of Virginia's lush vegetation in fields and woodlands also holds danger the public should heed. A statement issued this week by the USDA Soil Conservation Service warned that throughout the U. S. A. and Canada more than 700 species of plants are known to cause death, illness or extreme discomfort to people.

SCS State Conservationist, Tom F. McGourin, headquartered at Richmond said "Chewing, swallowing or otherwise contacting the toxic parts of certain plants, trees and shrubs takes a heavy toll. Each year health services report that about 12,000 children are poisoned by these sources.

Parents should be concerned, the SCS official stated, because many of the plants are quite common in flower and vegetable gardens, and in ornamental landscaping, as well as in

Then you know it's Quality Checkd!

Old-fashioned clove tomato jam is seldom sold commercially. It has to be made at home with loving hands and a bit of clove.

Pick Cloves for Pickling

Now, in late summer, it's clove-picking time in the fragrant forests of Zanzibar, Pemba and Madagascar, spice islands off the east coast of Africa. This is very much a family affair with mother and the girls stripping the clove buds off the lower limbs, while father and the boys scramble up the trunk and make their way to the clove clusters high up on the tree.

There's no goofing off either, because it takes four to seven thousand clove buds to make a pound of dried cloves. Each tree may yield from seven to 40 pounds of buds and there are well over four million trees in these perfumed tropical forests.

The buds which become cloves on our spice shelves must be picked before blooming. Once in blossom, they are known as "mother cloves," potential parents of the next generation of clove trees, but no longer giving off the tantalizing aroma we love in so many of our best dishes.

While they're picking cloves on tropical islands, many American mothers are busy making clove-spiced jams, jellies and sweet-pickled delicacies for the coming winter months. Cloves add teasing aroma to fruits and sweet-sour types of food, also to sweet vegetables, meat stews, piquant sauces, fruit pies and a long list of hot or cold beverages.

Cloves have extraordinary flavoring power, so they should be used often, but delicately. Use 6 or 8 whole cloves in a stew or sauce or in the sweet-sour liquid for pickled beets. Use 1/8 or 1/4 teaspoon of ground cloves with other sweet spices in a cake or pie.

Just in time for preserving and pickling come these clove-spiced recipes from the American Spice Trade Association.

1 1/4 tsp. whole cloves
1 1/4 tsp. whole allspice
4 c. sugar

Drop tomatoes into boiling water for 2 minutes or until skins can be easily peeled. Remove stems and skins with the tip of a sharp knife. Dice tomatoes and place in a large saucepan. Tie cloves and allspice into a cheesecloth bag. Add along with remaining ingredients. Bring to boiling point; reduce heat and simmer 1 1/2 to 2 hours or until thick, stirring occasionally. Remove cheesecloth bag. Ladle immediately into hot sterilized jars filling to within 1/2-inch of top. Seal immediately. Yield: 6 half-pint jars.

Why not make this peach butter when other kitchen chores keep you home near the range? This butter smells better and better as the clove flavor is released.

PEACH BUTTER

4 lbs. fresh peaches
1/4 tsp. whole cloves
2 c. sugar
2 tbs. lemon juice

Drop peaches into boiling water for 2 minutes or until skins can be easily peeled. Remove skins with the tip of a sharp knife. Dice peaches, removing pits. Place peaches in a large saucepan. Serve spread on hot toast, buns or muffins. Yield: 3 half-pint jars.

This delectable meat accompaniment couldn't be easier. Cloves always go beautifully with grapes.

1/4 c. water
2 tbs. white vinegar
1/4 tsp. whole cloves

An outdoor living area can be built right in the front yard by enclosing space with a tall privacy screen of cedar boards or slats or one patterned to match the house siding. Finish the screen to blend with house, include a planting bed on the screen's outside and passers-by won't even know it's there.

Don't Blow Your Cool

Are you suffering from hyperhidrosis?

If you are, don't worry--excessive sweating is annoying but not harmful. That's the reassuring word from the American Medical Association's magazine "Today's Health," which notes that some parts of the body, the palms as well as the soles and forehead have greater concentrations of sweat glands than other parts, and are common sites for localized excessive sweating.

If the problem is severe--take it to your doctor who may prescribe sedatives or tranquilizers.

Grocery Shopping Is a Bargain

If someone told you about a marvelous sale where there were more than 8,000 items to choose from, where the merchandise was guaranteed to be perfect, where it was attractively and conveniently packaged and where the store's margin of profit was just over 1 per cent--wouldn't you be tempted to buy some?

You should--for this fabulous sale is going on at your local supermarkets--where food is still the best bargain for your money. Actually, the average American now spends less of his total income on food than ever before. In the 1870's, food took a whopping 58 per cent of all you earned! Just 17 years ago, the figure was 33 per cent. Today, food takes less than 18 per cent of your after-tax income.

When you read that the Consumer Price Index, including food prices, is higher than ever, keep in mind the basic cause--general inflation, rising costs of doing business, higher wage rates, and increased government spending. And remember, too, that although you pay for nearly all your food in a supermarket, the retailer himself keeps very little of your money.

The largest percentage of your food dollar goes to the farmer, who breaks the soil, plants the seeds, buys equipment and housing, develops skills, works in the fields--and worries--about the weather, the season, pests and taxes. Five years ago, the average farmer was only able to feed about 25 people from his efforts; today, he supplies 33 people with food. For his improved skills, increased output, and greatly expanded productivity--he gets 33.8¢ of your dollar.

Once the food is grown it must be shipped. Shipping on our vast transportation system--a quarter of a million miles of railroad tracks, over 1 1/2 million freight cars, and 12 million trucks, trailers, and air cargo fleets--costs you about a nickel.

Next, the food is refined and converted--grains into bread and cereals, fowl into frozen dinners, beans into coffee and chocolate, milk into ice cream and cake--tested for quality and freshness, and placed into specially designed containers. All this effort, plus new research, has a price of 25.7¢.

And finally, for a combined total of 31.7¢ the wholesaler and your retailer stock the food, keep it fresh and add new items to their selection as well as reorder your favorites.

Certainly, the money you pay is a small amount for so much convenience. For included in every product you buy in the supermarket are all time-saving, labor-lightening, nutritionally-improved, medically safe, scientifically-inspected and taste-tantalizing features you could possibly want.

Today, the larger supermarkets stock as many as 4,000 items--a giant step from the old 1955 average of 4,723--and as new items are developed the number increases every year. Our supermarkets, now, have everything going for the consumer--with exotic food from avocados to frozen ziti with sauce, old favorites from canned asparagus to zwieback and new lines of non-food products like toothpaste, pens, magazines and shampoo--extra bonuses for the busy shopper.

The development of new items for sale in the supermarkets reflects our changing patterns of spending and way of life. For instance, a great deal more is spent on diet items today, not because they are more expensive but because Americans are becoming increasingly figure conscious. On the other hand, your shopping cart is probably also piled high with potato chips, pretzels, cookies and a brand-new cracker for

HERE COMES OLGA!

"All aboard," was the call Saturday night about 7 p.m. by the driver of the Greyhound chartered bus.

The employees and all affiliated with Rose Hall decided on a different kind of party. Although it was aboard a bus instead of a home or a club, the fun, fried chicken and other ingredients were just as much a part of this party as any other. They added just a little more entertainment by including the play "Common Glory".

The trip on the bus was delightful because everyone participated fully in the fun and relaxation from work plus the fact no one had to worry about the driving. The best part of it was no cleaning up after this party--dishes and etc. This is for me, I love parties but o'boy, the mess afterwards.

Of course with the rain Saturday night the play was an indoor performance but this did not make the performance any less enjoyable or did it dampen the spirits of the crowd.

Those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Raymond W. Speight, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Newman, Mrs. Ronald G. Komosowski, Mrs. Jennie G. Weber, Mrs. Elizabeth B. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Larrabee, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Vance, Miss Helena Bouca, Mrs. Maria Bess, Mr. and Mrs. William Swindell, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Fischl, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Newman.

Also attending were Mr. and Mrs. C. Allen Long, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Howard, Mr. and Mrs. William Speight, Mrs. Richard Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Raleigh, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Coltrane, Mrs. S. T. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Woolston Jr., Mrs. J. C. Cando, Mr. and Mrs. Ed White and Mr. and Mrs. David Coffee.

All arrived safe and sound by home about 12:30 p.m. a little tired but then everyone knew they could sleep in Sunday morning.

"I think parties of this kind are always enjoyable plus the fact you know the ones you work with also on a social level. See you next week, I wonder where "Olga" will go this weekend. Look for me, I might be where you are, who knows?"

Beetle Goes to School

Virginia Beach's authorized Volkswagen dealer is sending a VW sedan to school this year. The Delta Green colored 1968 model VW-will not, of course, be enrolled as part of the student body in the Virginia Beach School System. Instead, it will be attached to the instructional staff, assisting driver education instructors in teaching students the fundamentals of operating a small car.

Harold Heischberger, president of Hilltop Volkswagen, Inc., represented the VW dealership in presenting the new sedan to high school officials recently. W. Elmer Barbour, director of driver education in the high school system, accepted the vehicle.

Heischberger said the driver training vehicle was being made available as part of Volkswagen's nationwide High School Driver Education Assistance Program. "The automotive industry has a civic obligation to assist young people with every opportunity to learn the proper operation of an automobile,"

The VW will enable Virginia Beach students to be trained for the first time in the operation of a small car with standard shift. This additional training will provide the student drivers with greater flexibility in their driving skills.

Servicemen Make Use Of 'House'

Queen Says Beach Is Tops

Representatives of the Virginia Beach city government, police department, and shore patrol detachment met last Monday night for what appears to be the most publicized, yet best kept, secret in the area for some time.

The occasion was a dinner in honor of Senior CPO George C. Queen who is retiring Sept. 6 after 20 years of service with the U. S. Navy.

Those who attended the dinner to pay tribute to Chief Queen included Mayor Frank A. Dusch, Municipal Court Judge Mary R. Speight, LCDR B. T. Morrison, Commanding Officer of the Tidewater Area Shore Patrol, Capt. Richard C. Davis, 2nd Police Precinct C.O., along with officers and men of the Precinct and shore patrol detachment, who were accompanied by their wives.

Chief Queen was presented a fishing rod and reel and a tackle box with lures by Capt. Davis as a gift from men of the Precinct and Shore Patrol Detachment. LCDR Morrison presented Chief Queen with a desk pen and pencil set as a memento of the occasion.

Chief Queen has served as commanding officer of the Virginia Beach Shore Patrol Detachment, which has a normal complement of 43 men, since December of 1966. While the Detachment is headquartered Patrol relationship with the city "could not be beat. Working so close with city police, court judges, and justices of the peace makes the job easier than in other areas. You couldn't ask for a better bunch of people to work with."

Chief Queen

Perhaps his feelings about his past experience in the city was the deciding factor in his future plans. Queen told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN that since he has been here "the growth I have seen is fantastic. I've never seen a city grow like this one has, and it's going to keep on growing. A man can't go wrong by settling in this region."

Ft. Story Reactivates

Ordnance Disposal Unit

A World War II Navy installation located in a remote section of the Army Post at Fort Story, is being renovated to accommodate one of the most unusual commands in the Navy's Atlantic Fleet.

Explosive Ordnance Disposal Group Atlantic was established recently at the Atlantic Fleet Service Force Headquarters in Norfolk. The 200-man command and is under the operational control of the Atlantic Fleet Service Force Commander, Rear Adm. Ben W. Sarver. The new command combines all Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) functions in the Atlantic Fleet into one organization.

Until the consolidation, there were many small EOD teams, consisting of one officer and two enlisted men, assigned to all major combat ships, ammunition depots and ordnance development stations.

Enrollment Grows at Wesleyan

4-H's Attend Summer Camp

About 125 freshmen are expected at Virginia Wesleyan College here on Sept. 15 as this new coeducational, private college begins its third year of operation.

Virginia Wesleyan will be adding junior level courses for the first time and will have about 125 sophomores and juniors returning for a total, full-time enrollment of approximately 250. There were 155 full-time students at Wesleyan last year. Wesleyan received accreditation from the Virginia State Board of Education in April.

A new $1,700,000 library is now under construction at Wesleyan and is scheduled to be completed in September 1969. The library, which has won a national award of merit for design, will be capable of housing 210,000 volumes.

The college has just received authorization for a $441,000 loan and a $306,000 grant from the U.S. Office of Education for a science center. Present plans call for the beginning of construction on this $1,000,000 facility in 1968. Virginia Wesleyan's physical facilities now consist of one eight-unit academic village, the first of four such villages to be built on this 300 acre campus astride the Norfolk-Virginia Beach line.

4-H's Attend Summer Camp

Over 180 4-H's and leaders from across Virginia assembled at 4-H Camp Farrar for the 1968 State 4-H Conservation Camp.

Among these 4-H's were two from Virginia Beach, Michael Ives, president of the Junior Block and Bridge Club, and Chris Holcomb, vice-president of the Thalia Community 4-H Club. Mary Bungard from the Virginia Beach Extension Office was also in attendance.

These 4-H's learned the basic principles of the conservation of wildlife, forests, entomology, and soil and water. These courses were taught by Dr. J.O. Rowell, W.A. McElfresh, Glenn Dudderar, and E. W. Mundie, V.P.I. Extension Specialists in entomology, forestry, wildlife, and soil and water, respectively. These courses provided a valuable insight into the need for and the proper use of conservation in Virginia.

By treating an estimated 787,000 patients during 1968, Veterans Administration cared for 179,000 more than was cared for with the same number of beds in 1958.

British Are More Liberal Says Visitor

The Red-Coats are coming. No? How about, "She loves you, yeah, yeah, yeah? Wrong, again? Would you believe Virginia Beach has been invaded by ONE "liney"? You might? His name is Barrie Wilson, and his home is in London. Well, one of them is, anyhow. The other is in Stanmore, Middlesex, a suburb of London. Barrie is in the Resort City visiting his roommate from Alington College in Chesham-Villars, Switzerland, Louis Snyder.

Barrie says, "Their skirts aren't short enough!"

public schools in London are about the same as they are in the U.S., Barrie speaks, in a fine dialect of Americanized Queen's English, "and that's a real drag. The classrooms are very overcrowded, and as a result of this, the teachers cannot devote enough time to the individual student."

The higher levels of education in Great Britain are something else, again. "The universities in England are very good," he says, "they are a year shorter than the ones here. Four years' work is crammed into three years over there. The only problem is that to get into a university, one has to get very high G.C.E. (General Certificate of Education) results." These tests, given any time the student feels he is qualified to take them, are divided into two levels, O-level for ordinary and A-level for advanced. The exams are on any subjects that one has taken in school.

Barrie does not plan to attend college unless just for a business course. His father designs, manufactures and sells women's apparel, and he plans to go into that business.

"There is no draft to worry about in Great Britain, so I can go into the business and stay there," he said. "There are enough people over there that don't have any particular business to go into, so they are the ones who join the armed forces."

How does the floundering British economy affect the younger generation? "It's very good for the young people, they get higher pay than their parents in most jobs. But," he adds, "you've got to remember that people 18 through 21 who are considered young are already out doing their life's work and trying to earn a living. The only really bad thing is the way we aren't allowed to take but 150 out of the country in traveler's checks a year. (Prime Minister Wilson, no relation) just wants to keep as much money in Great Britain as possible."

Why, with so many places left to go in Europe, did Barrie decide to come to the United States? "I just wanted to see what the other half looked like, this is the first time I've ever been out of Europe, although I've been to many places there." Places, that is like France, Italy, Germany and, of course Switzerland. That's a lot of traveling for a 17-year-old young man. "Switzerland is my favorite country," he said, "I really don't know what it's about the place that I like so much, but it's just so beautiful."

What does he think of American, or more precisely, Virginia Beach girls? "They don't wear their skirts short enough, that's my first reaction, in London, as well as the rest of Europe, skirts are no shorter than six inches above the knee. Even the women wear their dresses a few inches above the knee. "And," he continued, the older women wear all these really old-fashioned dark prints. They're awful."

Men's fashions also, are fairly radical. "The pants mostly have bell-bottoms, and they are pretty tight through the legs so that the bottoms really flare out. The new thing in jackets is the four-button look, and small, very pointed lapels."

Barrie recognizes no existing civil rights problems in England. "The government has cut down on immigration, though," he said. He thinks that the violence is "disgusting. People in this day and age shouldn't fight like animals. There is always another way around it."

Barrie has almost entirely American friends, in London as well as in school in Switzerland. "They are the ones mostly responsible for the change in my accent. I used to speak in a very broad Cockney, but since I've been around Americans for so long, I've lost most of it," he said. "My friends are mostly American because they are more carefree people. They don't trouble you all the time. They are so much gayer and full of spirit."

"What I really can't understand is why Americans can send their kids out to be killed in Vietnam and not serve them liquor until they are 21. European parents are so much freer with their kids. There is no sneaking around and no lying. I see that most American kids have no freedom of speech with their parents. They are so inhibited, whereas in Europe, you can say most anything to your parents and they understand."

Barrie is the oldest of three boys, Robert, 15, "is brilliant." He attends a public school in London, but, "it's a good public school." Steven, 12, attends Alington, also.

While in Virginia Beach, Barrie is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Snyder and their son Louis.

Nutro Moves Office to Ohio

Pres. J.J. Pointer of the Smith-Douglas division of Borden Inc. has announced that the company is moving the headquarters of its Nutro Turf and Garden Products division to Columbus, Ohio.

A majority of Nutro products have been made at Columbus in recent years. Because of its central location, the headquarters staff is being relocated.

J.R. Stiffler, manager of Nutro Turf & Garden Products, will move immediately and assume additional responsibility for managing the company's Columbus plant. He will be joined by Thurman W. Worthington, advertising and merchandising manager. Additional members of the staff will move during the remainder of 1968, so that by the end of the year, all Nutro Turf & Garden personnel will be headquartered in Columbus.

An area sales office will remain in Norfolk at Smith-Douglas divisional headquarters, where J.R. McClell, of Virginia Beach, area manager of the North Atlantic States, will be located.

Tebault Heads SSC

Earl M. Tebault was elected to the Southern States Chesapeake Board of Directors at the 45th Anniversary Annual Membership meeting held recently in Indian River High School. Over 250 stockholders and their families attended the session.

Ralph L. Frost was named President of the Board of Directors. Mrs. Roy D. Flannagan was elected to the local Southern States Farm Home Advisory Committee.

Frost was also chosen as a delegate to represent the local membership at the Southern States Cooperative's 45th Anniversary Annual Stockholders Meeting in Richmond on November 14 and 15, Vernon C. Unser was named alternate.

Bulletin Describes Hereditary Disease

Cystic fibrosis, a hereditary disease for which no cure presently is known, is the subject of the current issue of the Virginia Health Bulletin.

The disease, its characteristics and its medical management are described in the State Department of Health publication, which states that "an explosion of research" has occurred in the past decade as investigators have sought to define the basic metabolic error that leads to cystic fibrosis.

A victim is born with the disease, the Bulletin reports, even though it may not become apparent until later in life. Cystic fibrosis cannot be "outgrown," but the harmful effects can be mitigated and life expectancy can be increased.

A generalized dysfunction of the excretory glands is a characteristic of the disease, which was recognized as a distinct disease only 30 years ago. Only 15 years ago was involvement of the sweat glands understood to be an almost invariable clue to diagnosis.

Along with the sweat glands, the respiratory and digestive systems are primarily involved. About 85 per cent of children with cystic fibrosis show digestive dysfunction, and symptoms of respiratory tract involvement occur in "virtually all cases," the Bulletin article says.

Respiratory tract symptoms sometimes are mistaken for allergic disorder, bronchitis or asthma; swelling of the salivary glands may suggest mumps. Management of the respiratory tract symptoms constitutes the most extensive form of care given patients, the Bulletin states, and "pulmonary lesions account for most morbidity and mortality suffered." The advent of antibiotic therapy was an important advance in treatment of the respiratory system.

Physical therapy to improve breathing has become a major part of respiratory tract management. Most cystic fibrosis centers recommend starting such therapy as soon as the diagnosis of cystic fibrosis is established.

Control of the digestive symptoms usually isn't too difficult, the article says, but there should be no delay in adjusting a patient's nutritional program. Vitamin supplements are advised for most cystic fibrosis sufferers.

Songs Express Their Feelings

Something new had exploded in America. From coast to coast, to the hills of Tennessee, from the rugged western country of New Mexico, Idaho and Wyoming, the generation of the 1960's has begun to talk back.

For too long the headline-makers in the hot city streets and on the sprawling campuses have spoken for America. Their voice is as old as man's story, a voice of violence, cynicism and unbelief. Now, all over America, there is rising up a generation that does believe in all of the future.

They are fired up to face the adventures and challenges of their 20th century. They believe in work and sacrifice. The "summer soldier" or "armchair patriot" is not for them. They dare to run, to move fast, live straight, to speak out and, at the drop of a hat, to SING OUT for their love of liberty.

Finally, they believe in Faith. They believe it is America's best way of modernizing man, the rocket route to a new age. And thus was born the hottest thing to come down the American entertainment highway in years. "Up With People" is alive with color, bursting with tunes, dazzling in its speed. It takes your breath away from the first drum roll and lifts you out of your chair. It is more than a show. It is a new expression from the heart of young America.

It is a way to speak out and be heard until America and the world are the richer. A new generation has risen up to shoulder the task of world rebuilding. It is not a fresh innovation of the tousele-topped groaners, not a new wiggle or twist, not a rainbow world of LSD or a form of escape. It is a reversal of a trend, a dramatic turn across the traffic patterns of an age. Thus, while thousands are crying "Down with war! Down with patriotism!", a new voice of a generation is heard crying "Up with people!" This is their story.

There are 310 regional "Sing Outs" in the U.S., involving over 60,000 youths. There are "Sing Outs" in about 20 other countries singing in their own language the same songs and involving thousands of youths in Africa, Ethiopia, Denmark, Italy, South America and many, many other countries.

"Sing Out Virginia Beach" was formed two years ago and was one of the first to organize in Virginia. It has given over 150 performances at schools, colleges, churches of all faiths, Kiwanis, Rotary, Ruritan, Lions Clubs and others. They sang for the men aboard the Forrestal before it left for Vietnam, for the wounded back from Vietnam in the Portsmouth Naval Hospital, for the men of Fort Story before departing for Vietnam, for the Navy "P" and others too numerous to mention here.

They are scheduled for a performance during Children's Week in Virginia Beach when they will sing at the Norwegian Lady statue, 25th and Oceanfront, at 8 p.m. The public is invited.

GI Bill Remembered

The Captain John Smith Chapter No. 13, Department of Virginia, Federation of All Veterans of the USA, Inc., at a recent meeting unanimously voted a resolution to memorialize the authors of the so called "GI" Bill of Rights. The resolution was offered by Raymond C. Purvis the father of the idea. Purvis suggested that the memorial be in the form of a living memorial and to be located in Topeka, Kansas which is near the geographical center of the United States. Incidentally, Topeka is the home city of Harry W. Colmer one of the co-authors of the Bill. The late John Stille and Edward Hayes of Illinois are among other co-authors.

Millions of veterans from World War II and subsequent wars in which this country has been engaged, and their families have benefited from the Bill which has been amended by the Congress from war to war.

3 Escape from Jail

Three men fled from custody in a daring daylight escape from the Virginia Beach city jail about 11:30 a.m. yesterday after overpowering a jailer.

Authorities quoted jailer Fred

Harrell with saying he was making a routine check of the cell block when the men jumped from their cell and overpowered him, taking his ring of jail keys and locking him in their cell before fleeing the jail through one of the doors which leads to the outside.

The men were identified as Leroy Boone, 20, six feet tall, 230 pounds, brown eyes and dark hair; Cleveland McKinley Davis, 26, six feet tall, 195 pounds, brown eyes and dark hair, and Elton Askey, 27, five feet, 11 inches tall, 180 pounds, brown eyes and dark hair. All of the men are Negroes. At the time of their escape Boone was wearing a yellow pullover knit shirt and dark pants; Davis was dressed in a dark suit with an open collar shirt without tie; the description of Askey's clothing was unavailable.

Authorities told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN that Boone was in custody awaiting a hearing on an appeal of a life sentence following his conviction of robbery, while Davis was awaiting trial on indictments on five counts of armed robbery, and that Askey had been returned to the city jail from the State Penitentiary on a writ for a new trial following his conviction of burglary. Boone had been in custody since May 24, Davis since May 17, and Askey since June 17.

Authorities said the men were not believed to have been armed at the time of their escape from the jail, but that it was unknown if they would attempt to obtain any weapons. An immediate warning was broadcast over radio station WVAJ of the description of the men with a warning the men may try to obtain an auto or hitchhike a ride, and motorists were warned not to leave keys in unlocked autos. Early indications were that jailer Harrell was unharmed when the men overpowered him to obtain his keys in their dash to freedom.

The escape from the city jail came on the heels of an announcement from City Sgt. John Marr that he had been informed State Officials were honoring his request for an inspection of the operation of the city jail. (See separate story)

The matter of filing charges against anyone in the placing of the pistol in the jail was placed before Virginia Beach Police Department acting assistant chief Capt. W. W. Davis, who also serves as director of the department's detective bureau. Davis said "I'm not sure that Sgt. Grant, the investigator assigned to the case, has exhausted all facets of his investigation, and therefore I would rather withhold any further comment at this time."

Marr

The matter of apparent discrepancies regarding the alleged receipt of a letter telling Marr of an offer of "up to $20,000" to someone for supplying an inmate of the jail with a gun and arranging that prisoner's escape has entered the discussion.

Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans said that neither he nor his assistant handling the case had knowledge of the letter.

Conflict Is Quiet

Except for a relatively minor incident early this week the conflict of interest issue in Virginia Beach has been unusually quiet.

Solution of the thorny problem now centers on a public hearing at the state Capitol in Richmond on Monday, Sept. 16, at 10 a.m. A study commission set up by Gov. Godwin and the Virginia General Assembly will hear discussion that day on what its chairman has called the "number one" target of the group, the conflict of interest problem as it deals with Virginia localities.

One member of the group had earlier noted that obtaining information on the subject and suggestions from such areas as northern Virginia had been difficult.

Commission member Wiley F. Mitchell, Jr., of Alexandria said the lack of actual laws applying to localities was a pressing problem. He added that what few laws there are often appear to be in conflict with each other.

The chairman of the committee, which is report to a special session of the Virginia General Assembly expected to be called for January 1969, is University of Richmond Law School Dean William T. Muse.

Locally after a flurry of activity and charges concerning conflict of interest the matter has apparently died down, pending the outcome of the study commission's recommendations to the governor. In Virginia Beach, however, this has not been the case.

Additional School Funds Won't Affect Taxpayers

A request for an increase of $496,234 in the Virginia Beach School Board Budget will be met by existing funds, not the taxpayers pocketbooks, according to School Supt. E. E. Brickell.

The increase, approved by the School Board Tuesday, must now be approved by City Council.

Kellam Heads for Chicago Despite Recent Illness

After a few days in the hospital for tests and a minor illness Democratic National Committeeman Sidney S. Kellam of Virginia Beach is in Chicago for the Democratic national convention.

Kellam

He is scheduled to attend meetings today, Friday and Saturday of the credentials committee, of which he is a member. The meetings are being held at the Conrad Hilton Hotel.

The committee has been holding long meetings since Monday, under the chairmanship of Gov. Richard J. Hughes of New Jersey. The committee sessions have lasted far into the evening hours, including executive sessions, after a group of challenges.

There are more challenges to regular state delegations than have been heard in modern times, according to Kellam. He said he was not prepared to comment on any of the challenges until after hearing all the facts in Chicago.

"I am proud to say, however, said Kellam "that Virginia is not one of those states where the delegation is being challenged."

He pointed out that Virginia was one of the only southern states without a challenge.

Through the first three days of hearings there have been challenges to delegations in Mississippi, Tennessee, Washington, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Connecticut, Oklahoma, Texas, Georgia, Alabama and Wisconsin.

Before Saturday additional challenges are expected from two other delegations from Alabama, Michigan, Indiana, Missouri, Louisiana, North Carolina and New York.

The work of the committee must be finished and all delegates properly seated before the convention actually gets underway on Monday. Kellam smiled and said he expected to get in some long hours prior to that time.

Before he left for Chicago Kellam said that according to all reports he had it would appear that Vice Pres. Hubert H. Humphrey has the nomination "locked up." Kellam said he could not predict whether that apparent nomination would be a first ballot victory.

Concerning the second spot on the ticket, Kellam said, "I think there is a good possibility of a southerner being on the ticket. Several fine names have been mentioned." North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford and Texas Gov. John Connally have both been prominently mentioned as possible vice-presidential nominees for the Democrats.

certain needs that had apparently not been anticipated by his predecessor, Frank W. Cox, who retired last March. School needs were not made public after the meeting at the request of Brickell who noted that he wished the School Board to be informed first.

At the School Board meeting he broke the sum down into salaries for additional teachers, 12 mobile classrooms, a demonstration library at First Colonial High School and the city's part of the driver-education program.

According to Brickell, "We underestimated our revenues by about $500,000 along with unexpected expenditures of about the same amount." He explained that the board was not requesting more funds outright but only a realignment of the funds available to meet the expenses.

Board member James L. Kitchen submitted a plan of dividing the school system's insurance among members of the Virginia Beach Independent Agents Assn., only to be met by objections from other insurance agents.

William Nagg of State Farm Insurance was spokesman for the group and said that the V.B.I.A.A. has only 12 members and is not a fair representation of agents. He said some independent agents are not eligible for membership and that some members are not independent agents.

According to Kitchen, his committee's insurance plan would save the City a considerable amount of money. The School Board voted to go ahead and submit the plan to the state for approval but to withhold awarding contracts until the September board meeting.

Dr. Roy A. Woods, a member of the school board, questioned the low ratio of colored teachers to white which were hired for this fall. He said his figures showed that 10 percent of the students are colored but only eight percent of the teachers. Miss Louise Luford, director of instructional personnel, pointed out that fewer colored teachers are qualified to teach in elementary grades which have the most teacher vacancies. She said she would prepare a report showing the ratio of teachers applying in various subject areas.

Miss Luford also outlined a new plan for hiring substitute teachers. All new substitute teachers will apply through the School Administration Personnel Office rather than to the individual schools as has been done in the past.

Substitutes who teach 60 days in one school or a total of 90 days must be certified. All new applicants must have chest x-rays and references.

The School Board effected an agreement with the heirs of the Brock Farm on Newtown Road to purchase 25 acres for Bayside Junior High School. At the July School Board meeting the city attorney was given the authority to file suit for the property because at that time there was not a clear land title.

Ernest Stone, construction supervisor for the schools, said on construction progress of new schools, "we're still cliffhanging." He added that Point O View and Pembroke Meadows would be "occupied" at the beginning of school as well as the additions to elementary schools. He said there might be a delay of a day or two in the Kempville High addition. Kempville Junior High is under construction, he said, and bids will be opened for Bayside Junior High on Sept. 24.

Robert H. DeFord Jr. and J.W. Buffington were appointed to a committee which will serve to improve communications among city offices. They will meet with Brickell, City Manager Roger M. Scott and Planning Director Patrick Standing. In the past, the School Board has been hard-pressed to provide facilities for rapidly growing areas such as Princess Anne Plaza where six elementary schools have been constructed in five years. In addition land prices have been rising recently.

C. I. Siler, membership chairman of the Virginia Beach chapter of the NAACP, presented a letter asking for a meeting with the School Board to discuss the "Freedom-of- (See 'Schools,' p. 2)

Fund Drive Reaches 30%

The United Communities Fund has achieved about 30% of their goal in their current fund drive. The approximate one-third mark amounts to $2,085.

The restaurant division, headed by Mike Savvides and Mike Erhard has reached 75% of their goal, and they plan to go over the top by Monday.

Downing Backs Plank For Merchant Marine

First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing has been a busy man this week, and his plans for next week call for more of the same.

Beginning at the end of last week Downing began making one of his usual trips throughout his constituency which covers Newport News, Hampton and several Peninsula counties, as well as Virginia Beach.

He took time out from that Monday night when he addressed the Democratic party's platform committee in Washington urging the inclusion of a strong merchant marine plank in the 1968 platform. The GOP platform does have a measure asking for a better merchant marine, but nothing as strong as urged by Downing.

The new SPCA is just a beginning, according to Mrs. Beasley, who has hopes of a growing center in Virginia Beach.

When the center is operative a full-time worker will be employed for pickup service of both stray and dead animals, a service now limited to the Animal Control Bureau of the Virginia Beach Police Department.

Mrs. Beasley is hopeful that operation will eventually come under the SPCA and that the city will contribute toward the operation as in Norfolk and other cities.

She added that she is still looking for volunteers to help with the neighborhood canvass. The problem of stray dogs and cats is quite a serious problem in Virginia Beach, according to Mrs. Beasley.

"You'd be surprised how many people just move away and leave their pets behind," she said. "I've picked up as many as many as six or seven stray dogs at the beach myself on a single morning and tried to find homes for them."

Road Makes Up Lost Time

The paving of Holland Road has begun and not a moment too soon for the motorists who have traveled the twisting, bumpy thoroughfare recently.

Holland Road, once a country road stretching from Chesney Corner to the vicinity of the Princess Anne Courthouse, has long been overcrowded because of residential, school and commercial development. It has also been badly in need of widening and general repair for a number of years.

Even though it had to be part of a bond issue motorists were overjoyed with the news that something was finally going to be done. But then the actual start of work was again delayed by a minor controversy over the laying of drainage pipes in ditches at the side of the road. Because of a misunderstanding some residents of the area objected to the ditches on their land. A mass meeting settled that one.

But the work that was supposed to be begun in early June was delayed for a few weeks. Then the ditches were cut. The pipes probably won't be in by the time the paving is finished on the new 22-foot wide road, but they will follow this fall.

The big push now is to get the paving done before school opens, since the road is a primary school bus route to several schools. About five inches of self-leveling asphalt will be laid on the length of the road from Independence Blvd. to near Kellam High School.

That will cost about $140,000 of the $240,000 earmarked for the job in the bond issue last January. The rest has gone to grading, the ditches, pipe, widening, cutting off some curves and relocating where necessary.

While the paving operation will not close the road entirely, it has not been the best road in Virginia Beach to drive recently anyway, with the construction and dust.

The Holland Road project has priority now and several shifts are working long hours to finish it on time. A large number of workers of the highway division of the Dept. of Public Works are now actively engaged on the project.

No one will be sorry when the job is done.

The new SPCA building on Farm Road takes shape. The roof will be on by this weekend and occupancy by the animal population is expected this fall.

SPCA Plans New Fund Drive

About the end of October the Virginia Beach chapter of the SPCA will move into its brand new home now under construction on Farm Road just off the intersection of General Booth and Oceana Bldvs.

The building is not a large one nor an ostentatious one, and the cost is small as buildings go. But the $23,000 represents the culmination of the hopes and dreams of a number of people and the untiring work over the past three years by at least four Virginia Beach people.

Along with attorney Grover Wright, three women, Liz Silla, Bea Lovitt and Lee Beasley, are mostly responsible for reaching this point in history.

The City of Virginia Beach gave the land to the SPCA chapter, but the money for the building was up to them. About $7,000 was raised in varying types of memberships. Mrs. Beasley is now working on renewing those. Part of the money has been spent on the building.

About $8,000 is needed for annual operation of the new kennel at the SPCA center, and about $18,000 is still needed to meet construction costs. Mrs. Beasley and a task force of others are in the process of a door-to-door campaign for funds throughout the city.

Building Keeps Record Pace

Building in Virginia Beach continues at a record pace and is still running ahead of the all-time record high set in 1965, according to figures released by John E. Gibbs, Supt. of Inspections for the city.

The total through July of this year stands at $38,765,879. At the end of the same period in 1965, the figure was $38,355,000. The 1967 total at the end of July was only $26,834,373. While the 1968 total is only about $400 thousand ahead of the total in 1965, it is nearly $12 million ahead of last year.

In 1965 when the building value record was set in Virginia Beach, July was a peak month. New permits were valued at $9,549,057. After that time values began to drop for the rest of the year.

This year in July the total permits amounted to only $5,731,099, lower than for a number of preceding months and just about $400 thousand ahead of last July's total of $5,306,000.

Robert Lohr, Gibbs' assistant, said that if permits continue to be issued as expected, 1968 should set a new record and "far exceed 1965." He noted that residential building had not slowed at all this year, and that tight money, the world situation and the election year had not seemed to affect the home-building industry in Virginia Beach.

A number of large single-family and apartment or townhouse developments are expected to be started before the end of 1968 in Virginia Beach, adding significantly to the total value of building permits by Dec. 31.

A total of 131 single family homes were started in July at a total value of $2,592,328, while 133 apartment or townhouse units were begun at a value of $1,790,560.

While residential building, especially single family housing, continues to lead the building boom in Virginia Beach this year, new commercial buildings and additions to existing commercial structures have added greatly to the total. In July, 10 new commercial ventures were begun at a value of $787,882, and additions valued at $32,210 were also started.

Churches and public buildings accounted for another $125,000 value in July, while additions to private homes accounted for another $134,104.

A number of schools, approved in the Jan. 20 bond issue are also included in the 1968 building total.

Wesleyan Gets New Dean

Frank S. Badger of Cleveland, Ohio has been named Director of Admissions at Virginia Wesleyan College, the three year college situated on the Virginia Beach-Norfolk line.

Badger, 42, succeeds Donald E. Davis who has served in that position since November 1965. Davis leaves Virginia Wesleyan to become a management analyst with the U.S. Navy fleet anti-aircraft warfare training center at Dam Neck. He assumes his duties this week.

Badger comes to Virginia Wesleyan with experience as Director of Admissions at Case Institute (now Case-Reserve University) in Cleveland, 1959 to 1964. He taught in the department of mathematics and served as admissions counselor at Allegheny College in Meadville, Penn. from 1955-1959.

The new Virginia Wesleyan staff member has been in private business for the past four years. Badger holds degrees from Kent State University in Ohio and Western Reserve University in Ohio. He has done considerable work toward his doctorate in mathematics education at the University of Pittsburgh and at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Badger assumes his new position at Wesleyan in September. In addition to his duties as Director of Admissions, he will also serve as Registrar.

In announcing Badger's appointment, Pres. Lambuth M. Clarke said: "We regret the loss of Mr. Davis who has been with the College since before we opened and has done a fine job in developing our admissions program. I think we are fortunate to have found a man of Mr. Badger's experience and interest to succeed him."

Campers Are Ready to Go Again

Reno is only three weeks old, about two inches long, and has already completely changed a local family's camping vacation.

She is a puppy, born prematurely and unexpectedly to the Donald Proffitts' almost-Manchester dog, Piccolo, in a tennis shoe in Reno, Nev., thus the name. The father is an almost-dachshund, they think.

At birth the puppy was too small and weak to nurse, so the Proffitts fed it infant formula from an eye dropper on a three-hour around the clock schedule. "I thought I had given up night feedings for good when Michael, (7) got past that stage," laughed Margaret Proffitt, who teaches at Lynnhaven Elementary School. Her husband is on the Kellam High School staff.

Piccolo is five years old and had never had puppies before. "I think she was just as surprised as we were," said Mrs. Proffitt. A week earlier they had taken Piccolo to a veterinarian because she was acting strangely. He diagnosed her trouble as "false pregnancy."

The six-week, 8,000-mile camping trip started as a trip to the National Education Association convention in Dallas in July. Mrs. Proffitt wanted to attend with her husband, who was a delegate, but she didn't want to impose upon anyone to keep the three boys, Steven, 11; Leon, 9, and Michael.

So friends offered them the camper and encouraged them to make the trip. "We were not experienced campers," Mrs. Proffitt pointed out. "All the camping books say not to go unless you are."

The size of the small, folding camper is deceiving. It sleeps eight and contains a two-unit stove, refrigerator, table and storage space.

Proffitt did most of the cooking his wife said. "Man, he makes good pancakes for breakfast," volunteered Steven.

Their adventures included almost getting blown away in a windstorm in El Paso, Texas. "We arrived just the day after the big flood there," said Proffitt. "A storm blew up suddenly in El Paso before we put the top up on the camper. The wind blew one end of the top up and it ballooned up and the camper took off toward a car." Proffitt ran after it and turned it aside just in time. He has three stitches in his head to show for his efforts.

"Campers are the nicest people you'll ever meet," said Proffitt. "They're very helpful. For instance after the storm in El Paso, the other campers helped us get things back together. The camper was really a mess. Others who were camping in tents had their tents blown away. Everyone pitched to help."

Highlights of the trip included San Francisco—"Hippies really do abound there"; Disneyland—"Michael got lost, and we finally found him marching in a parade of dwarfs totally unconcerned"; Sequoia National Park—"We stayed an extra day because it was so pretty."

Leon and Steven Proffitt sit in the doorway of the camper with Piccolo.

Despite her small size, Reno does have her eyes open even if you can't see them in the picture.

While they were in Yellowstone National Park, three grizzly bears were killed for attacking people. "One night I heard something in the trash can," said Mrs. Proffitt. "Donald was awake too, but neither of us would admit we heard anything. Finally he suggested that we leave early. I told him not until it at least got light."

The Proffitts had planned to go into Canada, but the puppy changed things. Not only was her health precarious, but they had no rabies tag for her. They had a tag for Piccolo but no certificate.

Of their 23-state trip Mrs. Proffitt commented, "We didn't find any place prettier than Virginia. There is such a lot of different scenery."

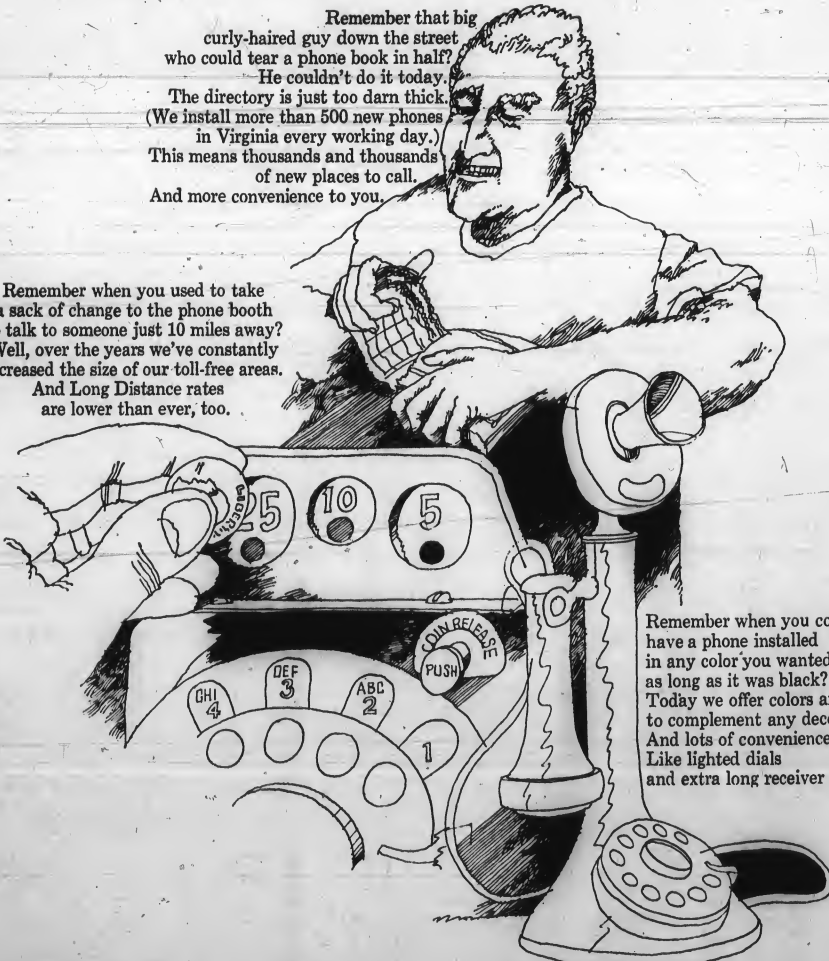

Proffitt says camping is the "economical way to see the country." He estimated that they spent about $1.50 per night, maybe less, for lodging. In the six weeks they only stayed in motels four nights.

"We wouldn't hesitate to go again," said Proffitt. "We'd like to take the trip again with another couple. There were so many things for adults like in Las Vegas and San Francisco that we couldn't visit because of the children. We're already making plans to go somewhere next summer."

Things to remember when you pay your phone bill.

Remember that big curly-haired guy down the street who could tear a phone book in half? He couldn't do it today. The directory is just too darn thick. We install more than 500 new phones in Virginia every working day. This means thousands and thousands of new places to call. And more convenience to you.

Remember when you used to take a sack of change to the phone booth to talk to someone just 10 miles away? Well, over the years we've constantly increased the size of our toll-free areas. And Long Distance rates are lower than ever, too.

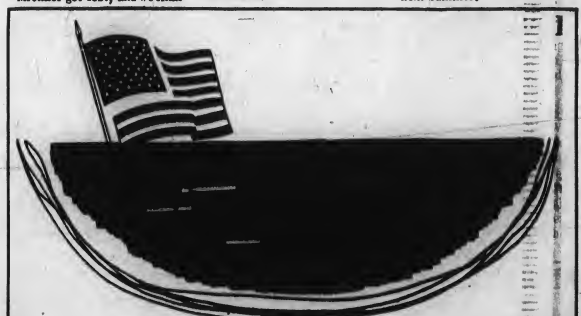

Remember when you could have a phone installed in any color you wanted... as long as it was black? Today we offer colors and styles to complement any decor. And lots of conveniences, too. Like lighted dials and extra long receiver cords.

Nobody likes to pay bills. No matter what they are. But at least when you pay your phone bill, you're getting more for your money than ever before. And you can't say that about many things.

Your phone service isn't what it used to be. And aren't you glad?

Golfing Pros Want End to Discord

The announcement from touring golf professionals that they intend to split with the Professional Golf Association and go into business for themselves under the name of "American Professional Golfers" has been met with varied reaction by the club pros of the various golf courses of Virginia Beach.

This issue could be of vital importance to area club pros for two reasons. The first being manufacturers of golf equipment that rely heavily on the sale of the touring pro endorsed equipment through club pros, and the second being several of Virginia Beach club pros are members of the PGA and have taken part in top tournaments as touring pros.

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN asked a number of the club pros how they viewed the situation, whether the touring pros are right in their feelings, if the PGA was taking the right viewpoint, and what was the basic factor behind the disagreement. The SUN received various responses to the inquiries.

Claude King, Lake Wright Golf Course club pro, who is a PGA member and a well respected touring pro, told the SUN, "I think both of them (PGA and pros) have got to see eye to eye with each other. I think one needs the other. I think something will be worked out before '69, I hope it does work. I also think the players should be in on decisions on the tournament schedules and the amount of the purses." As far as what was behind the split, King said "I don't really think it's the money, but rather the way the business is transacted that's bothering the touring pros."

Jack Harvey, club pro at the NAS Oceana golf course, was explicit in his view of the situation. Harvey said, "I think the pros have bitten off more than they can chew. They will find it difficult to get along without the PGA. They'll be sorry in a few years." As for reasoning behind the split, Harvey said "I think greediness on the part of the touring pros brought it about."

Johnny Kelly, Kempsville Meadows Golf Club pro, who is also a PGA member, indicated money may have been the deciding factor in the breakup. Kelly told the SUN, "I believe the trouble began over TV rights as far as the shares for the pros were concerned."

Kelly added, "I think the PGA has been their backs as far as they can. The playing pros seem to be selfish, while the PGA has been more than fair with the touring pros." As for the future, Kelly said "I honestly think they're going to get back together, but they'll both have to concede."

Another respected club pro, who has also made the tournament rounds and is a PGA member, is Tom Strange of the Bow Creek golf course. When asked for his opinion on the situation, Strange replied "I'm sorry to see it happen, but nobody knows the whole story yet. I think the whole thing is the result of the players wanting to govern themselves, and the PGA has said, 'no.' What will it do for myself, or Claude King? I don't know yet. Maybe the differences can be worked out by the time of the PGA national meeting in Florida. I certainly hope so."

Lou Shue, club pro at the Cavalier golf course, indicated the difficulty began a year ago by saying, "I think the whole thing started with the PGA's Executive Committee turning down a proposed $200 thousand California tournament which would have conflicted with the Bob Hope Classic. Now that they've split, well, it's just one of those things." When Shue was asked if he felt differences between the touring pros and the PGA would be overcome and the two get back together, Shue said "I hope so, maybe so, maybe not."

Reaction also came from Princess Anne golf course club pro Leo Kernan who said, "I would say the (touring) pros really worked to build up the tournament purses; now they want to take away what I took 52 years to build. I think the difficulty originated with the Bob Hope tournament, when they (the PGA) didn't want to take anything away from the Classic by playing another proposed tournament. But, I think the PGA was right. I think the PGA is right in their decision."

Another PGA member who told the SUN of his feelings on the situation was Clarence Underwood, Stumpy Lake golf course manager and club pro. Underwood said, "I don't feel the (touring) pros should want to dictate to the PGA anymore than PGA members should want to dictate to the pros. The pros want to take over control. They wanted to get into the PGA to play in the tournaments, now that they're in they feel they don't need the PGA anymore." As for how the decision will affect club pro shop sales of golf equipment endorsed by major touring pros, Underwood expresses the opinion that he feels "there will be a definite rebellion by manufacturers from the stand point of going along with the touring pros decision."

Clough to obtain bids on one of the units, and that the purchase of the second unit would be investigated in the future if the study of the fire departments indicated it would be required.

Members of City Council also requested an investigation be made into devising a system of retiring older pieces of fire fighting equipment which are still being used by the various units of the city.

The financial status of the Volunteer Fire Departments is quite clear in the amount of money raised by the 12 units of the city in this year's fund raising drive. Since the drive was begun this spring, contributions from the public have fallen below expectations. Slightly more than half of the $106,500 has been received thus far.

Incidentally, contributions are also falling below individual department goals in amounts ranging from $1,200 to $6,500.

Chimp Stars At Seaside

Hollywood stunt man, Bob Caravanaugh, who was at Seaside Amusement Park three weeks ago with his trained horse "Dotie The Education Mare," returned this week with "Susie the Chimp," a veteran movie performer herself, for two delightful and amusing shows daily at 2:30 and 10 p.m., on Seaside Park's outdoor stage, through Sunday, Aug. 25. The act is presented as a free attraction by the park.

Bob has raised Susie from birth and treats her as he would a daughter. Susie lives in the same house with him, sits at the table and eats with her spoon and drinks out of a glass. When he is touring, Susie lives in Bob's big travelling trailer. Susie does all her tricks by Bob's voice commands and she does a lot of spontaneously funny things in her act. A born ham, she loves to have people laugh and clap at her antics.

"Susie The Chimp" will be followed by the park's final circus act of the season, "The Torrys," tumbling wizards of the comedy trampoline, scheduled for Aug. 28-Sept. 2.

The park will close for the season on Labor Day, September 2nd, with the traditional fireworks show at 10 p.m. on that evening.

Beach 'Crossroads' Gets Unique Light

You say you've had a little trouble turning left from Independence Blvd. onto Virginia Beach Blvd. You say it's gotten a lot worse since the northbound lanes of Independence Blvd have been opened from the Expressway to Virginia Beach Blvd.? You say it's getting you down?

Well cheer up, folks. Help is on the way. In fact it has been on the way for about a year. The only traffic signal of its kind in Virginia Beach should be installed and operating early this fall, according to Frank Williamson, assistant to the Chief of Traffic Safety Reeves Johnson.

Williamson said that there had been no real rush to get the signal until all four lanes of Independence Blvd. were open, but that it had been ordered a year ago. He said Johnson had hoped to get the signal up this summer, especially in time for the Labor Day weekend traffic, but that it still had not come. It should be here about the first of September, however, according to Williamson.

The signal is the same type used at only one other place in the area, at Wards Corner in Norfolk. It provides for separate left turn signals on both thoroughfares, in addition to separate through traffic and named "Crossroads of the South", but the intersection of Independence Blvd. and Virginia Beach Blvd. with its present heavy traffic and large businesses is already fast-becoming known as the "Crossroads of Virginia Beach". As planned continued construction is completed there and as traffic on both roads increases, the intersection is expected to challenge Wards Corner for the "Crossroads of the South" title.

Meanwhile, at least traffic will be able to keep up with the growth as soon as the new signal is installed.

What Is the Future Of Volunteer F.D.'s?

Discussions during recent informal sessions of the Virginia Beach City Council indicate the day may be rapidly approaching when paid fire departments will be operating in each borough of the resort city.

During the Aug. 5 informal meeting, City Manager Roger Scott suggested a comprehensive study be made of the city's fire departments covering such points as whether fire headquarters buildings are located properly to serve surrounding areas, if the buildings and equipment of each department are adequate for ample protection of their region and whether any of the departments should be combined.

This meeting also brought suggestions from several Councilmen the study should also include the feasibility of placing paid fire departments in the boroughs of the city either as a replacement for, or in conjunction with, volunteer fire departments. While City Manager Scott agreed with replacing volunteer fire departments with paid departments, he indicated he felt this would not become a reality until some future date.

The Aug. 12 informal meeting of Councilmen heard the airing of a request from the Princess Anne Plaza Volunteer Fire Department for a loan from the city of nearly $90 thousand for the purchase of two new fire trucks in the Windsor Woods section. A member of Council pointed out that since loans to fire departments are repaid to the city at the rate of $100 a month it would require about 70 years to repay the $90 thousand, and that "perhaps the time has come for the city to investigate the possibility of going into the fire department business."

Action on the Plaza request was postponed until the matter went before the Virginia Beach Fire Council to assure the equipment being sought met requirements recently outlined to bring out a uniform set of specifications covering all fire fighting equipment purchased for use in the city. Fire Council approved the request in its meeting of Monday night, Aug. 12, and forwarded the request to the City Manager's office for appropriate action.

The possibility of operating paid fire departments in each borough of Virginia Beach again was discussed in Monday's informal City Council meeting. The discussion centered around the proposal of placing two, three or four paid firemen in each of the city's fire departments, who would operate as professional fire truck drivers while also serving as maintenance men to care for fire fighting equipment.

It was the consensus of opinion of councilmen that such a system would aid in lowering the over-all fire insurance rate in the city. Some idea of the cost of manning paid fire departments in each borough of the city was indicated by a remark from Councilman G. Dewey Simmons when he estimated such a program today would cost the city $1.5 million annually.

City Manager Roger Scott, during Monday's informal meeting, noted he has been in touch with a consultant regarding the overall study of the fire department system in the city, and that the 1969-1970 fiscal year budget might include finances to cover the study.

Regarding the equipment requested by the Plaza Volunteers, Scott said he has asked city purchasing agent Carroll

Dollar Chain Opens New Bank

A new bank has opened in the Resort City on Indian River Road and Military Highway. Ribbon, or better, dollar, cutting ceremonies, were held recently for a branch of Seaboard Bank. The ribbon was made of a chain of dollar bills, except for one $50 bill was given to the president of the Woodstock Civic League, Paige Herbert, whose league was responsible for creating interest about the need of a bank in the Woodstock area.

Council Meeting Is No Secret

Two long expected items were taken up by City Council in executive session at its informal meeting Monday. The Press is excluded from discussions on such matters as personalities and anything that may be prejudicial to the operation of the city if prematurely known. The items discussed Monday, however, were apparently leaked to a Norfolk newspaper by those involved and published prematurely. Discussed was adoption of an ordinance that will set up a personnel grievance committee as suggested by Councilman Robert Cromwell's personnel committee which studied the matter, and the names of those expected to be named to the board. Council is expected to take formal action next Monday at its regular meeting adopting the ordinance and appointing

Man Dies in Wreck

State Police investigators said Thomas P. Schmidt, Sr., 50, of Treston Avenue, died of multiple injuries received when his truck apparently went out of control, striking an abutment on the Interstate 64 bridge over Chesapeake Blvd. in Norfolk turning over and coming to rest upside down. The cab of the truck was torn from the chassis in the accident, but investigation indicated excessive speed was not responsible for the accident. The accident initially was attributed to a front tire on the cab blowing out.

Safercrackers Hit Area

Business firms of Virginia Beach became the targets of safe crackers Monday night. Police investigators said $200 in cash was taken from a safe which was ripped open at Louis Legum Furniture Co., at 3605 Virginia Beach Blvd. Another safe, which contained only papers, was forced open at the Haycox Construction Co. office in a Haycox Drive office building. These same thieves are also believed responsible for theft of $4 from a drink machine in the Ceramic Tile Co. of Florida office in the same building. Indications are the thefts were carried out by professional safe crackers.

Three Men Convicted

Three men have been convicted and a fourth acquitted of charges of manufacturing illegal whiskey in the Pungo Borough. The accused were arrested last December in a raid on an indoor whiskey still in which large quantities of moonshine was confiscated by local and federal agents. One year suspended sentences were given Curtis H. Whitehurst of Back Bay, Kermit Mitchell of Back Bay, and Langford Phillips of Pleasant Ridge, all of whom plead guilty to the charges. Rufus Leon Brock, of Mail Landing Road was found not guilty in the court proceedings.

Woman Faces Charges

Court appearance is pending for Mildred A. Kerley, 50 year old Virginia Beach woman facing charges in the shooting of her husband. Police officials said she has been charged in the shooting of her husband, Muriel Monroe Kerley. According to investigators Kerley, 47, was shot in the stomach with a .22 caliber rifle in the couple's Palm Beach Place apartment. Circumstances behind the shooting remain under investigation.

Dies of Injuries

Final services were conducted Sunday for Richard Keith Barco who was fatally injured in a single car accident on the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway. Barco, 16, of 27th Street died from head injuries received when his auto went out of control and struck a guard rail near the Expressway main toll plaza. Investigators said the impact of the collision forced a guard rail through the auto and threw Barco from the car. Capt. George K. Bryan, police Traffic Bureau C. O., told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN that Barco will not be included in the total of traffic fatalities in the city of Virginia Beach. Bryan said this is based on the reasoning that while the Expressway is within the Virginia Beach city limits, the roadway comes under the jurisdiction of State Police.

Burglars Sought

Virginia Beach continues their search for thieves who last weekend broke into the Tiki Restaurant on Atlantic Avenue and made off with $4,200. Investigators said all but $300 of the money was in cash, the remainder in checks. The money was taken from a safe which was ripped open by the thieves. The building was entered by taking a shield off a ventilation opening in the rear of the building.

Charged with Rape

Charges of rape and burglary have been sent to a Virginia Beach Circuit Court grant jury against Robert W. Newell, 19 of Chesapeake, charged by police with attacking a 19-year-old woman at her Rosemont Road apartment. The charges allege Newell entered the victim's apartment through a sliding door, and assaulted her as he threatened to kill her with a knife if she tried out.

Marine Arrested

A 20-year-old Virginia Beach Marine Lance CPL. is scheduled to appear in court Sept. 9 on charges of possession of marijuana. Police investigators said Michael L. Smith was arrested at the Centerville Turnpike home of his grandparents shortly after delivery of his service duffel bag, which allegedly contained 341 marijuana cigarettes. The cigarettes, in cellophane packs of 50, were reportedly concealed in the hood of a field jacket. Authorities said the marijuana was discovered in a San Francisco customs inspection after the bag was shipped from Vietnam where Smith has served.

Marr countered by saying "I know 'burned' well I did hand it to one of his deputies in the Judge's office. I told the Judge, 'I have something which I believe is very vital.' The Judge told me to give it to the Commonwealth's Attorney, who in turn said 'give it to my deputy,' which I did."

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN again questioned Evans on the matter. He said that the only comment he could make had been made earlier. It now appears that any further action on recent developments regarding the Virginia Beach city jail will depend upon the pending inspection of the facility, the date of which remains uncertain.

Wesleyan Offers 12 At Night

Virginia Wesleyan College will offer 12 courses in an evening program this fall, beginning the week of Sept. 23. All of the courses except one will meet one night each week from 7-10 p.m., Monday through Thursday. A new course in Russian language will meet two nights each week.

The evening courses are open to any high school graduate. One hundred and seventeen students, all part-time, non-resident, took courses this summer in the evening program.

The 12 courses being offered this fall at Wesleyan in the evening program are painting, principles of education, educational psychology, U.S. history, introduction to journalism, comparative literature, basic modern mathematics, history of music, general psychology, Russian, sociology and a workshop in library science. In addition to these 12 courses, two others offered by the Hampton Roads Center of the University of Virginia, will be given at Virginia Wesleyan. The two are commerce (principles of organization and management) and economics (principles of economics).

Registration for the evening program will be accepted by mail until Sept. 6. A registration at the College will be held on Sept. 19 between 4 and 7 p.m.

Council Discusses Minimum Housing

City Council's informal meeting Monday was supposed to be a short one, according to City Manager Roger Scott, but it didn't turn out that way. The meeting lasted more than two hours at the Third Police Precinct on Independence Blvd.

A minimum housing code and needs of the city's Electoral Board consumed the better part of the meeting.

Councilman Lawrence E. Marshall of Bayside is chairman of a Council committee set up late in 1966 when the original housing code was presented without fanfare.

A right-of-entry clause in the code which would allow official entry into private property for inspection purposes caused a major controversy before the January 1967 public hearing on the matter was scheduled. The measure was postponed indefinitely at that time.

The entry clause was considered to be blown out of proportion by one Councilman, who noted that there were a number of legal safeguards built in to avoid any misuses. He added that only those who could not qualify were worried anyway.

At any rate the code has supposedly been rewritten to overcome objections, but has never been made public and no new date for a public hearing has ever been set.

Monday, Marshall asked City Council to stop "fiddling around" and pass the code, or else tell residents they do not intend to do so. He added that Virginia Beach is the only major city in the area without one and that certain state and federal funds are not available because of the lack.

An immediate objection was raised by Pungo Councilman Kenneth Whitehurst who said he could not see it applying to farmers and tenant farm housing. He pointed to a recent case where one farmer had spent a considerable sum to upgrade a tenant farm only to have it ruined a week later by the itinerant worker who lived there temporarily.

Marshall suggested that possibly a population density clause could be included to help the rural areas. At that time all Councilmen present appeared to favor the code if the objection could be overcome, however, no date was set for a public hearing or for making the rewritten law.

Council then turned to the problems of the Electoral Board which noted there was a need for ten new voting machines in the city before the November general election, to meet the needs of the 45,000 voters now on the rolls. John B. James, board chairman, and Mrs. Anna Cotton, general registrar, as well as other members of the board appeared before Council. James and Mrs. Cotton told Council that about 500 new voters had been registered since July 23.

James also informed Council that 16 of the 26 present precincts had more voters registered than allowed by the law, which calls for no more than 1,500. One, Kempville, more than twice exceeds that number, as does one in Virginia Beach Borough.

James pointed out that redistricting could not be accomplished before November, but said the matter should be looked into. Scott said City Planning Commission and Electoral Board help would be sought in the redistricting. Consolidation of smaller precincts and location of precincts were also discussed.

In addition Council gave informal approval to hiring additional help for Mrs. Cotton to complete a purge of voting rolls. Scott also read Councilman a letter from City Attorney Harry Marshall saying that Councilmen who had any interest in real estate involved in zoning matters should by law make it known prior to public hearing by the City Planning Commission. In the past such discussions have come at Council meetings prior to final consideration. At such times, the Councilmen have not voted in the matter.

Councilman George Ferrell informed Council that he had received another offer of 100 acres for a community college in Virginia Beach from Ronald B. Zedd. The property is part of the old Upton Farm and figured in recent attempts to build an airport a half-mile south of the Courthouse. The plea was rejected by the FAA. Ferrell is chairman of the Council committee looking into the site for the two-year college.

Ferrell pointed out that he had not been informed officially of a news report in last week's VIRGINIA BEACH SUN that no site selection would be made by the end of this year because of delays in Richmond. He said the last official information he had was that a site would be picked by September.

He added that he would pass along the new site to the consultants who visited here in any event, and that he had already written Zedd expressing thanks.

This makes the fourth location offered for donation. The donation is considered desirable because the city would then have to run water and sewer lines to the property making the rest more advantageous for other future developments.

Dam Neck Hosts Kids

About 30 youngsters from the Virginia Beach-Norfolk area were guests recently of Capt. Stuart Sadler, Commanding Officer of the Fleet Anti-Air Warfare Training Center. The group, local participants of President Johnson's nationwide STOP program, enjoyed several hours of swimming at beautiful Dam Neck beach, The Virginia Beach chapter of the American Red Cross provided lifeguards and water safety instructors for the group.

Dr. Thompson Calls Students

Garland Jackson, administrative assistant to School Supt. E. E. Brickell, said that word has come to the School Board of a "Dr. Thompson" who is telephoning Virginia Beach students.

Jackson said the School Board wanted to advise the public in general and "our students in particular that we have no Dr. Thompson in the school system. Any calls made come without our authorization," he said. Norfolk students have been bothered by a "Dr. Thompson" recently too.

Public School Sex Education Favored

By Susan Axelrod

The idea of teaching sex education in public schools has been hushed up and rebuffed time and again. "The Virginia Beach School Board has formed a committee to work out a suitable sex education course which they will send to the state board of education for approval upon completion," according to Garland Jackson, board administrative assistant.

Frances Elrod is a person who comes in contact with problems oriented from the lack of sex education every day. She is the director of the City Welfare Department. "The teaching of sex education grows more important every day," she said. "Children should be taught as they grow up. Yes, there should be co-educational classes. If not, one group would be suspicious as to what the other is being told. It can only be accepted by both groups if they can be taught together."

Ronnie Owens will be a junior at Hampton Institute in the fall. An amateur handwriting analyst, he thinks, "sex education should be taught in the schools. When I was growing up sex was a dirty word. You didn't hear it from your parents or the school. If it was taught in the schools, it might even cut down on the population explosion." Co-ed classes? "Sure, it gets a little boring with just all boys and all girls in a class. There should be a little interaction," he said. "I'm all for co-ed terms, for that matter."

a senior at Campbell College in North Carolina. "If sex is taught to children at an early age, I'll keep them out of trouble later on." He added, "I think it should be taught on a co-educational level, but not at first. All the kids would do is sit and laugh if they were hit with it right at first."

Conflict

Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans filed suit against Richard Holland, former chairman of the old Virginia Beach Police and Trial Board, now out of existence. Evans is seeking return of $225,000 from Holland for alleged business Holland's firm did with the city over a period of years.

In addition Evans is attempting to recover another $775,000 from Sidney S. Kellam in alleged business firms he heads did with the city over the same period of time. No legal charges have been filed in that case, however, said Evans noted that he is awaiting the outcome of the Holland case before proceeding against Kellam and a number of others he has also named and advised they are in conflict and owe varying amounts of money to the city.

In the latest matter Planning Commission member J. Peter Holland, Jr. has come under fire by the Virginia Beach supplement of a Norfolk newspaper. Holland is listed as vice president and stockholder of Marchants Bakery in Norfolk, which has done $3,420.23 in business with the city since Jan. 31, 1963, according to the article. Evans said this appears to be conflict of interest.

Holland, 68, said he is not an official of the bakery and that he has been retired since 1962 or 1963. He added that the vice presidency of the company was given him as an honor after his long years of service.

with the company but that the only money he receives is retirement pay.

The bread in question has been for the City Jail, purchased by City Sgt. Marr on a daily basis from a deliveryman whose truck stops at the jail each day.

Marr noted that there is no contact between the jail and the bakery and that he has never discussed the purchase of bread from the bakery with Holland.

The City Planning Commission is one of six city groups making recommendations to City Council on governmental matters. It is established by State Code and members are paid $10 for each regular monthly meeting they attend.

The Commission is generally accepted as falling under the purview of the conflict of interest law, but the case of Holland is not spelled out.

City Extends Season

Vacationers in Virginia Beach are taking home with them an invitation to return during the autumn.

In an effort to bolster off season business, rust-colored cards with yellow maple leaves have been placed in local hotel and motel lobbies to advertise the Chamber of Commerce fall folder kit which includes fishing, touring and sportsman's folders.

According to Laura Lambe, who is in charge of the City's advertising, "This looks like the year that is a breakthrough in our efforts to build up off season business. Easter's falling in mid-April, good weather, shorter travel time from metropolitan markets and an expanded advertising program all contributed to getting the season off to a record beginning."

Special Report

The following letter was sent to the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN by S. W. Rawls III, who wrote his own letter which appears above. The letter he enclosed appeared as a "Letter to the Editor" in the international surfing publication, SURFER MAGAZINE, entitled "Paradise Lost".

We have been assured that the allusions to Seashore State Park are absolutely untrue, and that other circumstances must have been involved. Obviously there are other misconceptions concerning the welcome of surfers in Virginia Beach, as well as additional uncalled for detrimental remarks.

It is this type of publicity, however, that Virginia Beach does not need, and any steps which can be taken to dispel this image must be taken.

Having made many trips to the East Coast and the Gulf of Mexico, Virginia Beach was always high on our list of surf spots we really enjoyed... However, on our last trip, we were stunned because of Virginia Beach's attitude towards surfers. At Seashore State Park, for example, when we arrived with two surfboards on the car, we were told there was no vacancy and we would have to wait. We waited about an hour while several other cars with no surfboards were admitted....

It seems that surfers are only welcome at the time of the East Coast Surfing Championships because of the money and attention they bring to the area. Virginia Beach is typical of many towns in the east and west where surfing is pushed aside in favor of the rich tourists. The greedy merchants in these towns have robbed us of the free use of the ocean to which we are all entitled. Only 500 feet of Virginia Beach's coastline is allocated to surfing. On the other hand, there are towns where surfers can find great surf, clean beaches, sanitary accommodations and a friendly reception by the locals. The towns on Long Beach Island in New Jersey are like this. A town with the attitude of Virginia Beach should not be given the privilege of having the East Coast Surfing Championships.

PROGRESS, 1968

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"No," she said. "I refuse to answer that question. Everything I say will end up in a newspaper column."

"Now, don't be that way," he reassured her. "All I want to know is if you had a good time on the picnic."

"I refuse to give you any more ammunition," she said. "The only reason you took us on a picnic was so you'd have something to write in that stupid column on."

On a Picnic

We DID Go!

"Why did I have to make all the sandwiches ahead of time, and put the lettuce, tomatoes and pickles in separate plastic bags so the sandwiches wouldn't get soggy? The picnic I had in mind was taking along the hot dogs and hamburgers and letting you cook them there."

"I know," he said, still smiling. "All that heat would have added to the 90-degree-plus temperature outside too. Better my way."

"Well, didn't you have a good time?" she asked indignantly. "Of course I did," he said. "I didn't mind at all shooing the flies away from the sandwiches. I've never minded that at all, but the kids just couldn't seem to get the hang of it. I counted six flies on a half of one of their sandwiches once. I think the flies ate more than our younger daughter did."

"Eating wasn't important to them," she said. "They just wanted to get to the playground."

"Yeah," he said, "but I had to send the younger one to the playground with grape drink all over her shirt. And I've got to admit you had a lot of foresight, bringing along that extra outfit so you could change her in the restroom."

"I had to," she said. "You saw her fall down twice on the way back from the playground and roll over in the dirt. That messed up her clothes and got a little blood on them too."

"I remember," he said. "It took me a little while to stop her from crying. And you were so busy at that time feeding the baby formula. Boy, did he ever cry. Some people a hundred yards away must have thought you were killing him."

"He was just a little hot," she said, "and you put the formula in the ice chest. It was too cold."

"I didn't want it to spoil," he pointed out.

"You know, it really is strange," she said. "I seem to remember picnics being a little more fun than that, and a lot less work."

"The kids had a good time, and they didn't do any work," he said.

"Well, I'm going to smile and tell you right now that I had a marvelous time," she said. "If I don't, you'll never let me live it down."

"Fine," he said. "I'm glad. But why did you sneak that nerve pill as soon as we got home?"

"I refuse to answer that," she said. "It'll end up in that stupid column."

Letters to the Editor

I do not propose to offer a solution to the attitude of merchants toward surfers; I only hope to open a door to more understanding and lenient surfing legislation rather than the strict 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. regulation. First I want to comment that this regulation was well thought-out and served to encourage safety in the water, but it has outlived its purpose and had been shown not to be appropriate for the problem we now have. I believe that the hours that the present law specifies are good for weekends and holidays; but, even in the peak of the tourist season, the beach is not so crowded on weekdays, Monday through Friday, as to necessitate the present eight-hour halt during the day. A six-hour pause in surfing, from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m., should certainly be enough to satisfy the demands of the tourists during the weekdays and would most assuredly please the surfers, particularly the ones who reside in and are citizens of the city of Virginia Beach, since they comprise the majority of the weekend surfers. If these different laws proved unsatisfactory in the commercial district which fronts on the boardwalk, perhaps the new hours could only be effected north of the boardwalk and away from the block of motels in the boardwalk section.

A second suggestion is to allow surfing during times when the weather is adverse to the likes of the tourist. This suggestion, at once it engulfs in ambiguity as to who determines when the weather is adverse. The reason I am making such a suggestion is that many times, during a northeaster or the like, the surf is good and the beach is empty; but surfers are denied the opportunity to exploit the waves because of the standing, inflexible regulations. I propose, therefore, that the lifeguards could determine whether the weather is such the people would not come to the beach for normal swimming or sunning pleasures. I offer two suggestions for the determination of these weather conditions. First, surfers could consult with either the Virginia Beach Patrol or the police to get a firm yes or no. This would take the decision out of the hand of the surfers and put it in responsible hands. In addition, if lifeguards should deem the weather so adverse as to abstain from putting out umbrellas, surfers could take this as a firm go-ahead for surfing.

Editor, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN:
I want to express my appreciation for the active support you gave the orchestra and our Association during the past year. Because people like you took time from busy schedules to give much needed and timely assistance, the 1967-68 season was one of unprecedented growth and achievement.

Even though the achievements during the past year have been great, more will be necessary in the future. The new facilities that will be available in the cultural center will offer the Norfolk Symphony Association the greatest challenge in its history. I am confident that the community will meet this challenge if the many friends of the orchestra continue to give such fine and active support.

My renewed thanks for the contributions which you have made in making the year successful one, and my tenure of office an interesting and rewarding experience.

On Surfing

Editor, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN
I have put off writing this letter for too long, but the enclosed clipping out of the SURFER magazine gave me the prompting I needed. I am twenty years old, a cadet at the Virginia Military Institute, and a surfer. I first want to guarantee you that I claim no association with my contemporaries who seem to protest for the sake of protesting and claim unearned liberties to flaunt the authority of both their parents and the government which deserve both the respect and the love which is so often lacking.

What I propose to do in this letter is offer not a negative criticism or mere gripe but a constructive criticism arrived at through deliberate reflection. Although I live in Franklin, Virginia, I have spent all of my twenty summers at Virginia Beach at our home on 68th Street; and I have surfed since 1958 when surfboards were few and far between and there was not the problem that there is now. I am, therefore, well acquainted with the problem and have, what I believe to be, some suggestions of merit.

My alternative suggestion is, I believe, the ideal solution for this problem and the surfing regulation question in general; but, much more, it would represent a step in the right direction by Virginia Beach to solve the problem of the "attitude" described in SURFER. This would be to have a simple recorded message on a telephone to advise surfers of many different things. This telephone number could be well publicized on street signs. In addition, radio publicity is not beyond the imagination. The recording could be easily controlled and kept accurate up to the minute. The time regulations for the day could be given and changed according to the weather and crowds. In addition, if desired, it could give a brief description of surfing conditions, eliminating many a long trip from Norfolk or Portsmouth just to find that the surf is flat. Such a plan would be extremely flexible and would allow the police and the Beach Patrol to simply co-ordinate surfers and surfers to alleviate overcrowding, danger in the water, and disappointment on the part of tourists such as Tom Dillon and John Murphy. If necessary this service could be operated in conjunction with a series of two or three warning flags that could be flown in positions that are visible up and down the beach. Red and green flags could be controlled by the police and give surfers a positive no or go.

All these suggestions are directly intended to alleviate the serious problem of overcrowding in the space at the south of the beach which has been set off for surfing. This overcrowding has created a critical danger to both the surfer and his surfboard. Surfing in this area has become more like riding the "bumpy cars" at the amusement park than actual surfing, and dings (cracks or breaks) on both surfboards and heads are all too common, appalling anyone who is in the least bit safety conscious.

But more important is the far-reaching effect of a revised surfing law or, even better, a public service of the high calibre of an answering service. Either step would be a positive indication that the city of Virginia Beach is truly interested in the problems of both the tourists and the families who reside in the city. A reconsideration of the surfing problem and the regulations pertaining to it could not do any harm but could do unestimable good, and such a reconsideration might not only keep the surfing championship in Virginia Beach where it belongs, but also much more in many other directions. Such a problem and, yet, such an opportunity does not deserve immediate consideration; it demands it. Very respectfully yours,
Sol Waite Rawls III

Editor's Note—Ordinarily we would not print such a long letter, but because this one arrived just before the start of the East Coast Surfing Championships, we felt it was not only timely but also informative.

Just last week an editorial appeared on this page concerning the surfer's plight in which we suggested a real meeting of private and municipal minds on the subject.

Copies of the above letter were also sent to the Mayor and City Manager of Virginia Beach and to the president of the Chamber of Commerce by the writer.

We would like to correct one error in the letter. The Virginia Beach radio station, WVAB,

The Gun in the Jail Trick

Ever since the gun in the jail incident of a couple of weeks ago, charges and counter-charges have been flying. This is not the first incident involving a breach of security in the jail or of a "sticky" incident there. There have been many in recent years.

The seriousness of the incidents is relative. The inmates of the jail are there for breaking the law. They are not choir boys. Incidents can be expected. But control of these incidents and precautions to see that as few as possible do occur concerns us.

City Sgt. John Marr has been highly critical of his critics, whether they were official or private citizens doing the complaining about the operation of the jail. He claims he has called for and received little or no help on certain matters from both the police and the office of the Commonwealth's Attorney.

The police are conducting an Investigation of certain charges now and will not comment. Comments from the Commonwealth Attorney's office are sparse, except to say they have little official interest in the matter at present.

Marr has asked for a state investigation of all jail matters, including security, and claims that unnamed personalities are involved. The state has promised an investigation in "due course."

We make no accusations. We offer no criticism...yet. All we want is a thorough investigation of all matters relating to the jail to clear the air. If a head or two roll after that, that's too bad.

The people of Virginia Beach deserve the best service from elected, appointed and employed civil servants. If there's a problem, it should be taken care of now.

There have been too many things said by too many people now. Let's get this mess straightened out, no matter what.

Dragging Feet is Dangerous

The latest entry into the "Let's Build a Stadium" sweepstakes is the Southeastern Regional Planning Commission, of which all south Tidewater cities are paid-up members.

That entry joins the state authority set up by the General Assembly, a private citizen's group, a committee set up by Virginia Beach City Council, a similar committee set up by Norfolk City Council and a host of others. All vow they have the same goal, and that is a stadium.

We are not certain whether a four-city stadium is the best idea or not. It would seem to be economically and geographically, but there are critics. It is extremely doubtful on the other hand that Virginia Beach could go it alone, as Norfolk seems intent upon, without discussion.

Virginia Beach City Council is dragging its feet on the matter of a stadium, apparently waiting to see what the other cities in the area are going to do. Council has been asked to name members to the Authority. It is "studying" that.

The Impact to Come

When Congress goes back to work after Labor Day the political conventions will be over and schools will be open. The matter of federal impact funds must be settled sensibly then. It was delayed by the recess.

Unless that money is released to school systems that depend heavily on them, the quality of education may suffer. The loss of funds to a community like Virginia Beach with so many federally-connected students can be devastating.

The money is needed far more today than it has when the pro-

Meanwhile time goes on and the issue becomes more and more involved, and more political.

The fact of the matter remains. If we are to have professional baseball, football or both in Tidewater, exclusive of high school and college sports, we must have a stadium and soon.

We cannot afford the dragging of the feet by anyone. We suggest that officials of the four cities get together at last and do something. That something would seem to be to place the matter in the hands of one central body.

If the answer comes up a stadium for Norfolk and one for the rest of the area, fine. If it comes up a four-city effort, fine. But all these splinter groups and all these committees can only serve to muddle the issue further. Someone has to take the lead and get something useful done, instead of waiting for someone else to act.

Why not you, Virginia Beach City Council? We can talk about location later.

gram was set up 15 years ago. Our Congressmen are fighting for the funds. We hope they are successful.

If the funds are not released, we, the full-time residents of Virginia Beach will suffer, not just those directly involved. We can expect to make up the difference, perhaps in taxes.

And the shame of it all will be upon the Administration in Washington that promised aid, then refused to release it, when it was depended upon and so sorely needed.

Cater to the Man in Your Life

He's tall. He's handsome. He's yours.

Okay...so he's five-foot-four, and not precisely Clark Gable, but he's your very own husband, and it's your big job to make him happy.

Sound simple? It ought to be obvious—but it isn't. Seems that modern women are forgetting to brush up on the arts of pleasing men. Ante-bellum Southern belles knew better—as did every proper Victorian miss. But modern freedom brought with it a casual we're all-boys-together attitude that has lost men many of their traditional privileges—and cost women much of the respect they enjoyed when they were the "weaker sex", and proud of it.

Nobody—men least of all—wants to go back to the days of clinging vines and no votes for wives. But most men would be a lot happier with a little extra dose of tender loving care to offset the tensions of our high-pressure workaday world.

The arts and wiles that women can revive to make their husbands happier—and more relaxed, so they'll live longer—start with tender touches. Thoughtfulness is the keynote—even for working wives!—and every kindness counts.

The feminine touch doesn't have to be complicated. There's nothing particularly difficult—but everything flattering and infinitely relaxing—about greeting a husband with a smile, and escorting him to the sitting room, for a short-but-sweet stretch with a newspaper, carpet slippers and a small cigar. Dinner can wait; when he's wound down he'll appreciate your hot-stove labors even more.

Silence from the younger set will help, too; they're never too young to learn that minding their manners is just simple consideration for a hard-working father.

As a matter of fact, some modern psychologists even think that Victorian wives may have had the right idea when they staggered the dinner hour—one sitting for youngsters and a later meal for the lord of the manor—and made children call their fathers sir. Certainly, say the same psychologists, old-fashioned wives set a pattern worth following when they encouraged cigars and carpet slippers. Slipping out of street shoes and elevating the feet is an aid to health (less pumping for the heart)—and what was a way to slip into the evening than in a pair of carpet slippers embroidered by hand with a personal symbol?

As for cigars: it seems that in addition to enforcing relaxation (you can enjoy them there when sitting still), they're the kind of all-male symbol that makes a man feel like a man, doing a quick job of ego-rebuilding after a day in the competitive world.

Studying the secrets of pleasing a man at the mother's knees, yesterday's belles actually took lessons in cigar selection, learning how to test for freshness (hold to your ear and roll between your fingers; a fresh cigar won't crackle) and choose the right shape for the man and the moment (long cigars for late, long hours; shorter ones for quick breaks; a yardrobe of choices to fit his face and mood of the moment).

With dinner served, don't assume he's soothed, or that you can settle down to burden him with the problems of the day. While you do the dishes, let him help his digestion along by repairing to the living room—this time with the youngsters to keep him company, along with his after-dinner cigar. The quiet hour will be a pleasant one for everyone—with a good meal to remember and the tensions of the day rapidly fading. Even impatient children will find the new routine worth the wait—and you'll find that serious conversation will go a lot more smoothly later.

Relaxation should suit his tastes and talents. For Winston Churchill, time off meant time for painting and the enjoyment of a good cigar.

Not that all modern women have forgotten that there's a right time for everything—and a right way to put him in the mood. Working wives, for example, are one group that tends to practice what husband-pamperers preach. Accustomed, by and large, to soothing male tempers during the business day, they're trained, too, in budgeting their time. Typically, they tend to budget a good chunk of at-home hours for the provision of simple pleasures—decking out a hurry-up meal in "party" china and looking well-dressed when they come home, instead of greeting their husbands in strictly-for-the-children clothes.

Looking pretty, smiling prettier, stepping in with simple courtesies; it adds up to the art of pleasing a husband. Like making good coffee, it's one of those house-wifely arts that is easy to learn, quick to perform—and long on providing pleasure. And pleasure, say the professionals, is the word that counts for most. A man who's enjoying the little pleasures of life will tend to relax—and a relaxed husband is not only going to live longer—he's going to make his family happier, too!

Lewis Wald, of Caddy Court, has received a certificate representing six credit hours of course work done at the Summer Institute for High School Teachers of Science and Mathematics held recently at Randolph-Macon Woman's College. Wald is a teacher at Lake Taylor High School in Norfolk.

Carol Lynn Smith will enter the freshman class this September at Tusculum College, Greeneville, Tenn. Miss Smith, the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Edwin P. Smith of Five Points Road, is a graduate of W. T. Woodson High School.

Danny Bruce and Martin Ingram are two Virginia Beach students who are among 16 participating in Virginia Wesleyan College's work-study program.

The students are working as secretaries or maintenance personnel at the college or at community service jobs nearby. The program is a cooperative effort with financial participation by the college and the federal government. At this time, the college pays 15 per cent of the salary and the federal government pays 85 per cent. During the summer or vacation periods, students are allowed to work 40 hours per week in the work-study program. During the academic session they are allowed to work up to 15 hours per week.

Two Virginia Beach students are working off-campus on the same program. They are Diane Crandell and Carol Palmer.

Several area students at East Carolina University are among 18 per cent of the student body that were recently named to that institution's Dean's List.

Suede Requires Care

Sueded garments and suede trim on sweaters, blouses and dresses must be given proper care if they are to remain attractive, said Mrs. Barbara Laughlin, Virginia Tech clothing specialist.

Suede is a finish given to leather to create a velvety surface called a nap. A process of abrasion of the leather produces the effect, but also reduces the strength of the material and makes regular dry cleaning methods impossible.

Suede garments should be cleaned by specialists in leather care, Mrs. Laughlin said. Often garment labels give cleaning instructions and may state that the suede is guaranteed, provided it is cleaned by a particular company. If it is cleaned by another company, the manufacturer will no longer guarantee satisfaction. "It is to your benefit to follow these directions for cleaning and care as they appear on the garment," said Mrs. Laughlin.

Since suede must be cleaned professionally and is often re-conditioned and re-dyed before being returned, the care is expensive. While cleaning methods often remove the dye and, in the long run, make care-cost even more expensive.

However, Mrs. Laughlin said, there are several things which may be done at home to care for suede. For general soil removal, dry plastic sponges collect surface dirt and oil when brushed across the suede in a circular motion. An art gum eraser will also remove surface dirt to a degree.

Suede garments should be hung on padded hangers in a cool closet but should not be covered with a plastic bag since heat and lack of circulation will dry out the leather.

Suede garments can be pressed at home with a warm, dry iron on the wrong side by using brown paper between the iron and leather. Steam should never be used.

Suede should never be placed in water. If the wearer is caught in the rain, the garment should be allowed to dry naturally at room temperature. A plastic sponge will help restore the appearance once it is dry.

Virginia Schools Serve Breakfasts

It's back-to-school time, again. And when the school doors open, so do the doors to its cafeteria—for breakfast as well as lunch.

Breakfast? Yes. The importance of the morning meal to the overall education picture has been recognized by educators as well as nutritionists.

Of course, every Virginia school won't have a breakfast program many will. Last year, 38 Virginia schools took part in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's pilot breakfast program.

The breakfast program was set up by the Child Nutrition Act of 1966, the purpose of which is to furnish a breakfast for those students who are especially needy or who arrive to school hungry because they have been bussed to school from a long distance.

Since then studies in Virginia and other states across the nation have proven the value of this program. As a result, Congress has passed a bill that both increases funds for the program and extends it for another three years.

The improved behavior and learning ability of children that took part in the program last year has been noted by many educators. For many of the children, this was a new experience—they weren't accustomed to eating breakfast.

Another, and unexpected, benefit of the program was its socialization effect on many of the children. Several teachers in the Virginia schools that took part in the breakfast program have commented on the way some children who were withdrawn became more alert and receptive after they started eating breakfast in a group-type atmosphere. It is believed that many of these pupils rarely if ever sat down to eat as a family.

The attitude of the school food service personnel in these schools was good to enthusiastic. And, in at least one school, the mother of one first-grade student, helped out each morning on a volunteer basis.

Generally, the results of the breakfast program in Virginia schools have been: a decrease in the percentage of tardiness;

Paper Plates Can Keep Kids Busy

You can bring out the paper plates—if you're hungry for art.

Children with crayons can do more things with paper plates than adults ever imagine.

Take small white paper plates as a starter. Youngsters color the rims to become frames. Then in the center they may draw a friend's portrait, or a tree or a squirrel. The plates are a colorful gallery when hung up by loops of yarn. The "primitives" in your home may surprise you with the bold, free work they do.

When weather permits—brisk, windy days are ideal—the plates can become flying saucers decorated with crayon. Youngsters will want to get out to spin them through the air in mock battles and triumphant soaring flights. There'll be no need to scold the family out for exercise that day. One rule: all flying saucers must be picked up later and put in the wastebasket for security reasons. The neighbors will approve.

"Crayons may be a child's most versatile tools," according to Robert Hausman, marketing vice president of Whitman Publishing Company.

Those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. Asab Camp, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin D. Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Drew, Mr. and Mrs. George Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. James Hutchinson, Mrs. William B. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dougherty, Mr. and Youngsters supplied with crayons often like to do plate work because they are unlimited by lines or rules. Little girls may turn plain plates into fancy party plates. Little boys may draw the sun or a boat or a smiling or frowning face. All will sit back highly pleased at their achievement, you'll notice.

Paper plates can make a child feel festive any day.

Then, there's that once a month when a girl could use a good old-fashioned medicine.

Maybe you feel just plain bad then. Or maybe a little lonely and sad, like you could use a pair of arms around you.

Well, we have just the thing for this once a month. Lydia E. Pinkham Tablets. They're made with gentle, natural ingredients, including one that works to help relax tightened muscles that give you cramps. Plus a little iron that a girl could use at a time like this. And you don't run any chance of the kind of unpleasant side effects you'd could get from some of the newer drugs.

With an old-fashioned problem like this, couldn't you take an old-fashioned medicine.

It Was a Great Day to Be on Chesapeake Bay

If you want a real challenge in boating, you should compete in a Predicted Log Race.

There was one last Saturday, sponsored by the Tidewater Cruise Association, from Langley to a buoy just off the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel. The object of the race was to test the navigational skill of the yachtsmen.

Members of the Tidewater Cruise Association were given the course for the race about a month ago. Then each entry had to predict the time it would take him to travel the distance between each of six buoys, taking into account tides, currents and the unpredictable winds. Several entries from Langley made use of the computers there and plotted their courses scientifically.

There's just one little problem in the race. Boats are equipped with compass and revolution-per-minute gauges only. That includes no clocks. The boat reaching the last buoy closest to 4 p.m. and closest to its predicted log is the winner. This year it was David Warboys aboard the Miss Liberty with Kenneth Oliver as navigator. He was only 21 seconds off his predicted log.

Speed is not the important factor in the race. It is accuracy. The boats could leave Langley any time from 10 a.m.

The yachts reached the last buoy in close sequence.

on. Each carried an official observer who marked the time at each buoy.

As further evidence of their skill, all yachts arrived at the last buoy within five minutes.

The Tidewater Cruise Association was formed three years ago, and they have tried to have a race each year. However, two dates selected last summer were interrupted by hurricanes, so last year's race was held in June of this year. Clubs belonging to the association take turns hosting the racers.

Members include Bay Harbor Club, Warwick Yacht Club,

July they took a cruise together.

Art Cole was chairman of the event and Fred Rudiger, co-chairman.

"I think the races are important in making people more aware of where they're going," said Mrs. Cole, "especially if they're caught in a strong wind and blown off course."

"Lots of people don't even know what a predicted log is," commented Bill McCoy.

Races, incidentally, are held in alternating directions across the bay.

The second place winner was Dr. Bob Bosley of the Bay Harbor Club aboard the Doc's Off and John Palmer of the Map-ton Power Squadron aboard the Midge II. Fred W. Rudiger with his son, Fred Jr., on the Dink Dot "captured" the last place bucket.

Others participating were M. H. Eskew and D.G. Cuddihy on the San Bay; B.T. Thompson and K.S. Bates on the Elizabeth II; John Karns and Harry Reynolds on the Don B. III; and Bill Bright and Sam Hutchinson on the Pelican.

"I had it first," she said with a quick elbow into my ribs. Far be it from me to argue with her, since there was a whole stack of identical books on the table. This was my first used text book sale, and it was an experience, I learned one basic fact: it doesn't pay to be nice to anybody—even your own neighbors.

Still rubbing my sore ribs, I reached for the last speller on the table. "Sorry, I want that one," said the woman as she grabbed it off the table, looking over her shoulder and giving me a smile of triumph.

By this time I was also becoming irritated with the school too. Answers to earlier inquiries had been that the second grades were not changing any text books. However, I was faced with buying a brand new one because one they hadn't known about two weeks before had been sneaked in.

One woman was an old pro. She had all the markings of a veteran. While she held her place in the check-out line, her two children ran back and forth gathering up the needed books and bringing them to her.

Since I had only one used book and correct change, I thought perhaps someone would be kind enough to let me in the line and on to work. Not on your life. "Hey, you can't push in here," said the matronly fullback with five kids. So I went back to the end and waited while each person's total was figured and checks made out properly, then approved.

When I got near the head of the new book line, a woman approached dragging two kids. "Will you let Susie ahead of you? She's my neighbor, and she just needs one book so we can go home."

One book is right. One book for herself, that is. She also brought a list for her three brothers and sisters.

Just think, only six more years of this. I take that all back. I'm not even through for this year yet. One book had not arrived yet, so I'll have to return for that.

This time I'll be prepared.

It's Time for Bazaars Again

It's that season again.

Women of Galilee Episcopal Church had their first planning meeting Monday for their annual Christmas Bazaar. The date this year will be Nov. 13 and the hours from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Mrs. Porcher Gregg, chairman, said the women are trying to develop projects that will be "new, different and profitable." One of their ideas is to draft their husbands into making articles out of wood for a Men's Club project.

Other chairmen include Mrs. F.B. Koch, co-chairman; Mrs. Landon Hillard, co-chairman of the sewing booth; Mrs. C.M. Woodhouse, flowers; Mrs. C. Samuel Mason, ex-officio member; Mrs. John T. Goode III, white elephant; Mrs. James B. Oliver, chairman at large; Mrs. A.J. Canada, Christmas booth; Mrs. Edgar A. Tugman, luncheon; and Mrs. H.L. Walsh, pantry shelf.

Mrs. Koch and Mrs. Gregg look over a possible project for the Men's Club.

Pi Phi's Organize Alumnae

A Virginia Beach Alumnae Chapter of Pi Beta Phi has been formed and officers elected.

Officers are Mrs. George Jefferson Terry Jr., president; Mrs. M.A. Glass, vice president; Mrs. Butler Fuller, secretary; and Mrs. Earl McAffee, treasurer.

Other charter members were Mrs. F.W. Nagle, Mrs. Anne Barnes, Mrs. Richard W. Barnes, Mrs. Daniel DeHart, Mrs. Susan Dickinson, Mrs. William Lyons Jr., Mrs. William Maxwell and Mrs. J. Douglas Wilson.

Future plans call for a workshop to be held at the home of Mrs. Richard Barnes on Sept. 17 to fashion articles for the Pi Phi booth at the Pembroke Mall Fair in October.

Mrs. W.C. Dulin, a national officer, will install the chapter at a luncheon at the Capes in November.

Beverlee Woodhouse of Virginia Beach and Thomas Rainey of Dinwiddie County were named Southwest Extension District winners in the 4-H electric project competition during the 18th Annual Virginia 4-H Electric Congress Aug. 14-16 at Roanoke.

Local Girl Wins 4-H Award

Twelve district winners in the 4-H electric project were announced last night during the 18th annual 4-H Electric Congress in Roanoke last week. Among them was Beverlee Woodhouse, Virginia Beach, southeast district.

Miss Woodhouse is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ossie

R. Woodhouse. She has spent six years in 4-H work and is now 15 years old. Her project interests have included, in addition to electricity, clothing, home improvement, automotive care and dairy products. A junior leader, she has helped train girls in demonstration techniques and has won county, district and state demonstration contests.

Troubleshooters Do Just That

"Well, I was hanging off the end of the Steel Pier fixing a light bulb, and the wind was blowing. It blew the light I was about to touch onto the pier, and sparks started to fly. The wind was blowing me around, too, and if I had touched the bulb or fallen, I would have gotten killed either way."

Sounds like Lefty Drake, private investigator? He isn't quite in that line, but some of John Siler's experiences could really put Lefty to shame.

Siler has recently opened a shop by the name of Electrical Troubleshooters, Inc., which deals with all kinds of electrical problems; both commercial and domestic. "We never turn a call away if there is a way we can fix it," Siler said.

Siler's strangest job was repairing the Pungo Ferry Drawbridge. "It wouldn't close," he said; "so I had to go into the middle of the canal in a boat and fix it." It was the first time Siler ever had to go to work in a boat.

Siler was hired by an overseas contractor to repair the fire alarm system in one brand new NIKE site. "They had just built the thing, and the builders had installed the system, but it didn't work. It took me three months to get that thing ringing."

Siler first started in the mechanical business working with his father at Nix T. V. in Oceana. "I sold vacuum cleaners for two weeks, but then I quit. That just wasn't my cut," he said.

He then went to work for Nixon Electric as a helper. "That's where I got all my practical experience," he said.

A year and a half ago he left for San Diego for a government job troubleshooting all over the Marshall Islands. "It was nice experience," he reminisced, "and the government picked up the tab. I met a lot of interesting people."

Electrical Troubleshooters are on call 24 hours a day.

Diana Ross, Supremes Return

Back by popular demand, Motown Recording Artists' "Diana Ross & The Supremes" will return to the Virginia Beach entertainment scene for the Labor Day beach entertainment wrap up August 31, 1968, at the Virginia Beach Jr. High School Stadium. Also, featuring on the same bill with The Supremes will be Full Motown Orchestra and Chuck Jackson doing his current hit and many others.

The Supremes made their first appearance in Virginia Beach in 1965. They have continually, night after night, brought record attendance to the Forum in Los Angeles, California; Copacabana in New York; and Eden Roc in Miami Beach, to name a few. Some of The Supremes' current hits include: "Some Things You Never Get Used To," "The Happening." Plus The Supremes will be doing their million-dollar records such as "Where Did Our Love Go," "Baby Love," "I Want To Die," "Stop In The Name

Of Love."

Due to the large demand for seats for The Supremes, the concert will be held at the Virginia Beach Jr. High School Stadium located at 25th Street in the Beach Borough where the new ultra modern lighting and sound system will be used for the first time. To insure total refund in the event of rain, the promoters have purchased rain insurance which will guarantee refund in the event of inclement weather. Tickets may be purchased at the Dome Box Office.

Prevention Of Fires Stressed

Stop that fire before it starts! Mr. Milton R. Holland, chairman of the Fire Prevention Committee of the Virginia Beach Safety Council and Chief Fire Inspector for the city, outlined some key points to practice and put into use. The Safety Council meeting at 12 noon last Thursday, August 15, at Bow Creek, provided Mr. Holland with some eager listeners.

"Man is a natural accumulator," Holland noted, "unfortunately what he has a habit of accumulating is flammable material...magazines, old newspapers, furniture, books, and so on." In businesses, certain fire rules have been made to control the amount of flammable material in one area of a building. As one method of prevention and protection, there is a limitation required according to the rules. If a business must store large amounts of combustible products, then this must be separated by fire walls. As in business, good housekeeping is necessary to control your storage. Proper storage of gasoline, kerosene, and other inflammables is important; never place these items near a heat supply...water heater, gas heater, etc.

Once you think you have organized your home so that clutter is discarded, and storage of certain materials is secure, then you must plan as a family unit alternate escape routes from each room in your home. You or a member of your family may not be able to leave by the usual exit in case a fire starts. See that second story windows used for escape have a roof to climb to. In case of a fire, decide who will call the fire department. Many lives have been lost because people do not pre-plan their escape from their house. The front door is not always accessible.

October 6 through 12 is Fire Prevention Week, but don't wait until then to protect your family and your home...begin now and include your tiniest tot in the plans. He has a part to perform in saving his life, too.

Group Plans Roll Call

The newly reorganized Virginia Beach Barracks 1604 Veterans of World War I, wives and widows has announced plans to establish a National Roll Call for the Virginia Beach area.

Don Campen, 4225 Coffman Blvd., Chesapeake, Va., 2nd District Commander, said that the organization is attempting to compile a complete file of all veterans, widows and wives in this area.

"Most veterans are not aware of the many benefits that they are eligible to receive, due to the vast number of changes being made in veterans' legislation," said Campen.

In addition to counseling World War I veterans on legislation and benefits, the barracks also will try to determine the interest of veterans, wives and widows in joining Barracks 1604 or its Auxiliary.

Among the things for which these veterans are eligible are burial allotment, a grave marker and American flag, pensions, hospitalization and rest home care.

Campen said that there are about 1.3 million World War I veterans alive today.

Don't Be an Average Housewife

The average housewife spends one year out of every four doing chores in the kitchen... then there's the bedroom, bathroom, living room and den!

What's the answer? Don't be average! You can save time, feel fresher, even look better at the end of the day by applying these principles that psychologists and industrial experts have come up with.

Try a weekly schedule, it pays. For one thing, with everything down in black and white, the family can better see what must be done. Also, work can be divided more evenly daily or doubled up to give you a free day. But most of all, frenzied cleaning will be avoided.

Sit while working, advise home economists at West Virginia University. Standing takes 15% more energy than sitting. You can maintain your highest efficiency level longer by sitting at jobs concentrated in one area like dusting books, vacuuming furniture, cleaning drawers. For best results in your kitchen, use a regular kitchen chair at a working table surface 25 to 26 1/2 inches from the floor. A stool-at-counter arrangement is uncomfortable and taxing.

Don't radio for help. The findings of a series of tests show that working with a radio blaring can take up to 60% more energy.

Cool-it, say experts at John Hopkins who've proved that cool colors calm the body and reduce tension.

Don't make a mountain of work out of a little pile of dirt. A regular program of cleaning is the key to keeping your house bright and sparkling and avoiding back-breaking cleaning days.

Sweep carpets daily. A quick brush-up in heavy traffic areas with an easy-to-use carpet sweeper will remove dirt before it has a chance to be ground in to cut fibers and dull colors.

Vacuum clean weekly. An upright cleaner is best. Do a thorough job, especially in heavy traffic areas.

Shampoo twice a year. A periodic rug shampooing removes color-dimming dirt which can permanently damage carpet fibers. And today's do-it-yourself rug shampoos and applicators give us tools that can do the job just as effectively as any commercial cleaner. Frequent shampooing not only lengthens the life of a carpet, but also helps it keep its original color.

Beauty Treatments in a jiffy. Use one of the new upholstery shampoos to spruce up your furniture. For example, one manufacturer makes an aerosol upholstery shampoo that releases only foam, not liquid, thus reducing the danger of overwetting. The foam disappears in just a few minutes and then after drying you can vacuum or brush the upholstery to remove the residue of dirt and dried shampoo.

Bedmaking simplified. You're probably overworking if you change bed linen more than once a week. All you need to do each day is turn back the covers for an airing, smooth them out, then tighten them from the foot. Contour sheets will save you the most time. How much? Hotel administration experts at Cornell University estimate that such sheets save from one-third to one-

Fall is rapidly creeping upon us. September and October are the months when our winter grass is planted, as well as our permanent cool season grasses.

When we go into the numerous stores in the area that sell grass seeds, we see all kinds. To the general homeowner, this is very confusing.

Lawn type grasses are generally divided into two different types: warm season grasses which include bermuda grass, zoysia grass, and St. Augustine grass; and cool season grasses which include the fescues, bluegrasses and rye grass.

Rye grass is only for winter cover and color, and quickly dies when hot weather arrives next spring. It is not a permanent grass.

The bluegrasses, as a rule, do not do very well in this area, although occasionally one can see some growing. Recent research is very promising in this aspect, however.

Of the fescues, Kentucky 31 is the most hardy and most permanent in the area. It is not of a fine texture as are the bluegrasses, however. This grass is objectionable to many persons because it is clumpy. Clumpiness, however, can be eliminated by heavy seeding.

Have pockets, will travel. Use an apron with big pockets when you are "straightening up." You can collect out-of-place odds and ends (keys, pins, combs, letters) till you walk past where they belong.

Extra dust-cloths and lightweight cleaning supplies can also travel with you. And tote a large paper shopping bag for emptying ashtrays and wastebaskets.

A leather conditioner can reinvigorate the books in your den.

Do the floors last. Get into the habit of sweeping floors, both the carpet and hard-surfaced ones. New non-electric carpet sweepers can roll from carpet to floor, picking up lint and crumbs from both like a charm. All-purpose sweepers with twin brushes that pick up dirt coming and going, are typical of the relax-as-you-work methods for cleaning any home...even an adobe hacienda!

Who says a dainty and glowing creature like you has to overexert herself against dust and soil? This balanced approach leaves you with plenty of time for a luxury bath.

Order Peonies Now for Fall

(Editor's note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Judkins of the horticulture department at Virginia Tech.)

Peony roots should be ordered now for planting in September. Planting may start about a month before the average first frost date in your area. It should be completed by the time the first killing frost occurs.

The peony is native to China and Tibet and has been cultivated for over 2,000 years. French plantmen appear to have been the first gardeners to select and hybridize the modern peony.

The peony is an excellent flower for the perennial border. It will live for many years without replanting. Locate your peonies in the sun in a well-drained fertile soil. They will not bloom if planted in the shade.

Purchase large healthy divisions with three roots and three to five buds. The roots should be nearly one inch thick at the top, and four to six inches long. Divisions with only one or two buds will take an extra year or two before they reach the age of flowering.

Plant the root with the buds not more than two inches below the surface in well-drained soil. In heavy soil the buds should not be more than one inch deep.

Space your peony plants three to five feet apart to allow adequate room for vigorous growth. Set the roots firmly and water thoroughly. A light organic mulch should be applied to provide protection during the first winter.

Buy roots of named varieties from reliable sources. These roots are secured by dividing the clump of an old, well-established plant. The named varieties of peonies do not come true from seeds.

Add variety to your perennial border by planting some single or Japanese peonies. The flowers of these types are held erect on stiff stems and are more resistant to damage by wind than the double varieties.

They are very attractive and long-lasting when used for flower arrangements in the home.

Single peonies have five or more petals in a single or double row around a center cluster of conspicuous, yellow, pollen-producing stamens. They have a graceful form, similar to large buttercups.

The Japanese peony flowers are similar to the single type except that the center is composed of modified stamens which look like a thick cluster of colorful, thinly-shredded petals.

Try some of the single and Japanese varieties. They will add new variety to your garden and new interest to your flower arrangements.

Recorder Is 'Illusion Machine'

She is a blend of old and very new times. A young lady who has an eye on the future, but a link with the past.

Jane Hershey, a rising freshman at Tufts University in Boston, plays a recorder with a group led by Charles Hardin. First question: what is a recorder? It is a small, very primitive wooden flute. Recorders were first used in Renaissance times, along with lutes and other flutes.

Jane learned to read music by taking piano lessons from Hardin. Her father, Capt. M. M. Hershey, is in the Navy, and in the midst of her lessons, the family was transferred. "When we came back to the Beach," Jane explained, "I went to see the Hardins, and the recorder group was practicing. I was really impressed by the sound, so I started taking lessons."

That was two years ago, and since then, Jane has played in concerts with the group at such places as the Norfolk Museum, Williamsburg and Jamestown. Currently, her summer job is playing along with the Recorder Society of Williamsburg on the Capitol grounds, in Williamsburg.

Jane attended a workshop in Mexico last summer especially for recorder players from all over the U. S. and Europe. The workshop was held in Mexico City, a combination of Mexico's University of the Americas and the American Recorder Society. "Meeting people was one of the greatest things about the workshop," she said. "They were from all over the world, and all some of them did was play the recorder for a living."

Jane described them as "fantastic people. They are all young and mostly self taught, because since the recorder has just been revived within the past 50 years, there is no set way to teach or play it. The instruments are not alike, either."

She continued, "A good instrument really makes a difference. A recorder is an illusion machine. It's actually no more than a whistle, you can't get any loud or soft tones with it, you just have to make people enjoy the variations of a tune instead. It takes much more interpretation than most instruments."

"I get a sense of accomplishment out of playing a recorder, and, besides, it's fun!" she said. Jane enjoys Renaissance and Baroque music the most.

Jane graduated in June from First Colonial High School, with honors. At Jackson College, the woman's division of Tufts, she plans to major in literature. "The kind of major that includes people like Hemingway, Faulkner and T. S. Eliot; it's not really modern or contemporary. But," she said, "things change."

Jane hopes to find people in Boston, preferably students, with whom she can "sit around and play." She believes that there is "satisfaction in preparing for an audience, but it's just as much fun to play for yourself."

Capt. and Mrs. Hershey and two sisters, Susan and Liz, live on Rolfe Lane in Bay Colony.

Surfing Contests Fill Week

Surf or no surf, there will be two contests right in a row, starting this weekend.

The 6th Annual East Coast Surfing Championships will start Saturday morning at 7 a.m. on the north side of the Steel Pier. The contest, which is sponsored by the Virginia Beach Jaycees, is open to all members of either the Hawaiian, Western or Eastern Surfing Associations.

Corky Carroll, Mike Doyle, Greg Tucker and Rusty Miller are a few of the men's division entrants from the state of California. Carroll will try to capture the men's title from Newport Beach's Steve Bigler who shut him out in the finals of last year's contest.

Joyce Hoffman, considered one of the world's best women surfers, will try to walk off with a title in that division. A comparatively new sister team, Cathy and Cindy Lienhard, will compete against Miss Hoffman, along with locals and other national entrants.

Gary Propper, Florida's favorite son in the sun, will lead a caravan of other sunshine state surfers up to the Resort City, with hopes of victory in all divisions.

Many of the surfboard manufacturers will enter their competition teams in the events, as will Bob White and his local Wave Riding Vehicle Team, headed by Marty Keesecker.

Judges for the event will be Hoppy Schwartz, director of the Western Surfing Association, Rusty Huber, director of the East Coast Surfing Association and five other surfing-oriented judges.

Further following the ECSC will be the First Annual Navy East Coast Surfing Championships to be held at the Fleet Anti-Air Warfare Training Center at Dam Neck. This contest will begin on Aug. 26 and run through the 28th.

There are two categories open to all active duty military personnel, the Men's Open Division and the Women's Open Division.

Four categories will be open to all military dependents: Women's Open, Boy's Division (under 14), Men's Junior Division (15 to 17) and Men's Open Division (18 and over.)

Bob Holland, internationally known surfing star, and large Virginia Beach hopeful in the ECSC, will be the Tournament Director.

All applications must be filled with the Special Services Officer at Dam Neck prior to Aug. 23.

Further information may be obtained by calling the Special Services office at Dam Neck, 428-9050 (Ext. 405/412).

This scene depicting good friends enjoying themselves around a table of refreshments was only one of many as hundreds of persons of all ages gathered at Red Wing Park last Saturday for the Police Department's family picnic sponsored by Princess Anne F.O.P., Lodge #8.

Conference Plans Clinic

The Annual Southern Conference Football Officials Clinic will again be held Friday and Saturday, August 23-24 at the Americana Motel.

The entire staff of 40 officials including five new clock operators, will be in attendance to study, review, observe films and take tests on the 1968 Rules.

The two-day work session will be highlighted by the presentation of the rule changes for 1968, plus a discussion of the rules in general.

After the general session on Friday night, at which time Commissioner Jordan will address the group, much of the work will be conducted in workshop sessions in which the officials are grouped in schools by position. These workshops will be directed by the Crew Chiefs—Referees Nelson Harvey (Arlington, Va.), Umpires Nick Ogrovich (Matthews, N.C.), Linesmen Bill Michaels (Falls Church, Va.), Field Judges Harry Bushbar (Roanoke, Va.), Back Judges Dick Goodman (Richmond, Va.).

The Clinic will conclude Saturday night at the Conference Dinner at which time Merv Levy, President of the Southern Conference Football Coaches and Head Football Coach at the College of William and Mary, will speak to the group.

Sewing Program Success

A five-week sewing and millinery program sponsored by the Parks and Recreation Department of the City of Virginia Beach and held at Seatack Elementary School, was considered successful by department directors.

An exhibit was held recently to display the dresses and hats that the students had made at Seatack Elementary. Models for the show were: Misses Ida Benjamin, Dorothy Olds, Rosie Olds, Bernice Olds, Ruth Robinson, Dorothy Howard, Arlene Cornick, Roxanne Robinson and Anzella Shaw. Miss Jessie Woodhouse was the program moderator.

E.E. Brickell, superintendent of Virginia Beach Public Schools, and Harold Whitehurst, director of Parks and Recreation, were the key speakers for the show.

Mrs. Bernice Olds and Mrs. Sara Watkins were the course instructors. H. C. Benjamin, activities instructor, was in charge of the program.

Another exhibit will be held at Pembroke Mall on Sept. 18, 19 and 20.

'Ghostly' Comedy Opens

The supernatural comedy "Lo and Behold!" opens at Wedgewood Theatre, located just outside of Williamsburg, Tuesday, Aug. 27. The John Patrick comedy will run every Tuesday through Saturday through Sept. 28 with buffet at 7 p.m. and curtain at 8:30. Sunday matinees are scheduled for Sept. 1 and 22, buffet at 1:30, curtain at 3.

"Lo and Behold!" is the story of Nobel Prize-winning author Milo Alcott, who has lived for many years on a remote island to favor an ailing heart. Tired of this, he leaves enough money in his will to perpetuate his house as a sanctuary for his spirit, gorges on a large dinner, and dies happily.

Unfortunately for him, happily for the audience, three other ghosts decide to haunt his house—an Indian squaw who was pushed off Lover's Leap, a bigoted Southern belle and a mad musician. To make matters worse, his maid is mistaken for his illegitimate daughter and she falls in love with Milo's protegee. Then, the spirits really rise!

BADGES & BANTER

By Les Lehigh

Bill Spencer, Chief of the Davis Corner Volunteer Fire Department, made a fine showing in his first bid for an office in the Virginia State Firemen's Association. Spencer, who had the full support of all fire departments of Virginia Beach, finished second in his bid for the office of Association 3rd Vice President.

Congratulations are in order for three men of the Virginia Beach police department whose promotions have been announced by Capt. W.W. Davis, police chief designate. Detective Sgt. C.W. Simmons and 2nd Precinct Sgt. Buddy Rogers have been promoted to lieutenant, while traffic patrolman Mickey Beane was promoted to sergeant.

Another reminder to give your support to the Virginia Beach Borough Rescue Squad in their fund raising drive which is continuing throughout the rest of this month. Remember your donations will assist the squad in maintaining their readiness to be of service in any emergency.

Fred Quist, Chief of the Chesapeake Beach Volunteer Fire Department, says the unit will again provide ambulance service at all of the home games of the Norfolk Neptunes again this year. Quist says the unit has placed ambulances and emergency medical equipment at Foreman Field in Norfolk free of charge for the past several seasons as a courtesy to the Neptunes and fans of the team.

The Princess Anne F.O.P., Lodge #8 softball team made a good showing in their first entrance into the Norfolk Police Softball League. The Princess Anne team finished in second place with a season record of eight wins and five losses. The team hopes to enter the Norfolk City League competition next year. The team played the Norfolk Police Allstars last Monday in a doubleheader. Although they lost both games by scores of 12-7 and 12-9, home runs were hit by L.C.D. Hathaway, Jr., who slammed one in the first game, and officer E.L. Jackson, who hit two homers in the second game.

Approximately 400 people of all ages converged on Red Wing Park on General Booth Blvd. last Saturday for the Virginia Beach police department annual picnic sponsored by the Princess Anne F.O.P., Lodge #8. The event was heralded by many department officers and men as the best ever staged. Before the day was over those on hand had consumed 900 pieces of chicken, 100 pounds each of potato salad and baked beans, 113 dozen individual servings of ice cream, 30 pounds of hot dogs, 45 pounds of barbecue, 35 watermelons, 25 cantaloupes, and 12 tanks of soft drinks. (BURP!!!)

Paul "Pop" Jones, of the Ocean Park Volunteer Fire Department, has offered a challenge to other members of the Virginia Beach Fire Department. "Pop", who lists his age as being in the 70's, says he will take on any fellow firefighter over the age of 50 in a surfing contest. Any takers should be advised however "Pop" is quite an avid surfer, and we understand has been undergoing some serious training.

Capes Takes Third Place

The Capes Swimming and Diving Team took third place in the final rounds of the combined meets with the five competing clubs.

Ahead of the Capes was first place winner Churchland Swim and Rocket Club and Mallory Swim Club of Norfolk.

The Princess Anne Country Club and the Norfolk Yacht Club and Country Club finished behind the Capes with fourth and fifth places, respectively.

Diving judges for the meet were: Ann Karmitschnig from the Capes, Mittle Jordan from the Princess Anne Country Club, Prissie Small from Mallory, Adele Lehnert from Churchland and Bob Hatch from the Norfolk Yacht and Country Club.

Westinghouse Presents Award

An award of excellence has been made to Herbert L. Kramer, developer of Lake Edward West Town Houses, by Westinghouse Electric Corporation.

The award is a plaque. A similar award naming Lake Edward West, Inc., was hung in the model town house.

The presentations were made last week by W.H. Sickels, of Philadelphia, Westinghouse regional construction manager. Both awards were signed by D.C. Burnham, president of Westinghouse.

Also present for the ceremony at the town houses was E.W. Michel, of Washington, D.C., Westinghouse Corporation construction representative, and Virginia Beach Councilman Larry Marshall in whose borough the townhouses are located.

The award is only the third made by Westinghouse to builders—the others being in Atlanta and Seattle.

Present plans for Lake Edward West call for 302 townhouses, of which 130 are in the finishing stages or have been finished. Ultimate expenditure in Lake Edward West will run from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000.

Fish, Seasickness Occupy Youngsters

Eleven boats sailed from the new Virginia Capes Marina in the Resort City on Monday, with youngsters from areas encompassed by the Southeastern Tidewater Opportunity Project (STOP), into the Chesapeake Bay for a day of fun, fishing, seasickness and smiles.

STOP sponsored the fishing trip along with the Tidewater Charter Boat Association, the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce and several civic and private organizations.

The trip had originally been planned for Aug. 12, but a cold front moved into the area and boating was hazardous. Most of the children cannot swim.

The moderate southeast wind was too much for many of the 450 underprivileged kids, and seasickness plagued at least one on every boat. About 20 children were picked up by Coast Guard rescue boats and taken ashore because of the rocking boats, but they were well and happy when the boats returned to the docks.

The only serious incident occurred when an unidentified girl suffered an epileptic seizure on the way back to the Lynnhaven Inlet. She was taken to the General Hospital of Virginia Beach where she was treated and released.

The anglers returned to the docks at about 12:30 where buses carried them to Little Creek Amphibious Base for a communal fish fry. The navy personnel had cut several large oil drums in half, and when filled with oil, each resembled a giant deep-fry pan. The stoves were set up on the Chesapeake Bay shoreline in front of the Enlisted Men's Beach Club.

Marr Sees No Hurry For State Inspection

The date of an inspection of the Virginia Beach city jail by members of the Virginia Division of Corrections remains uncertain.

The inspection had been requested by City Sgt. John E.

Council Approves Bonds

City Council Monday raised the limit on non-referendum bonds that can be issued by the city by approving an ordinance that allows the issuance of an additional $2 million in public improvement bonds and $2 million in water and sewer bonds.

The doubling of the allowable bonds issued each year without consent of the voters was made possible through a City Charter change passed by the 1966 Virginia General Assembly.

The new public improvement bonds are earmarked for land acquisition and completion of Rudee Inlet marina facilities, recreational facilities, to include the municipal golf course on land donated by the State from Camp Pendleton, acquisition of land and improvement of municipal facilities at City Hall, site improvement for a community college when a site is chosen by the end of the year, a new public health center in Bayside and additional street and highway improvements.

No date was set for the sale of the bonds. The sale is expected to be advised when the money market is most favorable.

The sewer and water bonds will be used mostly for the (See "Council," p.2)

Marr in order that he could "clear up questions of security and jail operation with the general public" following the discovery of a pistol and ammunition in the maximum security section of the jail and just prior to the escape of three men from the jail after they overpowered jailer Fred Harrell.

"Those boys in Richmond know about the operation of the jail, so why should they break their necks coming down here?" said Marr of the forthcoming investigation.

Police are continuing their around the clock search for Leroy Boone, Cleveland Davis, and Elton Askew who fled the jail last Wednesday morning. Investigators said that although they continue to check out leads supplied by persons believing they have seen the men, and are searching wide areas, no clue has been uncovered concerning their whereabouts.

Marr said Harrell had gone upstairs in the jail about 11:15 a.m. on routine duties and check of the jail. At 11:30 a.m. according to Marr, Mrs. Madge Ewell, his assistant in charge of women prisoners, "knocked on the door to have someone let her out of the jail cell block and said she had gotten word through a trustee that a jailer was locked-up upstairs."

"I called the dispatcher by phone although the jail is equipped with a buzzer to notify the police immediately in an emergency, and told him they had my jailer locked up and to send help. We had two policemen here within two minutes, and this is when we discovered they had opened the front door and escaped," said Marr.

Since the escapees took a full set of keys to the jail from Harrell, Marr noted that

"ordinarily Harrell would not have had the keys," Marr said, "but he had to open back doors to let trustees put out the trash, open front doors on his rounds, and use some of the keys in letting workmen in and out of the building who were installing new equipment in the jail kitchen."

Marr added, "Nothing else is missing and there is no indication anything else is back in there."

Concerning whether anything could have been obtained earlier by anyone confined to the jail, Marr said, "I do know they had gotten to a piece of iron about a foot long when they pulled a toilet off a wall in a room and found a piece of metal left there during construction of the jail in the '40s."

Marr indicated this metal may have been used "by one of those fellows who broke out a 'peep glass,' but I didn't take a warrant out for him because it's difficult to get a conviction for destroying public property."

Regarding reports of items being lowered from upstairs windows of the jail by inmates, Marr said, "This was done by a prisoner confined by himself in one cell. The prisoner had broken a screen off a window and made a rope out of pieces of bed sheet and tied it to a magazine and tossed it out a window to an area, enclosed by a seven-foot fence, which is used to hang clothes on the line."

Marr produced the magazine, still tied with the length of (See "Jail," p.5)

The condition of Becky Godwin, 14, daughter of Virginia Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr., who was struck by lightning on the beach at Camp Pendleton Sunday afternoon, was still listed as critical Wednesday.

Hospital bulletins issued from the General Hospital of Virginia Beach through the Governor's office in Richmond began to show some cautious optimism Tuesday but stated no significant changes Wednesday. Hospital authorities said they thought she could remain on the critical list for at least the next few days.

"When one is on the critical list, it's touch and go," said W. Earl Willis, administrator of the hospital. "Of course, it can go either way."

Dr. Robert Robertson, Miss Godwin's physician, has continued to confer with Governor Godwin at length before any public reports are issued. The Governor has remained in seclusion at his cottage at Camp

M.M. Interest Pleases Downing

First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing of Newport News is in Chicago for the Democratic national convention this week, and he has an active interest in the platform adopted.

Downing was one of several lawmakers who addressed the platform committee last week in Washington urging the adoption of a strong plank for a rejuvenated merchant fleet for the United States.

fleet is so small and poorly supplied it could not meet the needs.

Downing was in Virginia Beach last Friday just prior to his trip to Chicago. He spent most of the day meeting constituents to discuss various matters and problems with them. The appointments were set up ahead of time by his administrative aide in Virginia Beach, Mrs. Lib Heater.

On the subject of Vietnam Downing said the country still has to place faith and hope in the Paris peace talks, and that he expected the Democratic platform to reflect this thinking, along with continued efforts to meet the needs of the American and South Vietnamese troops there.

"Anything short of that would be a morale breaker," he said. While he said there is a definite division of sentiment about what to do in Vietnam, he said he believes the eventual answer will probably be to train more and more South Vietnamese to be self-sufficient.

Downing said he fully expected Vice President Humphrey to be nominated by the convention and that Gov. John Connally of Texas would be a good running mate. He said he thought the Texas governor would be geographically good for the ticket and that he is an able politician.

During his swing through his constituency Downing said he noted strong support for the third party candidacy of former Alabama Gov. George Wallace. While he said most of the support seemed to come from the rural areas, he noted he was surprised at the show of strength. He added however, that he thought the Wallace support in Virginia would hurt Richard Nixon more than the Democratic ticket.

Most of the questions came from representatives of the interior states," said Downing. "I consider this important since they all seem somewhat surprised that our merchant fleet has fallen so low. They all wanted to know how this was permitted to happen."

Downing told them that President Johnson had earlier agreed to a $200 million bill for ships on a program of 80 ships a year for five years, but that because of money problems and budget cuts forced on the Administration, the actual appropriation has never been made. The President indicated the money would not be forthcoming.

Downing added that another bill is now pending, however, which would accomplish much the same aims.

He said, "The reason I went before the platform committee was to let it be known that we believe a strong merchant fleet should be one of our national goals of the new Administration."

Downing pointed out that the last Administration that actually favored the merchant marine and strongly supported it was the 1936 administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The Congressman also said that it is the merchant ships that played such an important part in supplying troops not only during World War II and Korea but also today in Vietnam. He said if supplies were needed on another front, the merchant Pendleton with Mrs. Godwin, who is recuperating from recent surgery. She was released from a Norfolk hospital last Friday.

A contingent of State Police has manned the gate at Camp Pendleton to keep out all those except official visitors. The Governor flew to Virginia Beach late Sunday night, about eight hours after the accident. He had just arrived in Chicago for the Democratic National convention when he was informed of the incident.

While he has visited with his daughter several times daily it is not known whether there has been any recognition. Tuesday doctors reported there was some awareness of her surroundings.

The Governor has continued to keep in close contact with the Virginia delegation in Chicago, according to reliable sources. While he turned his chairmanship of the delegation officially over to Ralph Louk of Fairfax County, he has been in daily contact with Democratic National Committeeman Sidney S. Kellan of Virginia Beach and other members of the delegation.

Earlier it was expected that Godwin's name would be entered into nomination for the presidency as a favorite son, but this was changed by Tuesday when the chairman of the convention was not notified by the deadline that a nominating speech would be made. The delegation was then expected to give the majority of its support, if not all of it, to Vice President H. Humphrey.

Hospital authorities credit the emergency aid given to Miss Godwin by three National Guard captains on the beach and the aid given by members of the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad with being the probable reason the child lived until she could reach the hospital and semi-normal breathing could again be started.

Reportedly Miss Godwin was wearing a metal head band while standing in the shallow water when she was struck by a lightning bolt from an offshore storm. The impact also knocked down a Godwin family friend, Grady Norfleet, 54. He was unconscious for a short time but revived on the beach.

Two Killed
In 4 Hours

Virginia Beach recorded the seventh and eighth traffic fatalities of the year within a four hour period Tuesday night. Both of the fatalities were the result of single car accidents.

Police investigators said Philip R. Pinching, 33 of Faragut Circle, was fatally injured when the auto in which he was a passenger went out of control on Oceana Blvd. The driver of the car identified as Dennis Dale Briggs, attached to the USS Donner, was listed in satisfactory condition after being taken to Portsmouth Naval Hospital with head and hand injuries.

Witnesses told police the car went out of control near the NAS Oceana Jet Observation point striking two utility poles, snapping one in half, careened and over- and then rolled over and hit a tree.

Pinching was listed as the seventh traffic fatality of the year as a result of the 4:40 p.m. accident.

Four hours later, at 8:40 p.m., a Navy Chief attached to the USS Ray was fatally injured when his auto struck a parked car on Bow Creek Blvd. Police identified him as James G. Pauley, 34, of Deer Park Drive. The accident occurred near the intersection with Plainsman trail, approximately two blocks from Pauley's home.

Another accident, about the same time of the second fatality, which occurred in the Princess Anne Plaza section of the city injured two persons. Police spokesmen said Jettie L. Schewler, 34, Capitol Hill Lane, was injured in a two-car collision at the intersection of Kings Arms Road and Old Towne Lane. She was reported as being in fair condition at Virginia Beach General Hospital.

The driver of the second car, identified as Billy R. McHenry, 19, of North Landing Road, was treated and released at the hospital. Police investigation indicated the impact of the collision drove one of the vehicles into the living room of the Old Towne Lane home of George F. Sutton resulting in an estimated $7,000 damage to the dwelling. None of the occupants of the home were injured.

W. Earl Willis read one of the official hospital bulletins concerning Becky Godwin's condition.

Planning Commission Will Meet at Dome

The City Planning Commission is moving its public hearings to the Dome from the new Municipal Court Building at Princess Anne.

The next regular public hearing is scheduled for 3 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 3, at the Civic Center, Pacific Avenue and 19th Street, because of scheduling problems and because of the accessibility of the Dome.

The docket is another long one. There are 31 new items and a few deferred from last month, all of which is expected to consume another complete afternoon.

An application for a high-rise complex of high-rise apartments, shops, business offices and a motel to be built by Thalia Wayside Corp. was deferred for 30 days at the August meeting until a use permit for 458 apartments within the complex could come before the commission. They will be built on Virginia Beach Blvd. and Thalia Drive.

The project is expected to cost between $18 and $20 million. The apartments are expected to rent between $195 and $400 a month, and should be begun next spring, according to Richard Bell, vice president of the corporation.

An application by United Mortgage Servicing Corp. will seek (See "Planning," p.2)

Weekend Is Not the End

The World's Largest Resort City is getting ready for its last major weekend of the 1968 summer season. If the weather holds, it should be a sunny, fun weekend with everything under control.

According to the hotel and motel owners, if reservations that have already been received are filled, Labor Day Weekend will be one of the biggest that Virginia Beach has witnessed. Restaurants are also expecting capacity houses for the weekend.

The Virginia Beach Police are standing ready to handle traffic problems and the overflow of tourists on the streets. They are also prepared to handle parking problems, which have been increasing with the tide of tourism coming into the beach.

Although Labor Day weekend is thought of as the official end of the tourist season in Virginia Beach, it is not, in actuality, the end at all.

The hotels and motels do not board up their windows and lock the doors, but instead, they offer lower rates to visitors who wish to come to the Resort City for the fall months. The lower rates are especially good for a budgeting family who can still enjoy warm water and a balmy climate until October.

The City of Virginia Beach will present Diana Ross and the Supremes as their last bash of the summer season, and there will be annual fireworks display at Seaside Amusement Park.

Although the Labor Day weekend means back to school and back to work for many, Virginia Beach will continue to stay open for those who wish to enjoy the city's fall splendor.

Master Plan Awaited

Dredging for the proposed small craft canal to the site of old Kemps Landing will not be undertaken until a master plan is finalized, Director of Public Works Charles Kiley told the Parks and Recreation Commission Tuesday.

The canal, long under consideration as a recreation facility, would re-establish the old one that once brought shipping from the Elizabeth River to the old landing at Kempsville. Kiley said that his investigation so far indicates a series of artificial islands, two or three acres each, in the middle of the canal for pedestrian recreation would be more practical than attempting to obtain land on either side of the canal. The islands, he said, would be connected to each other and the mainland.

Kiley said he had received "favorable" reactions from Fairfield Development and Carlsblame Farms representatives who have subdivisions along the canal, which is not now of boat depth.

Harold Whitehurst, parks and recreation director, said he had received a letter from Charles Gardner, president of the Virginia Beach Inlanders Association, asking for a meeting with him and commission chairman, Mario Rignato, to help co-ordinate recreational facilities for tourists and residents alike.

The suggestion was made that time clocks be put on the lights at city tennis courts to enforce at 11 p.m. curfew. Until the meeting Tuesday there had been no limit on tennis playing. The commission had received complaints recently about players using the courts until 2 a.m. and lights being left on all night.

There will be a display of types of adult classes offered by the Parks and Recreation Department at Pembroke Mall on Sept. 18-20. Those interested may register for fall classes at that time.

Problems Still Plague Rudee Inlet

Rudee Inlet is in deep again with its sandy problem.

It seems that the sand trap, dredged at approximately 18 feet, is not doing the job it was supposed to. Instead of sand seeking the lowest level, which would be the 18 foot pit, it is filling up the channel used to enter the inlet.

Dredging operations are going on, but only once per day. The operations were cut back from two a day when the pumps were putting inferior material on the beach.

An eight-inch pipe was supposed to move into the inlet to pump the overflowing sand onto the south bank of Croatan Beach. And then there is the Rudee Inlet Marina. If private help can't be found soon, the Rudee Inlet Authority will have to go the cost of the marina and the newly-constructed bridge on their own.

The cost of the marina could run between $500,000 and $581,000, depending upon how much work has been completed initially.

Authority members are hoping that the marina can be open for operation next summer. Construction would have to start in late September or early October in order to have the area ready for use by next summer, according to L. Dean Curtis, Rudee project coordinator.

The Army Corps of Engineers will make a study of the city's approximate 38-mile shoreline, which is expected to be completed in late fall or early winter.

A $4.6 billion public works appropriations bill recently passed by Congress, the Norfolk district of Engineers received $31,000 for the study. In the same bill, $40,000 was designated for continuing a study of possible canal systems in the city for recreational and drainage purposes.

According to C. F. Robin, chief of the engineering department in Norfolk, the most recent appropriation was the last installment of a total $138,000 which was allocated to cover the cost of the study.

Downing

Before he left for Chicago he said he thought a positive step toward rebuilding the merchant marine would be taken.

"We received a good reception before the committee," said Downing. "The group we talked to was the best attended panel of the three meeting there."

Downing has long been advocate of a strong merchant marine for this country as a "second line of defense." He is a ranking member of the Congressional committee which oversees the fleet.

"Most of the questions came from representatives of the interior states," said Downing. "I consider this important since they all seem somewhat surprised that our merchant fleet has fallen so low. They all wanted to know how this was permitted to happen."

Downing told them that President Johnson had earlier agreed to a $200 million bill for ships on a program of 80 ships a year for five years, but that because of money problems and budget cuts forced on the Administration, the actual appropriation has never been made. The President indicated the money would not be forthcoming.

Downing added that another bill is now pending, however, which would accomplish much the same aims.

He said, "The reason I went before the platform committee was to let it be known that we believe a strong merchant fleet should be one of our national goals of the new Administration."

Downing pointed out that the last Administration that actually favored the merchant marine and strongly supported it was the 1936 administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Residents Fight Back At Zoning

Approximately 120 Virginia Beach residents along with Planning Director Patrick L. Standing have filed suit in Circuit Court against the Board of Zoning Appeals over the strip of land from 78th to 89th streets formally known as Holly Avenue.

The residents and Standing are asking for a writ of certiorari to review the decision of the board and that the court grant a stay proceedings upon the decision permitting the Lake George Corp. to subdivide 48 lots on the undeveloped strip of near-oceanfront property.

Lake George Corp. representative Garland M. Layton says that the board's action merely granted a variance.

The suit, filed by lawyer Grover C. Wright, Jr., cited grounds that the board did not have jurisdiction to hear and decide the matter because it involved no appeal. He said that "the applicant is attempting to use Holly Avenue for purposes other than a right of way contrary to law."

Traffic was heavy last weekend as it is most weekends on Pacific Avenue. Just one more headache for the police was this four-car rear end collision.

'D' Coffee House To Remain Open

The "D" coffee house on Atlantic Avenue, in Virginia Beach will remain open for business at least through the end of this tourist season. That's the official word from the Session of the governing body of First Presbyterian Church, operators of the coffee house.

The meeting was held Monday night after a raid was made on the establishment Friday night by members of the vice squad of Virginia Beach police, and a bag of marijuana was found in a rest room there.

The coffee house was founded in 1965 by assistant pastor William Russell. Russell said that two seminary students, Bill Jordan and Buck Thomson have been managing the operation this summer.

He added that at his direction an "open door policy" has been maintained at the coffee house so that it could serve its original purpose. That purpose, according to Russell, is to serve as a "primary witness to those alienated to the church in general, not just the Presbyterian church."

The coffee house is a non-profit operation, where no alcoholic beverages are served and entertainment is provided by young singers and band groups.

"We don't preach to them there," said Russell. "But our managers sit and talk with those who come there, and hopefully they'll discuss their problems."

A number of those have appeared in church, sometimes in attire not considered proper for church, but they have attended services, Russell said.

The operation of the coffee house is not necessarily a happy circumstance for all 1,000 members of the church. Russell admits this, but says those who approve outnumber those who disapprove. John Lyles, pastor of the church, has taken a neutral stand on the matter, but the Session has agreed to re-evaluate the coffee house before next session. Russell leaves Virginia Beach Sept. 1 for a new post in Richmond.

It is believed that the coffee house will operate next summer, if not by First Presbyterian, then by either the Presbyterian Church which now contributes $8,000 to the operation or by another ministers' group.

Russell said that "hippies" often came into the coffee shop, but that they could not really be excluded if the ministry was to be effective. But he added that some persons have been ejected when they asked for drugs or appeared to be on some type of drug.

"You take risks in this sort of thing," said Russell. "you leave yourself wide open to abuse and misuse of the operation. Some are bound to try to take advantage of you."

He added that when a group undertakes to work with alcoholics they have to expect a backslider once in a while. "It's the same with us," he said. "While we have a lot of well-adjusted persons who come in, we also are trying to communicate with the others, and occasionally we fail."

Saturday night police were patrolling the area closely, according to Russell, and he said that the police had been harassing the operators and customers of the coffee house.

There is no evidence of marijuana actually ever having been sold or passed at the "D", and no arrests have ever been made there, Russell added that police patrol the place constantly.

Russell said he had met with Second Police Precinct Capt. R. C. Davis for about a half hour recently and that the meeting was pleasant but that the two could not reach common ground. Davis, while making no official comment on charges of harassment or of charges of indication he had said he would close the place down, also said the meeting was affable and that he thought there had been a little better understanding on both parts at the conclusion.

While the "D" continues to be a center of controversy, police officials admit there is a problem with the "hippies and service personnel who are part-time hippies with close haircuts and shined shoes".

Up until this year the "D" had not been involved in the drug matter. In fact, last summer one reported case of a problem there was turned over to the police immediately.

Checks Returned

About $1 million in undeliverable checks is returned to the Veterans Administration each year, E. P. Brosnan, Manager of the Roanoke VA Regional Office, said.

This means that some 12,000 persons miss at least one payment of their monthly compensation, pension, or other VA benefit, Brosnan said. In some instances, failure to receive a monthly check results in a hardship to the family involved. To help solve this problem, Brosnan advises all recipients to give the VA and the Post Office Department their new address, including Zip Code, when they move.

Camper Awarded

Camper Neil Gregory, son of Mrs. Margaret N. G. Fenner, of Holly Road was presented the coveted Mark Clark Award by Gen. Hugh P. Harris, president of The Citadel, recently at graduation exercises marking the end of the second 1968 session of The Citadel Summer Camp for Boys. The Mark Clark Award is given for excellence in sports, physical fitness, tournaments, manners, and attitude. Physical activity through the medium of sports receives primary emphasis at the Camp, but the program accents basic principles of duty, patriotism, honor, and religion. Since it was founded in 1957 as a youth-development program for boys 11 to 15 years old, The Citadel Summer Camp for Boys has been a pattern for other camps across the nation.

Two hundred and sixty-one boys from 20 states were in attendance during second session which opened July 7.

Prepare For School

Over 30 states will be represented among the approximately 400 new teachers employed by the Virginia Beach School System for the 1968-69 school year.

The school staff this year will have approximately 1,832 teachers, supervisors, and administrators. Of this number, 1,774 will be classroom teachers or staff members directly involved with the classroom.

Of the 400 teachers new to the system, 115 are graduates of Virginia colleges and 77 graduates of North Carolina Colleges. Old Dominion College leads the Virginia list of colleges represented in the new teacher ranks with a total of 45. Longwood College contributes 20 new teachers and the College of William and Mary, Washington, and Madison each contribute nine teachers to the system.

East Carolina University is the North Carolina College sending the greatest number of new teachers to the Virginia Beach system. Atlantic Christian College and the University of North Carolina share the second position in number of graduates teaching in the system. Forty teachers who have previously taught in the Virginia Beach System are returning to the teacher ranks this fall.

The new teachers will begin the 1968-1969 school term with three days of orientation.

On Tuesday, Sept. 3, all teachers will report to their respective schools to meet with their principals. The first day of orientation will be devoted to faculty meetings and classroom work.

All new teachers will meet on Wednesday, Sept. 4, at 8 a.m., at Princess Anne High School for the annual School Board Breakfast for new staff members. The School Board, Administrative and Resource Staffs will be presented to the teachers at this meeting.

From 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., all Elementary teachers will meet for an in-service program. Elementary teachers will receive meeting place assignments from their principals on Sept. 3.

Secondary teachers will meet in their individual schools from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

In the afternoon the program will be reversed with elementary teachers meeting in individual schools while secondary teachers meet for in-service programs.

Orientation will end on Thursday, Sept. 5, with staff meetings with resource personnel, school departmental and grade level meetings, and further opportunity for teachers to work on individual materials in preparation for students who will arrive on Friday, Sept. 6, for an abbreviated school day.

Kids' Week Is Sandy Success

Children's Week, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, was a sunny, sandy, splashy success.

The King and Queen of the week were David Runyon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Runyon of Oceana and Miss Paige Greve, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Greve of Kalamazoo, Mich.

The week was sponsored under the Chamber's Events Committee, which is headed by Mrs. Laura Lamb, Chairman for the event was Robert Janz, and co-chairman was Mrs. George Leary.

Tom Kukura of Pittsburgh, Pa. and Robin Beller of Richmond won the Sea Lore Safari, in which the winner was chosen by the number of mole crabs caught. Tom and Robin received hermit crab prizes. There were 85 participants in the contest.

Jeff North, of Charlottesville, Va. copped the Miniature Golf Tournament title from 31 other participants. Jeff shot a 42 which was 6 under par. He received a $5 first prize.

Cynthia Greer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Greer of Knoxville, Tenn., and Daniel Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Catherine Boyd of Long Island, N.Y. were the winners of the Sand Castle Contest. There were 13 contestants in this event.

The Pied Piper? No, it's really Mrs. Katherine Guthrie leading a "Sea Lore Safari" during Children's Week here.

Other Children's Week functions included a Norfolk Tour to Treasure Island with 122 passengers, a Square Dance, with 350 attending, Sing Out

A "red carpet welcome" is being extended to H. Bates Reese who is returning to limited duty at the 3rd Police Precinct Justice of the Peace office, J.P. Reese had been confined to the hospital, followed by a recuperation period at home, after a heart attack. Everyone wishes him well in the future.

A Fraternal Order of Fire Fighters, comprised of men of volunteer and paid fire departments, has been organized in Virginia Beach. Tony Ventura has been elected president and more information about the organization will be released in the near future.

Three Virginia Beach police officers will assume duties at the Bayside Borough precinct next week, on transfers from the 1st Precinct at Princess Anne Courthouse. The officers involved are A.J. Gustin, A.T. Freeman, Jr., and J.G. Butler.

The 13th annual convention of the Association of J.P.'s of Virginia was held last week in Norfolk, with many of the Virginia Beach J.P.'s in attendance. Leroy T. Cheshire, of Norfolk, past first vice president, was elected incoming association president, while past president, Honorable W.R. Lumpkin of Hanover County was elected chairman of the executive board. A.L. Rodgers, Virginia Beach Chief J.P., who said the convention was a great success, made a bid for the 1971 convention to be held in Virginia Beach.

A welcoming hand is being extended Chief Boatwain Mate Fred A. Holloway on his coming to Virginia Beach as commanding officer of the Beach Shore Patrol Detachment. We wish Holloway great success as he assumes duty in relief of retiring CPO George C. Queen.

Officer K.R. Terry wishes to thank the many police, military and civic officials and residents of the Bayside Borough who were on hand at the 3rd Police Precinct, along with expressing his appreciation for the huge cake supplied for the event, on the first of this month to help him celebrate his birthday. Terry says he was somewhat reluctant to express his gratitude earlier since the day coincided with the celebration of the precinct's first anniversary.

Petitions Ask Change In Laws

Petitions for redress of grievances, requesting reconsideration and nullification of recent decisions by the United States Supreme Court are being circulated throughout the region by the Princess Anne F.O.P. Lodge #8.

The petitions point to decisions "which appear to be weighed lopsidedly in favor of the criminal elements in our society" resulting in placing an increasing burden and restrictions on law enforcement.

In addition to requesting action on the part of the U.S. Supreme Court, the petitions also call upon Congress "to amend the United States Constitution in order to provide an immediate remedy which is so vital to the public welfare of the United States in this current crisis."

The petitions are being sponsored by the Grand Lodge of the National Fraternal Order of Police, and are being circulated on a national, state and local level. The petitions are being made available to civic and fraternal organizations as well as F.O.P. lodges.

Any organization or group who wishes to obtain a copy of the petition should make their request through Virginia Beach Police Headquarters at Princess Anne Courthouse.

It's Up to Voters

The question of liquor by the drink in Virginia Beach is now squarely up to the voters.

The court order calling for a referendum on the local option matter was entered in Virginia Beach Circuit Court last Friday. The referendum was set at the same time as General Election Day, on Nov. 5.

Several other matters will also be settled that day as well, including selection of a new President of the United States, a First District Congressman and a tradition-breaking state $81 million bond issue for education and mental health.

The verified petitions calling for the local option referendum were presented to Judge Paul W. Ackles with 4,000 signatures. Only 3,517 were needed to call the referendum. A total of 10,941 signatures were collected in the city, but Richard Guy, chairman of the committee which conducted the signature campaign told General City Registrar Mrs. Anna Cotton "to stop at 4,000 in verification."

Guy headed a joint Chamber of Commerce-Jaycees committee in Virginia Beach which began collecting signatures door-to-door last May, even before the local option measure became law on July 1, 90 days after the end of the Virginia General Assembly session which passes it.

Guy's committee will not go out of existence until after the referendum, Guy said the members plan an extensive education campaign before November to show voters why the issue should be passed.

He said there is no organized opposition so far in the city, but that funds are available to present the positive side of the issue in an organized campaign in favor is necessary. Guy's committee is working in conjunction with similar groups in other Tidewater cities.

The first test of the new law will come tomorrow when residents of Bath County, home of the famed resort, The Homestead, go to the polls and vote on the issue. Passage is expected, since a majority of the voters are directly or indirectly connected with The Homestead.

While passage is expected in Virginia Beach there is some quiet opposition which Guy feels can be overcome, but he says it is still not a "sure thing" in the city.

The larger restaurants and hotels, however, are readying themselves for a favorable vote, even if the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Board is not.

With the favorable vote, applications for the mixed drink license can be made almost immediately. Then within about 30 to 45 days they should be approved.

The cocktail before dinner could be available for Christmas. That is now entirely up to the voters of Virginia Beach.

Holiday Adds To Council Load

No informal meeting will be held next Monday by City Council because of the Labor Day holiday, but a briefing will be held the following Monday beginning about noon prior to the regular meeting at City Hall at 2 p.m.

The first meeting of the month is the time for zoning applications to be heard and 19 new items plus those deferred from last month will come before Council.

Heading the list will be an application by Herbert Kramer for a new townhouse development off Newtown Road, and a lake for the property. Sharp words were traded a month ago at the meeting by Kramer and a number of council members in controversy over a school site to be settled by the meeting on Sept. 9. Either the site on Kramer's property will be accepted or another site will be announced.

an additional ten units on another floor of the previously approved motel at Atlantic Avenue and 19th Street is also expected to be approved.

James W. Hall, Larry E. Marshall and Herbert L. Kramer's application to build a professional building on Independence Blvd. and Lakeside Road is recommended for approval after being deferred for some time while a study of the area was made by the Planning Dept.

A major item recommended for approval is the high rise 280-unit motel at Rudee Inlet to be built by Acquisition, Inc. and the 1965 Corp. This item has been deferred for some time while financing was being settled for the first major project in the future development of land around Rudee Inlet.

Outing Set for Sept. 25

The date for the Annual Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce Outing has been set for Sept. 25 according to Robert Stanton, outing chairman.

Stanton, who repeats this year as head of the Outing Committee, named members for the outdoor function as E.A. Darden III, Carroll Andrews, Mrs. Laura Lamb, Floyd Waterfield, Jr., D. Murray Malbon and Joe Crosswhite.

Somewhat the same format as last year will prevail for this year's program which will be held again at Aldo Farm. Approximately 350 attended last year. With a vastly increased membership this year's Outing is anticipated to be a record smasher according to Stanton who went on to say that this is the Chamber's first casual get-together since the one-day membership blitz on Nov. 29, 1967.

George N. Badran is seeking a zoning change and use permit to build 96 townhouses at General Booth Blvd. and Croatan Road, Virginia Beach Friends Housing Corp. is asking for a use permit for another 10 apartments west of Birdneck Road on the extension of Carver Avenue.

Two new motels will also be built if approved by the Planning Commission and City Council. A corporation known as 1002, Inc. is asking for a use permit to build a 133-unit motel at 25th Street and Atlantic Avenue. The other is a 60-unit motel near 36th Street and Atlantic Avenue on an application of W.D. Sams, Jr. The larger of the two will be built as a Holiday Inn and will be on property now occupied by the Breakers Hotel.

A City Council requested public hearings will also be heard on applications for rezoning of non-conforming parcels along Virginia Beach Blvd. from the Norfolk line to Atlantic Avenue following a study by the planning department.

Another Council requested hearing will be held on changes of zoning to limited commercial use on property in the Robbins Corner area following another Planning Dept. study.

Also the commission will hear an application of Council to establish Historic and Cultural Conservation Districts to permit a new category of zoning for old buildings with historic value and to encourage conservation and preservation of the old cultural landmarks.

Other important applications due before the commission include one by R.R. DeFord for a change of zoning to multiple family housing on five parcels of land along Newtown Road west of Sullivan Blvd. and a use permit for the excavation of a lake on the property.

John S. Waller, Alton M. Butler and Robert G. Moore are asking for a use permit to build a professional office building at 24th Street and Birdneck Road. The Norfolk Baptist Council is seeking a use permit to build a church on Little Neck Road near King's Grant Road. Lago Mar Realty Development Co., Inc., is seeking additional zoning to general commercial for the Sandbridge development.

Green Run Corp. is asking for a use permit to build and operate a pumping station on Phase 1 of the Planned Unit Development off of Holland Road.

U.C.F. Goal Nears for Divisions

According to Earl Slattum, co-chairman of the Virginia Beach Borough United Communities Fund Drive, the restaurant and motel-hotel divisions are tied with collections toward their goals.

Each have accumulated 82 per cent of their pledged amounts. The drive itself is 61.5 per cent nearer to its full goal of $69,050.

"The restaurants, hotels and motels plan to go over their goals by this weekend," said Slattum.

The hotel-motel co-chairmen are Bill Dekker and Roy Niel. Bill Swerteger is Slattum's co-chairman.

Miss Godwin's breathing has been reported more normal each day with less congestion in her lungs. Her vital signs are considered good.

No long-range prognosis had been made Wednesday and doctors said this was still difficult since results of a number of tests were still inconclusive. There is some possibility of brain damage due to the early lack of oxygen, in such cases according to one doctor. The effects of the severe shock are still not known.

Willis said the hospital switchboard continued to be swamped with calls through Wednesday. He said he had remained at the hospital through long hours of the vigil to work with the Governor's aides in Richmond and with doctors in the release of information.

Among those who called Monday were President Johnson and Vice President Humphrey. Both talked with Godwin.

While no one will say there is cause for optimism, the first 24 hours are usually considered to be the most critical in a lightning accident, and doctors say each day brings more hope of recovery.

Shore Drive and Sandbridge area projects.

Council also formally approved the lease-purchase plan set forth by the City Electoral Board so that ten additional voting machines may be available to meet precinct needs this November. Additional help for Mrs. Anna Cotton, General Registrar, was authorized, and City Manager Roger Scott and the City Planning Commission of the size and location of all the city's precincts.

The additional $495,234 appropriation for the School Board was approved, and it was pointed out that the money would come from state and federal funds not available when the original budget was drawn, not from city taxes.

L. Charles Burlage presented Council with a resolution adopted recently at a meeting of residents of the city interested in the future of tourism in Virginia Beach. The resolution called on Council to appoint an advisory committee to study needs and recommend a course of action. No Council action was taken.

Council advised the Technical Action Panel on procedure in its attempts to get some type of morning and afternoon transportation from the Seata area to such areas as Bay Colony.

An appropriation of $700 was approved for the purchase of uniforms for city jailers.

City Attorney Harry Marshall and Planning Director Patrick Standing were appointed to a committee to meet with owners of the historic Dr. Robert E. Whitehead home in Kempsville concerning its donation to the city for restoration.

In addition a payment of $2,482 was authorized as the city's share toward operation of the Health Information Referral Center in Norfolk because of the lack of federal funds available in the past.

Council was informed that the city dredge had begun work on the Western Branch of the Lynnhaven River, as had long been requested by property owners in the area, on Aug. 21.

The resignation of J. Peter Holland Jr. from the City Planning Commission was accepted with regret, and Roy DeHart was appointed to fill the vacancy. Holland noted that he had been considering resigning for some time, and although recent conflict of interest reports concerning him were not a part of the decision to resign, he felt it was better to resign now rather than cause any question. Holland added that he thinks the commission is too large anyway.

His resignation came only one day before Norfolk City Attorney Leonard H. Davis sharply disagreed with Attorney Gen. Robert Y. Button concerning who is actually covered under the state conflict statute.

Council also appointed Mrs. Alice Hancock to fill a vacancy on the Library Board.

Oct. 28 was set as the date for a public hearing on the rewritten minimum housing code, and it is likely more revisions will be forthcoming.

Earlier objections to right of entry clauses for the purpose of inspection have been revised calling for a warrant to be obtained first. Another clause concerning appeal has also been revised to allow violators all due process before eviction. The new change will deal with a density clause to exempt certain rural and farm property.

In executive session Council instructed Scott to attempt to seek a delay on a sealed bid for the Penn-Central property at Little Creek on which bids were called for by the end of this month. Councilmen felt they did not have enough information to make a bid.

There is reportedly private industry, Navy and city interest in the purchase of the property where the Little Creek ferries used to depart, valued by a railroad spokesman at about $950,000.

Also in executive session, action on a personnel grievance board was delayed because of premature publicity of the names of those selected in a Norfolk newspaper. William J. Vaughan, declined to serve because he said he was not contacted until after he read his name in the paper. The matter was supposed to have been kept in confidence but was released by a Councilman to the newspaper immediately after an executive session. Appointments will be made sometime in the future.

Beach Takes Part In Canada

Mrs. Wilma Davis, Office Manager of the Chamber of Commerce was a guest consultant in the Toronto Telegram Travel Bureau on Aug. 26.

According to Laura Lambe who arranged the guest appearance and supplementing newspaper promotion, there was an advertisement in "THE TORONTO TELEGRAM" announcing "Virginia Beach Week" in the bureau and an invitation to visit Mrs. Davis.

The bureau also featured a window display pointing up "Virginia Beach Week."

Representing Virginia Beach, Mrs. Davis will be manning the Virginia Beach-Norfolk booth in the Tourism Building of the Canadian National Exposition, Albin Malhes, executive vice-president of the Chamber, took the first ten-day shift in the booth, servicing thousands of Canadians with Virginia Beach promotional material and person-to-person information.

While in Toronto, Malhes made calls on Travel Agents and other point of sale contacts for promoting visitation to Virginia Beach.

The Canadian Exposition, the largest annual show of its kind in Canada is expected to have an attendance of approximately three and a half million this year, according to Malhes. Dates for the 1968 Exposition covered Aug. 15 - Sept. 2. Virginia Beach has participated for over 15 years in this mammoth exposition in an effort to attract visitors from this important spring and fall tourist market.

'Nice' Kids in Virginia Beach Smoke Marijuana Too

Two years ago one detective of the Virginia Beach Police Department handled all of the very few matters concerning drugs in the city. It was a part-time function for him, although he warned at the time that the problem was on the increase. Some listened. Most did not.

His vigilance where marijuana was concerned never relaxed, and he was responsible for a couple of arrests that summer that put a serious crimp in the traffic of marijuana.

In fact, it was almost impossible to buy any in Virginia Beach after that. The sources were few at that time, and police officials were not overly concerned with drugs then. It mattered little. There were few users in the first place.

But all that has changed now. The sources are many and varied. Even with the intensified vigilance of the vice squad and other active investigation by policemen, both overt and covert, marijuana is easy to find in Virginia Beach and is inexpensive.

Evenings on "pot" parties, close surveillance of known users and dealers and a number of publicized arrests has failed to slow down the marijuana traffic.

The police admit that it is being brought in from a number of different places. The users admit that it is too. In fact they say the quality of the stuff depends on where it comes from.

The police also admit that almost anyone can bring it in, and that it is difficult to watch every tourist and native as he returns to the city limits of Virginia Beach to see if he has brought in marijuana from out of town.

It is common knowledge, according to returning servicemen, that marijuana is being used widely in Vietnam. Servicemen are bringing it in. But so are civilians.

Instead of the problem being a simple one involving only a few people who can be watched, it is now a widespread one involving many different people from all walks of life and from all classes of society.

There are perhaps three different types of persons on marijuana in Virginia Beach. They are the native and tourist teenagers, from an upstanding middle-class background, the "hippies" and society's "wrong-thinkers" and the pseudo-hippies looking for a thrill. The latter category is made up largely of service personnel who dress and act like hippies on the weekends while making certain they keep their hair closely cropped and their shoes shined for a Monday morning inspection.

Armed forces officials in the area also admit there is a great problem with marijuana among the service personnel. Perhaps the most difficult group to deal with are the "wrong thinkers."

They know the use of marijuana is illegal, but they are convinced the law is wrong and are out to get it changed, through demonstrations, getting arrested and the like.

"It's only a historical accident that liquor is legal and marijuana is not," said one as a legalizing argument.

He is a college student from a middle class family. He has always been a little defiant and has always looked for something different to do.

"So when it was there, I tried it. I was curious about it (marijuana) he said. "It should be legal. It's nice. But then a lot of things in this country are absurd."

He is also active in demonstrations. His ambition is to graduate from college, refuse the draft, go to jail and then become a political activist. He also likes to "turn people on" (start others on marijuana). She comes from a little better background, but she too has also been defiant and claims to have problems getting along with parents. She smokes marijuana and likes to turn others on too. She has no desire to stop.

"It puts me in a dream world I tried it because my friends did, and I liked it." She doesn't want to be arrested or for her parents to find out, since she is a college student and her father is quite well-known and respected.

"My ambition is to get married and have babies someday and live on a hillside and be able to smoke marijuana on Saturday nights when I feel like it," she admitted.

Both of these live in Virginia Beach and smoke marijuana here.

Both began young as did many others, as witnessed by the marijuana scandals in the high schools last winter. The cases evaporated, however, when not enough witnesses could be found.

Nice kids from middle-class and above families smoke marijuana too. Why have they resorted to something that is illegal and could put them in jail for as much as five years? Is it an escape from reality or a slap at another generation? Is it a kick or just something they can do to stay within the crowd? The following answers to "why?" are college and high school students who smoke.

He is an athlete for a large southern university. Why does he smoke "grass" (marijuana)?

"It's much better than alcohol. There isn't any getting sick or passing out with grass. It isn't any rebellion against a generation. The first time I smoked it was just kind of an experiment. I enjoyed it more than drinking, which is a definite teenage factor in Virginia Beach."

He continued, "I don't use it as an escape. I do it because it's fun."

Does grass excite him sexually? "Sex is always in the back of your head. If it's brought up by a girl, then you start thinking about it. If it's not brought up, you don't think about it."

Her father is a high-ranking Naval official.

"Smoking marijuana is not necessarily an escape from reality. It was a new experience that has broadened my perception. It opened up new doors and new things to think about—a totally new train of thought."

His father teaches in the sheet-like rope, which was a copy of Mickey Spillane's "I, The Jury", and had a note tied to it reading "Help I'm Dying."

Marr said, "There was nothing medically wrong within. He's just tired of being in jail."

He added that the man had been confined since March 3 of this year awaiting trial on a charge of attempted burglary.

Marr remains critical of the court systems for lengthy confinements of prisoners at the city jail.

He said, "At the time of the escape there were 18 prisoners confined in the jail who had been here for a combined total of 2,429 days, ranging in time of 65 days for a man from the state Penitentiary on a writ for retrial following conviction of robbery, to 210 days for a man waiting for trial on a charge of burglary."

Marr said, in citing these and other cases, "This shows how long we are keeping prisoners without recreation or exercise which is detrimental to their minds, not knowing what is going to happen to them. The law says every man is entitled to a speedy trial, and I would like to know if this is a speedy trial."

Marr said he has not made any requests for additional personnel at the jail in light of recent developments.

However, he said he requested new screening around the jail the last of May which was done the last week of July, and added "I had been discussing with former City Manager W. Russell Hatchett for years to put my jailers in uniforms, and during Monday's City Council meeting they finally agreed to do it."

As for changing any locks on doors since the theft of a full set of keys to the jail, Marr said, "I don't see any reason to change any locks, but when they (the inspectors) come down they may recommend they be changed."

Marr did indicate some concern over doorways leading into and out of the jail, however, when he said, "It's a bad situation with the way we have four outside doors into the jail, two in front, one on a side hall, and one out back of the kitchen. All of these doors are not visible from the front office. Only the main entrance is visible from there, and one key works three doors leading outside."

Marr also had comments in answer to recent criticism as to whether he is competent at the age of 71 to handle the duties of Virginia Beach City Sergeant by saying, "I am capable of doing the work today I did when I was 40 years old. I'm alert and in top physical health. I have not seen a doctor since I had my gall bladder removed several years ago, and I was back on the job the 11th day after that operation."

garding the movement and/or use of drugs, and this cooperation has been so good that a large majority of recent arrests on drug violations have been through this cooperation."

This same official was also questioned as to whether laws dealing with drug offenses are strong enough?

He answered "I think the present laws are adequate with the exception of those which apply to hallucinogenic drugs, such as 'LSD' and 'STP'. The laws dealing with these drugs should be changed to bring them under stronger penalties for their illegal use."

An investigation which began last February indicated the Virginia Beach public school system was becoming involved in drug trafficking.

The question of whether this could present any problem in the future, brought the reply, "We're aware that we can have a problem in the schools this year, but we don't think we will because we alerted school officials who by being aware of what happened in the past will be prepared. They don't want it again. The parents are also aware of it and they don't want it again. It is possible that drugs could run rampant in the city this year starting with the schools, but they will not because we're in a better position to cope with it this year."

The police official also said, "I think there were more drugs here this summer than when we started the school investigation in February but less than if we had not started in the schools. Drugs are widespread, but they are more prevalent among the liberal set including the 'long haird kids' who are moving away from their parents and living together thereby alienating themselves from our society."

"In the past when dealing with juveniles involved in the drug traffic we saw fit to place a charge of incorrigibility for the welfare of the child involved. We feel we have adequately informed the community of the problem, and the seriousness of the use of drugs, therefore we will cease to use the 'catch-all' charge of incorrigibility and will place specific charges to suit violations of drug laws."

The seriousness with which the Virginia Beach police department face the matter of illegal drug trafficking and use is summed up in the outlook of the official when he said "We're going to take whatever steps are necessary to put an end to it as fast as possible if we experience it again. When I say whatever is necessary, I mean just that, and we'll go as far as possible."

No longer can marijuana be looked upon as something that a few use to get away to a dream world. No longer can it be looked upon as a problem of only the drugs of society. No longer can it be ignored.

If it indeed is to be controlled at all it is up to some parents of these nice kids to help control it. It is up to the complacent citizens of Virginia Beach and other cities to recognize the problem and deal with it. And it is up to the police to continue a crackdown.

That is, unless someday the argument is won, and marijuana is made legal.

This 12-foot stalk of marijuana, very similar to a mimosa tree, was grown in Virginia Beach from seeds planted three months ago. It is illegal to grow such plants.

Drowns in Sand Pit

A Navy man attached to the Oceana Naval Air Station drowned in waters of a sand pit near General Booth Blvd. and S. Birdneck Road Sunday.

Police identified the man as

Paul C. Rogers, 21. According to investigators Rogers, swimming with four companions at the time, vanished beneath waters of the sand pit as the group was attempting to swim across the pit. The body of Rogers was recovered about 30 minutes after he was discovered missing.

Car Robbed

A Norfolk businessman told Virginia Beach police a banking containing $1,465 in cash and checks was stolen from his auto Sunday while it was parked at Croatan Beach. According to Delma Robertson, Jr., of W. 32nd Street, employed by a Church Street fashion shop, the money represented collections he had made over the weekend which he was holding until he was able to deposit them in a bank.

Charge Dismissed

Judge Phillip L. Russo dismissed a felonious shooting charge which had been filed against Alvin Edward Nuckols during a Tuesday hearing Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court. Police investigators said Nuckols, 47, of Recreation Drive, witnessed two juveniles running from the recreation department building on the night of July 16 and fired two warning shots from a .22 caliber rifle. One of the juveniles reportedly was struck in the foot by one shot. Both juveniles have pending court appearances on charges of burglarizing the building.

Remember the Volunteers

The prospects for paid fire departments in Virginia Beach are indeed interesting. In recent meetings several Councilmen have noted that the city will eventually be in the fire department business, and they have begun to talk about a survey of the entire matter.

Obviously the city will take over the fire departments from the volunteers in the future, but it would certainly seem that the longer that can be delayed the better.

No doubt the study will show that the cost to the city and to us, the taxpayers, will be prohibitive, regardless of how many buildings, how much equipment or how much financial aid is contributed annually now by the city.

In addition we doubt seriously whether men could be found anywhere, that could match the quality of our volunteers. These men are well-trained, always ready, and extremely conscientious. Their dedication could never be matched by paid firemen. These volunteers give of themselves as well as of their time.

The study should be made of the entire matter and with a future eye on fully paid departments. But that day may not be as close as some Councilmen seem to think. Although our set-up in this large city may be unique, it is working well. And it would be foolish to do away with a system that is operating so smoothly and economically.

Most of the new talk came about over the purchase of new equipment for the Princess Anne Plaza company which has a tremendous responsibility. It is to the volunteers' credit there that they're fighting for the best protection possible for the city, regardless of cost or feelings of Councilmen.

Public Transportation is Needed

The cab companies notwithstanding, the small buses or jitneys that have permeated our city in the past year have been heralded as a partial answer to a major problem and as a fine way to get around.

Unfortunately our appetite has now been whetted. And the jitneys have not been making money and are in some danger of disappearing.

The city is under a strain trying to appease Trailways, the jitneys, and the cab companies. It is the people, however, that need some appeasement.

At almost every Council meeting another group from another area requests some type of transportation. Isolated traffic studies have been made by civic groups. But this is not enough. We need some answers soon.

It would seem that the Jitney folks, the cab folks and the Trailways folks better get together with city officials and try to work out something for us and something that can be mutually beneficial. This is too large a city not to have a complete public transportation system.

The Longer Season

It's always a little sad to see the official end of the tourist season come with the Labor Day weekend. Mostly it marks the unofficial end of summer and the settling down to a long winter's grind.

But this is not so in Virginia Beach this year. This has been the best summer season on record according to those who should know, the hotel, motel and restaurant operators. And it doesn't seem to be ending.

More and more people are asking for information about the fall and spring months and already this fall's reservations are looking quite good.

This is obvious proof that with organized work of everyone concerned the tourist season here could be extended to as long as nine months. Already hunting and fishing, and convention business is being pushed to supplement the old summer season.

With the advent of liquor by-the-drink here we expect to see more and more quality restaurants and hotels that will remain open all year long. This too will contribute to the growth of the long season for the resort.

The time for real planning lies ahead and the time to carry it out is this winter when things are not quite so hectic. That responsibility lies solely with the businessmen of this city, all areas of it, who must work together with city officials to plan for an unparalleled growth of tourism. We already have a good start.

Investigate Now

City Sgt. Marr says now that the officials in Richmond are familiar with the operation of the Virginia Beach Jail and indicates that there is no rush for them to come here again to do any more investigating. But he has requested their presence, and they have not set a date to come.

Perhaps they do know about our jail, but there are too many questions right now. We suggest that the state officials need to get here post haste to help clear up this mess.

GET ON THE JOGGING TEAM

Virginia's Public Schools

The following special report is reprinted from the NEWS LETTER of the University of Virginia of last month. It deals with the implications of the declining birth rate in Virginia public schools. The article, written by Ralph W. Cherry and Roland A. Bowers does not, however, take into consideration a rapidly growing area like Virginia Beach, where increases are expected through 1985 at least. The article has been edited to meet space requirements.

Recent projections of enrollment in the public schools of the United States indicate that a significant change is about to occur. After a quarter of a century in which new highs were reached year after year, it appears that the tide will soon begin to turn. It is expected that enrollment in the elementary schools will crest in 1969-70 and then decline for a period of several years. At the high school level, the turning point will not be reached until 1977-78.

The same statements can be made concerning enrollment in the public schools of Virginia with one important qualification. They are applicable with respect to enrollment in grades 1 through 12 only. The establishment of kindergartens in public school systems throughout the State will probably more than offset the decline in enrollment which would otherwise occur.

Enrollment in the public schools plays such an important part in State plans for education that a more detailed analysis of the impending changes is warranted. The purpose of this article is to present such an analysis and to suggest some of the implications for educational planning in Virginia.

The principal reason for the anticipated decrease in enrollment is the fact that the birth rate and the number of live births have declined. The total number of resident births in Virginia dropped from 97,284 in 1957 to 84,538 in 1966. Preliminary reports of the Bureau of Vital Records and Health Statistics of the Virginia Department of Health indicate that the number of births declined further in 1967, to 82,767. The downward trend was most pronounced in the period beginning in 1964.

It is impossible to predict with a high degree of confidence the number of births in 1968 and subsequent years. Specialists in the field generally agree, however, that the number will begin to increase by 1969, principally because of the larger number of women who will be in the childbearing ages in the period just ahead. For the purposes of this study, the assumption is that the number of resident births in Virginia will remain at the present level (approximately 83,000) in 1968 and then rise gradually in each of the following years.

To project enrollment in the first grade, it was necessary to determine the relationship of enrollment each year to the number of births six years earlier. The pupils in grade 1 were then carried through 12 grades, using calculated percentages which take into account net migration, promotion rates, holding power of the schools, and other variables.

Two other assumptions have affected the projection of enrollment at other levels. The first is that the holding power of the secondary schools will continue to increase. Secondly, it is assumed that Virginia will continue to grow in population because of immigration. The rate of growth is expected to remain at the level of the past 10 years.

The factors which affect enrollment trends are not likely to change drastically during the next four years. It is fairly safe to assume, therefore, that the projected enrollments in grades 1-12 are reasonably accurate through 1971-72 and that an analysis of the educational needs of Virginia based on these projections will provide data which can be used with confidence in planning.

The same claim cannot be made, however, for the projection of enrollment in the kindergarten stage. Because only a few school systems in Virginia now provide programs for children under six years of age, there are no records on which to base a projection. Although there are many other aspects of educational planning which will be affected by the change in enrollment trends, the focus in the analysis which follows is on the problem of finance. The major part of the expenditures for public schools is the item for salaries of instructional personnel. Hence, special attention is given to this aspect of public school finance.

In the period from 1961 to 1966 the pupil-teacher ratio in Virginia's public schools was reduced from 35.8 to 24.1, a change of 6.6 per cent. To offset a further reduction of approximately 5 per cent by 1970 would require employment of an additional 2,500 instructional personnel, bringing the total to 55,010. On this basis, the number needed in 1971 would be 55,900.

In the 10-year period from 1957-58 to 1966-67, the average salary of all instructional personnel employed in the local school systems of Virginia increased from $3,794 to $6,342, a gain of 67.2 per cent. Reports on adoption of salary scales by local school boards justify the prediction that a comparable increase will be made in 1968-69. It is probably that the upward trend will continue at about the same rate through 1971-72. If this assumption is correct, the average salary of instructional personnel employed in the public schools of Virginia will be approximately $8,160 in 1970-71 and $8,880 in 1971-72.

The accuracy of these salary projections will be determined by three major factors: (1) changes in the purchasing power of the dollar, (2) changes in the level of preparation of instructional personnel, and (3) willingness and ability of the State and local school systems to pay higher salaries to attract and hold highly competent personnel.

It must be expected also that the preparation of teachers will be improved significantly in the years just ahead. Whether State and local authorities, and the people of Virginia, can and will provide funds for the projected increases in salary is the third factor. Only the people can answer the question of willingness, but recent developments suggest that Virginians are aware of the importance of good schools and of the necessity for employing and retaining highly qualified personnel.

Increases in expenditures for schools are substantial, but they represent a much lower percentage of gain than occurred in the preceding six-year period. The total disbursements by county and city school boards in Virginia rose from $321,476,889 in 1961-62 to $574,262,327 in 1966-67, a gain of 78.6 per cent. Even the higher estimate of $907,090,000 for 1971-72 calls for an increase of only 59.7 per cent over 1966-67.

The higher estimate of school expenditures for 1971-72, when enrollment is expected to reach a peak, represents an increase of 59.7 per cent over disbursements in 1966-67. It is assumed that the per capita income of Virginians will rise another 35.5 per cent, or more, by that time. Another assumption is that the population of the State will continue to increase at about the same rate. In addition, it is quite possible that the Federal government will provide a larger share of the funds required. The trend since 1965 has been in that direction and is expected to be even more pronounced when the war in Viet Nam ends.

If these assumptions are valid, the projected increase in expenditures for schools will add very little to the tax burden of a resident of Virginia. The percentage of income required will be increased slightly, if at all, to meet the projected costs in 1971-72.

Total enrollment is expected to decline in 1972-73, and the downward trend should continue through 1981-82. These projections are not considered reliable enough to warrant their use in estimating needs and expenditures, but they do provide a basis for hoping that the demands of the schools will be lower in the decade ahead after 1971-72. If this forecast proves to be an accurate one, Virginia will have an excellent opportunity in this period to concentrate on improvement of the quality of education.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"You know," he said, "There really should be some way for all of our old friends we haven't seen in years to know that all of Virginia Beach isn't on the beachfront. They all seemed to think we stepped out of the back door into the ocean."

"I know what you mean," she said, "I never knew we had so many old friends until the temperature got above 90 everywhere this summer."

Our

"So did the neighbors. I understand somebody called the zoning board to find out if it was legal for us to do it," he said. "I'm sorry we didn't hang out a 'Tourist' shingle now. We could have made money on the summer."

"Have you noticed how they all hedged when they were ready to leave?" she asked. "They all mumbled something about having a good time and their thanks, but everyone seemed to try to discourage us from paying them back with a visit."

"Yeah, even your sister. She said, 'Come to see us any time. We live right at the ocean, but of course it's cold on the beach there all the time,'" he said.

"Well, we weren't planning a visit to California anyway," she pointed out.

"Then how about our friends from Richmond who said, 'Bring the kids when you come up. You can get baby sitters there, and we can go out to dinner.' This, after I fed them for four days," she said.

"I think the topper was the North Carolina folks who said, 'Too bad you can't come to see us, but we just don't have the room,'" he said.

"Next year I think I'm going to make up a list of rules for our guests and post them in their rooms. I've already thought of a few," she said. "Like... Don't leave wet bathing suits on floors or furniture. It mars the finish. Or... Deposit all sand from shoes and clothes here for use in children's sandbox."

"How about... Check out time is noon. Others will be checking in... he wanted to know. Or... Refrigerator is off limits to all those under the age of ten."

"They're not bad," she said. "But I can think of several others like dinner is at six, not anytime you get back from the beach..."

And... The management has to take care of three kids. Please retire at a decent hour."

"Hey, how about me?" he asked. "The management has to work for a living. Go to bed."

The telephone rang and interrupted the conversation. "Well, at least Labor Day is here and the traffic will stop now that the season is over," she said as she went to answer the phone.

She was back in a few minutes with a funny little smile on her face. "That was your family from Washington. They're coming down for a few days now that the rush at the beach is over."

"Get your paints and brushes," he yelled. "We have some signs to make."

Good Lamps Take Plans

It is possible to have a lamp which is both functional and decorative in the home, but the right combination doesn't just happen. It takes thought and planning, said Mrs. Mildred A. Payne, Virginia Tech home economist.

Increasing the size of the shade from 14 to 16 inches, for instance, can mean the difference between proper vision and not seeing comfortably. As little as an inch or two in lamp height can make a tremendous difference in the comfort of seeing.

There are several things which can be done to bring "faulty" lamps up to proper specifications. If, for instance, the bottom of the shade falls much above eye level the lamp should be moved about 10 inches behind the shoulder. If the shade is less than 16 inches in diameter the lamp may need to be placed closer to the person using it or the shade should be replaced with a larger one.

If the shade is not high enough this may be corrected by raising the lamp with a block of wood or by using a higher table. Sometimes "clip-on" shades are used which may place the bulb too high in the shade. This may often be improved by adding a harp which will support a different type of shade and give a better spread of light.

HERE COMES OLGA!

We all have heard of around the world in 80 days. Well this week was all around Virginia Beach.

Wednesday night started the ball rolling with the opening of the new Chanticleer Town House Apartments. Everyone first went through the model apartments. Leaving the model apartments everyone gathered around the pool where cocktails and buffet was served. In the center of the pool were lovely floral arrangements with torches in the center to light the pool. In my travels along the party line strip never have I attended any party that was catered as beautifully as this party was. The food was delicious and everything from fried chicken, shrimp, hors d'oeuvres and desserts. Hats off to Betty Killman who catered this party.

The attendance was great and among some of those seen were: Mr. & Mrs. Jack Harris and their daughter Mrs. Jean Raye Cassida, Mr. & Mrs. Floyd Patrick, Charles Kiley, Mayor Frank Dusch, Mr. & Mrs. Elmer Midgett, Mr. & Mrs. Robert Jordan and their daughter Michele, Mr. & Mrs. Joseph R. Bray, Mr. & Mrs. Robert Jackson, Mr. & Mrs. Hank Armstrong, David Norman, Frank Tarrall, V. Nustbaum, Larry Sannell, Art Christian, Stanley Harrison and Mr. & Mrs. Robert J. Franey. These apartments are under the management of Mr. Franey.

Friday night was a cocktail and buffet given by Mr. & Mrs. Bob White at the factory of "Bob White's Wave riding vehicles". Never would you have believed this was a factory where surf boards are made. I bet the crew of boys that usually make surf boards were kept busy that day cleaning and decorating for the party that night. You really did a good job boys.

Of course this party was the beginning of a long weekend for the East Coast Surfing Championship for both out of town and local people. The younger set had a lot of fun meeting new people from out of town where surfers from everywhere. Of course as you know when these professional surfers come to the East Coast they kinda get wax you might call the VIP treatment and the girls really turn on. I would say we also had a lot of hungry people there also. The food was delicious Swedish meat balls, fried shrimp, hot biscuits, ham, turkey, and hors d'oeuvres of all kinds.

Those attending this party included Miss Carolyn Owens, Miss Joanne Corrieri, Bob Dixon, Miss Janie Saunders, Mr. & Mrs. Les Alford, Pete Smith, Mr. & Mrs. Kenny Smith, Mr. & Mrs. Web Brown, Jr., Chip Cohan, Marjorie Pierce, Mr. & Mrs. Andrew Fine, Morris Fine, Mrs. & Mrs. Paul Hill, Mr. & Mrs. Buddy Riggs, Mr. & Mrs. Bob Addenbrook, Mr. & Mrs. Jerry Blosser, Mr. & Mrs. Harry Snyder, Louis Snyder, Miss Susan Axelrod, Mrs. Betty Howard, Carl Pope and Tom Morey who are the innovators of Slipcheck (original wax replacement instead of waxing the board by hand you spray slipcheck on the nose and tail block of the surf board which gives positive traction) Derek Morton, Sally Palmer and the vivacious Meredith Sembler.

Saturday night at the Bay Harbor club was the shipwreck party. This was also a cocktail and buffet affair. Costumes were the dress for this party and believe me some of them looked as if they had been shipwrecked and lost everything with the exceptions of T. shirts, torn pants and no shoes.

Among the guests attending were: Mr. & Mrs. O. Jennings Cain, Mr. & Mrs. George Thompson, Mr. & Mrs. William H. Husemann, Mr. & Mrs. Walter F. Schewegler, Mr. & Mrs. Fenton Priest, Mr. & Mrs. Roy W. Nagle, Mr. & Mrs. Garland Kight, Mr. & Mrs. Frank Mack, Mr. & Mrs. Phil Terveer, Mr. & Mrs. Ben Britt, Mr. & Mrs. Bill McCoy, Mr. & Mrs. John James, Mr. & Mrs. Ken Lacey, Mrs. Frances Britt, Mr. & Mrs. Art Cole, Dr. & Mrs. Bosley, Mr. & Mrs. Welles Gentile, Mr. & Mrs. Jack Rippel their son Hank and daughter Noel, members of the Great Bridge yacht club attended in a body.

Fun was had at everyone of these parties this week and I enjoyed them all but you can bet that next week there will be only one party I will attend.

HOW DO WE MAKE A FURNITURE STORE
OUTSTANDING FOR YOU?

In this week's column I'd like to tell you about a few of the different things we try to do to make Louis Legum's the outstanding furniture store in this area.

First, our sales personnel are trained and experienced furniture consultants with a thorough background in the decorative arts which enables them to intelligently be of help in solving your furnishing problems.

Second, at Louis Legum's we know customers want honesty, knowledge, and sincerity - and we make sure we live up to those qualities.

Third, we attempt to sell the best possible furniture in a wide selection of price ranges.

Since the furniture and decorating business is so competitive, we continuously explore the many furniture factories and markets to find better values in good quality furnishings for you.

Louis Legum's tries to give a service which is "beyond the call of duty" by continuing this service long after the sale is made.

Every place of business develops what is known as "atmosphere," which is another word for reputation. A good atmosphere is a priceless thing to any firm because it doesn't have a price tag. It can only be earned by fair and satisfactory dealings, by mutual respect and confidence between the businessman and his customers.

And we know that by doing all this, we can serve you well and satisfy you - so that you will want to return to us and recommend others to us.

You'll find a wonderful selection of famous brand name furniture at all three of our convenient locations.

S.P.C.A. Conducts Door to Door Drive

Lee Beasley is so soft-hearted that she paid for the burial of a dog she accidentally hit with her car.

She's just the right person to spearhead the current fund raising and building fund campaign of the Virginia Beach Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Last week an organizational coffee was held at the home of Mrs. Suzanne Kershner for volunteers who will conduct the door-to-door fund campaign in the Thalia area.

The drive is being and will be conducted in various parts of the city to raise funds for the S.P.C.A. shelter and office which is now under construction at the intersection of Oceana Bldv. and General Booth Blvd. Memberships range from $1 for juniors to $2 for associate on up to $250 for life. All contributions will be accepted Mrs. Beasley said.

She also said she is looking for more volunteers. Anyone interested in helping with the drive or in working in the shelter once it is opened is asked to contact her.

Attending the coffee were Mrs. Beverly Goldstone, Mrs. Rose Bissett, Mrs. Lorraine Prytuak, Mrs. Chris Curran, Mrs. Alice Young, Mrs. Betty Fowler, Mrs. Marilyn Davis, Mrs. Jan. Maratea, Mrs. Marilyn Douline, and Mrs. Pauline Couch.

Library Volunteer 'Graduates' after Five Years

Five years ago when Lindsay Shephard applied for a job as a volunteer in the Pembroke Library (remember the old green clapboard house?), Mrs. E.E. Cox, then librarian, hesitated over Lindsay's age—then 13.

"She said she didn't like to take people that young because she couldn't depend on them," commented the tanned blond with the friendly grin.

Now, five years later, the Virginia Beach Public Libraries are losing a faithful friend. Next week Lindsay will leave for Lakeland, Fla. where she will attend Florida Southern University to major in physical education. She admits that one reason she picked the Florida school is because of the "long outdoor season" there.

The Virginia Beach Public Libraries in a parting gesture presented Lindsay with a volume of the "Complete Works of Shakespeare." Lindsay has worked three hours a week at the Windsor Woods Library

Although she likes to read, the "great outdoors" also beckoned on the young Norfolk Academy graduate. She has been one of the two girl life guards at Sandbridge this summer. In addition she has been a member of the Women's League and tournament championship softball team sponsored by Puritan Foods for which she plays center field. She also spent a week this summer participating in the Tidewater Hockey Clinic. "That was so hot," she exclaimed.

Lindsay, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson C. Shephard of Lynnvile Crescent, also worked in her school library. Future plans include teaching physical education.

Of the library work, she says, "I just didn't want to quit. It grows on you."

"She's really been a big help," said Mrs. Doris Finegan, children's librarian. "We depend on volunteers."

Lindsay is busy trying to recruit her 12-year-old sister as a replacement. "I'm trying to get her interested, but I don't know. All she wants to do now is watch television."

Don't Start Crash Program for School

By Carolyn McAllen

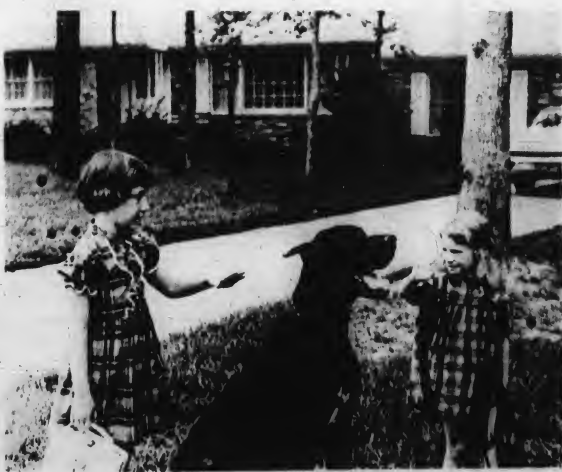

Sept. 6 will be the big day for an estimated 4,000 children in Virginia Beach who will be starting in first grade in public schools. Plus, there will be many in private schools.

If you haven't already enrolled your first grader, you should do so as soon as possible. Elementary schools are now registering students between 9 a.m. and noon daily. A birth certificate is needed.

A few "basics" which first graders should know before beginning school are suggested by elementary supervisor, Bruce McGuire. "But caution parents not to begin a crash program now. The suggestions are just things that will give the child more confidence. His or her teacher will help them. These are not set rules a child must know before starting school."

He should know how to put things away. The children will be expected to pick up and put away toys.

He should know how to listen when others are speaking and how to follow simple, one-step directions.

First graders come in all sizes--and so do their pets. These two will be joined by approximately 4,000 other first graders when schools open next Friday.

He should be able to assume the responsibility for feeding himself. (Surprisingly, McGuire said that some cannot.)

He should know how to turn lights on and off.

He should know how to tie his shoes and how to button and unbutton.

He should know his name, address and telephone number. (My second grader still doesn't know her address or phone number, but she can tell you how to get to her house.) "We hate to admit it, but in spite of our best precautions children do sometimes get on the wrong school bus," said McGuire. "If a child at least knows the general area in which he lives it helps."

McGuire said some first grade teachers have a regular program at the beginning of school to help the children learn name, address, etc.

He also said that some children have a fear of school as a new experience. "Usually it's temporary. A child that has stayed away from home overnight or traveled away from home usually has enough confidence."

Above all, don't use school and teachers as a threat to make a child behave. And don't allow older brothers and sisters to frighten younger ones.

Remember, too, your first grader is just like 4,000 or so others, and it's a new experience for all. Encourage him, but don't expect too much too soon.

Next Week, I Betcha

"Take it easy and relax this weekend--after you get the groceries," said my thoughtful husband. "I'll let you have the rest of the day free if you'll just take Bill down and get him some tennis shoes."

There's nothing like a quiet, restful weekend--so I've been told. I stuck my head out the door to call Bill, only to be confronted by the shrill screams of Susie, the five-year-old, as she howled toward home from across the street. One look at the cut on the back of her head and we started out for the emergency room.

"Has she ever been treated here before?" inquired the admissions clerk. I assured her that Susie had. Five stitches and considerable yelling later we returned home to rest--after I fixed lunch, that is.

Half way through fixing sandwiches the telephone rang. While I was talking, one of the dogs started barking. When I investigated, there was the other dog under the dining room table chomping on two sandwiches and looking rather guilty.

Susie, meanwhile, had concocted four different versions of how she hurt her head. First she said she fell off a bicycle. Next it was a tricycle. Then she said she tripped over the tricycle. Her last story was that the little girl across the street pushed her down. Now she claims she "doesn't remember."

In spite of everything, Bill did get his shoes. But just as we were leaving the store, I noticed he had both hands and his face covered with chewing gum. The harder he tried to get it off, the worse the mess got.

Finally a clerk asked me if she could help me. I told her yes--if she had something that would remove gum from a little boy. Would you believe spray window cleaner? It worked.

My next project was to try to find an inner tube for a bicycle tire. Three stops at three stores, and it started raining, so I returned home with a very unhappy seven-year-old.

Against my better judgement, I decided to weed out the girls' dresses for school and decide who was going to wear what. Well, Susie will be the best-dressed child in kindergarten with 15 dresses, but what can I do with a second grader with only three outfits?

Next weekend I'm going to relax--I betcha.

California, Florida Repeat at Surfing

California and Florida did it again. Virginia Beach surfers, who should have been used to the danger, almost non-existent surf, were shut out in preliminary heats as well as the finals in the 6th Annual East Coast Surfing Championships held in the Resort City last weekend.

Bob Holland, the "father of surfing" in the Virginia Beach area, and his two sons, Bobby and John, were the only three local surfers who walked off with trophies. Holland received an award for first prize in the senior men's division of the contest. He lost the title last year to Les Williams of California. Williams did not compete this year.

Sons Bobby, 17, and John, 16, took three awards. John received the outstanding local award in the junior men's division as well as the Otto Seaman's Memorial Trophy given to the best overall local surfer during the two-day contest. Bobby copied the award for the most outstanding surfer in the junior men's division.

Marc Theriault, 14 and Melissa McCullough, 14 received awards for the outstanding boy and girl surfers in the Resort City. Both received a trophy stating their achievement.

The biggest expectation of the contest failed to materialize. Nat Young, the 41 world's best surfer from Australia failed to make an appearance at the contest because he was due in France to finish taping a surfing flick for MGM.

Joyce Hoffman, from Capistrano Beach, Calif., one-time #1 woman's surfer was unseated from her usual first place by Margo Godfrey, a hot young female surfer from Florida. Linda Benson, who formerly surfed tandem with her board manufacturer Don Hansen, surfed alone this year and took second in the woman's division.

Corky Carroll, who was expected to run away with the men's division title, did exactly that. Carroll outperformed such surfers as California's Mike Doyle, and entrants from Florida such as Bruce Valuzzi, Gary Propper, Mike Tabelling, and brothers Norman and Fred Grosskieser.

John Roland, Jacksonville, Fla., took second place in the men's division, and Mike Purpus of Hermosa Beach, Calif. took third.

Florida took two out of three of the junior men's titles with John Bremink of St. Augustine and Bob Bixton of Indian Harbor taking first and second respectively. Robert Norris, a Long Island surfer, took third place.

It was Florida again in the boy's division, taking first and third places with David Judson of Satellite Beach and Benly McRoberts of Cocoa Beach. The Contestants and spectators joined ranks about 15,000 strong at the surfing area at the Steel Pier last weekend.

The Virginia Beach Rescue Squad set up a trailer for first aid and kept emergency equipment at the ready for the inevitable minor problems. Note the two cabbage palmettos in the background which have been donated to the city.

A middle man was Marc Marsh of North Carolina, who took second.

Is it true that surfing ability is hereditary? Could be, since Hobie Alter, Jr., son of the famous board manufacturer, came out of the Sunday finals with a first in the boy's division. Glen Magill of Atlantic City, N.J. and Wayne Blizzard of Ocean City, N.J. took second and third places in that event.

The surf wasn't there, but the big names were. Dewey Weber and Hobie Alter, along with world famous competition team members from practically every big name manufacturing company, flocked the beach with their small and large boards alike.

According to Webb Brown, an active surfer as well as a member of the Virginia Beach Jaycees, said that "there were a great number of people who were happy with what they saw. We hope to be able to do the same thing for the surfers and the spectators next year."

Football Officials Meet

The Annual Southern Conference football officials clinic was again held Friday and Saturday, August 23-24 at Virginia Beach at the Americana Motel.

The entire staff of 40 officials, including five new clock operators, were in attendance to study, review, observe films and take tests on the 1968 rules.

The two-day work session was highlighted by the presentation of the rule changes for 1968, plus a discussion of the rules in general.

After the general session on Friday night, at which time Commissioner Jordan addressed the group, much of the work will be conducted in workshop sessions in which the officials are grouped in schools by position.

The clinic concluded Saturday night at the Conference Dinner at which time Mary Levy, president of the Southern Conference Football Coaches and Head Football Coach at the College of William and Mary, spoke to the group.

Wedgewood Comedy Recommended

Wedgewood Theatre in Toano has revived an old John Patrick comedy as its current fare, and has produced it in fine style.

The combination of some very funny lines in "Lo and Behold" and the use of Wedgewood's first line of defense in the hilarious character roles has made for a most pleasant and refreshing evening in the theatre.

The premise is, of course, highly unlikely, and that is what makes it so funny. An aged Nobel Prize winner who has been on a strict diet for years because of poor health makes arrangements in his will for his house to be preserved for his privacy in the hereafter, then eats a hearty meal and promptly dies.

His plans to haunt his own house are ruined, however, by three additional spirits who were looking for a home. There is an Indian maiden who did not jump, but was pushed over Lover's Leap, contrary to tradition; a reportedly mad musician who is trying to finish his composition; and a saccharine Southern belle shot on her wedding day by a spurned lover.

Their attempts to solve the problems of the young romantic interests in the play from their other world make for an hilarious story.

In his first directing job, Ron Reid has put together a fine piece of fast-paced action with characters that complement each other nicely.

Leroy McFarland, as the old prize winner, is outstanding in his nastiness. His characterization is thoroughly believable, dead or alive. It is his show from beginning to end, and he would have walked away with it except for Sherri Reid and Claudine Iddings.

Mrs. Reid is magnificently funny as the Indian. Her facial expressions, throaty voice and movements are just right. And Mrs. Iddings, as the Southern Belle, always used to getting her way one way or the other, is hilarious, accent and all.

Bob Hutchinson, as the mad composer does not play the part broadly enough and comes off a poor second to the other spirits.

Larry Claister does a nice workmanlike job as the old writer's doctor, who also provides the love interest in the play. Billie Genlager, who passes herself off as the old man's illegitimate daughter, is quite attractive in the role, but has trouble with her walk and with some voice control. Hers is a straight role and hard to receive attention in with the spirits around.

Roby Brown as one of her ex-boyfriends, does a very nice job as the shady bookie, and Paul Iddings adds a nice bit as the nervous lawyer.

"Lo and Behold" can be highly recommended for the family. HJL

Record Marlin Caught

It was both a good and bad weekend for fishing in the resort city.

First, the good, Kemp Savage Jr., a local businessman, caught three blue marlin, and one, a 351-pounder, broke the State record for marlin by 35 pounds. The previous record was held by Al Noyes and his 286 1/2 pounder which he caught off the Virginia Capes in 1959. Savage caught his billfish about 75 miles southeast of Virginia Beach.

The record blue measured 10 feet, 10 inches and had a 52-inch girth. Tom Bourdon, operator of Long Creek and Lynnhaven Waterway Marinas said, "It was the largest fish I've ever weighed."

The bad was the misfortune of Virginia Beach home-ported sports fishing vessel the Shady Lady. She had to be towed in from the Atlantic by the Coast Guard this weekend.

The Coast Guard radio in Portsmouth received word at 4 p.m. that the vessel, 60 miles off Rudee Inlet, was having engine trouble. Coast Guard tug, Chesapeake reached the Shady Lady at 10 p.m. on Sunday, and had the boat back in port by midnight.

The Shady Lady is owned and operated by John Pierce of Canal Rd. There were reportedly seven persons aboard, including five charter passengers.

Formal Coffee Needs No Excuse

You need no other reason for a formal afternoon coffee party than the chance to enjoy your elegant silver coffee service and accoutrements. Since there will be a number of items on the coffee table, arrange the plates, utensils and food platters with an eye toward both serving convenience and design. Start with a plain white tablecloth as the simple background for a colorful floral centerpiece graced by silver candlesticks, with lighted white candles.

The coffeepot, cream pitcher, sugar bowl and tongs, and a few cups with spoons resting on the saucers, should be placed on a tray at one end of the table to facilitate coffee service. Extra cups should be close at hand on table of side board. You, as hostess, or an appointed guest should perform the pouring ritual.

The brewed coffee-star of the party—should be at its very best. For outstanding flavor, use one Approved Coffee Measure (equal to twelve level measuring tablespoons) of coffee to each six ounces of water per serving. Always begin with a spotlessly clean coffee-maker and cold water straight from the tap.

A neat trick for conserving table space is to stack the dessert plates buffet-style placing a daily linen napkin in between each. Guests may help themselves to the wide variety of goodies. In addition to store-bought petit fours, you will please every palate with easy-to-prepare homemade tidbits such as Strawberry Pinwheel Sandwiches, Cress Cornucopias and Orange Pound Cake slices.

Orange Pound Cake is featured on this formal coffee table.

You may also add a homemade touch to packaged, rolled Pinwheel cookies by filling the ends with Coffee Whipped Cream. For a package of cookies, chill and whip together 1/2 cup heavy whipping cream, 1 teaspoon instant coffee powder and one tablespoon sugar.

ORANGE POUND CAKE

2 Tbl. grated orange peel
1 tsp. orange extract

3 Tbl. packaged cornflake crumbs
1 tsp. sugar

Combine cake mix and grated orange peel, then proceed according to package directions for mixing batter, adding orange extract with milk. Grease loaf pan, 9 x 5 x 3 inches, thoroughly. Combine cornflake crumbs and sugar; use to coat sides and bottom of pan evenly. Spoon batter into pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 1/4 hours or until cake tests done.

Break up cream cheese; beat cream; beat until fluffy. Beat in strawberries. Trim crusts from bread; cut in thin-lengthwise slices. Run rolling pin over each slice. Spread each slice with cheese mixture. Roll up like jelly roll. Wrap each roll in foil; chill thoroughly. Slice crosswise, 1/4-inch thick.

STRAWBERRY PINWHEEL SANDWICHES

2 Tbl. cream
1/4 c. crushed sweetened strawberries
1 loaf very fresh unsliced white bread

Break up cream cheese; beat cream; beat until fluffy. Beat in strawberries. Trim crusts from bread; cut in thin-lengthwise slices. Run rolling pin over each slice. Spread each slice with cheese mixture. Roll up like jelly roll. Wrap each roll in foil; chill thoroughly. Slice crosswise, 1/4-inch thick.

CRESS CORNUCOPIAS

Trim crusts from thin slices of very fresh white bread. Run rolling pin over each slice. Spread with mayonnaise. Fold each slice into cornucopia. Wrap in foil; chill. Just before serving, insert spray of water cress in each cornucopia.

Kids Enjoy Personal Art

"It always seemed somewhat magical to me to make dimensional objects from flat paper," says artist Lois Elbert.

So she settled down one day to produce 37 animals that a child could cut from flat paper, fold, and stand up. The result was a substantial playbook called Scissor Shapes, released by Whitman Publishing Company of Racine, Wis., world's largest producer of children's activity items. Youngsters can color the animals with crayon, reinforce them with light cardboard if they like, stand them on windowsills or put them in cages.

A mobile-making book was another idea she devised, so the child could punch out colored shapes, tie them with yarn, and hang them up to sway in a breeze.

The popular counting book called Animals to See, 1-2-3 came about when she fiddled with torn tissue paper. A colorful zoo took shape to help a child count zebra stripes and leopard spots. As a youngster masters his numbers he also enjoys the art, and may try his own version of it.

Even a toddler who wields unsteady crayons and crumples and tears for new effects is an artist at work, and enjoying it. His books can give him an appreciation of color, texture and shape that will last all his life.

Any youngster can carry the gains into family living. Boys can use design sense in their simple home repairs or major household buying later. Girls can turn a trained hand to entertaining. For example, they can give a party as the artist does. One of her favorite devices is to make a picture out of food. A flower design can be formed on a platter with circles of cheese, some celery, some olives. Or a wreath of fresh fruit can be arranged on a tray.

Personal art is often more satisfying than anything a child can buy.
